SLAUGHTER AT VERDUN GOES ON

NO CANDIDATE TO HAVE ENOUGH G. O. P. BACKERS

Largest Batch of Instructed Delegates Not to Exceed 100.

SENTIMENT FOR T. R.

BY E. O. PHILLIPS.

[Copyright: 1916: By The Tribune Company.]

Uninstructed delegates will be in an easy majority of the Republican convention at Chicago next June. No favorite son will enter the convention with more than 100 delegates bound to him by instructions.

The uninstructed majority will be badly divided and the attempt is to be made openly and fairly to nominate the strongest available candidate, as the situation develops after the delegates shall have reached the Coliseum.

The Democratic national convention will open at St. Louis, one week later, with more than two-thirds of the delegates instructed to renominate President Wilson. The only fight in sight is over the language of the platform and a contingent skirmish as to the vice presidential nomination.

“TRIBUNE” POLL BARES FACTS.

These are the main facts that stand out strongly in a poll of the nation made during the week just ended by The Tribune.

The week marked the actual opening of the preconvention campaign. [illegible] conventions were held in four states—Florida, Nevada, North Carolina, and Kentucky.

In Illinois the time limit for filing primary petitions for the April 11 primary expired Thursday midnight. “Last day” was signalized by the formal refusal of Theodore Roosevelt to permit his name to go to a direct preferential vote, as against Senator Lawrence Y. Sherman, presented as the Illinois “favorite son.” Sherman's will be the only name on the Republican ballot and President Wilson has no opposition on the Democratic list.

Four years ago Col. Roosevelt was carrying Illinois by a tremendous popular plurality in the first presidential preference primary ever held in the state and Woodrow Wilson, then governor of New Jersey, was being swamped in every congressional district in the state, except the Peoria territory.

SENTIMENT FOR ROOSEVELT.

As significant as anything that was disclosed by the poll is the strong determination, west of the Missouri river, to nominate Roosevelt. This seems to apply with equal strength to Republicans in Utah, led by Senator Reed Smoot, and to Republicans in Texas and Arizona, where there is and always has been a rampant, vigorous sentiment for Roosevelt and for nobody else.

From New England comes the first definite suggestion of an earnest hope that Roosevelt can be made the eventual choice—possibly the first choice—of Maine, Massachusetts, Vermont, New Hampshire, and Connecticut, perhaps Rhode Island also.

WEEKS AND M'CALL OUT.

This came first through a hint that Massachusetts instructions will not be demanded for her United States senator, John W. Weeks, who has figured all through the earlier tryouts as the “New England” candidate. Now arrives the news that Senator Weeks will sit in the

4 Bank Bandits Are Found Guilty; Verdict in Hour

Robbers Accused by Mack Face Long Term in Prison.

The theory of entrapment as a defense for the four men who robbed the Washington Park National bank was repudiated this morning by a jury in Judge Barrett's court.

The jury returned a verdict of guilty against Charles and Harry Kramer, Harry Fein, and Alex Brodie, partners of Eddie Mack in the daring crime of Jan. 27.

The case went to the jury at 11:09 o'clock. A verdict was returned at 12:05.

VICTORY FOR HOYNE.

By its verdict the jury threw down decisively the charge that has been clamored from the housetops that the robbery was a police frameup and expressed its faith in the integrity of State's Attorney Hoyne, his secretary, Edward Fleming; Chief of Detectives Hunt, and Lieut. Thomas Sheehan.

The four bandits took the verdict stoically. Mrs. Charlie Kramer, a pretty bride of 17, who sat with a group of women in the rear of the courtroom, fainted.

Eddie Mack, who had waited in an ante-room for the verdict, was taken away by detectives before the jury came in for fear some sympathisers with the robbers might shoot him. There was a great crowd in the Criminal court building.

FIGHT OVER INSTRUCTIONS.

Judge Barrett's instructions were voluminous and covered every angle of the case. They required twenty minutes to read. Assistant State's Attorney Johnston and Alexander H. Heyman, attorney for the defense, had fought over the instructions for half an hour in the judge's chambers.

He said Eddie Mack was an accomplice, and his confession and testimony against his partners in the robbery was to be considered with great caution, but under Illinois statutes it is permissible to convict on the unsupported testimony of an accomplice.

ENTITLED TO WEIGHT.

He said the testimony of the four defendants was entitled to due weight and was to be considered in the same light as other evidence.

If the jury believed the robbery originated with Mack, and not with the defendants, and that it was a police frameup and the bank officials permitted it, a verdict of not guilty must be returned.

The judge explained that to constitute entrapment the bank officials must have consented to the commission of the crime.

Mr. Heyman spoke four hours and a half. He began at 3:30 in the afternoon and closed at 9 at night.

He argued Mack's alibi was a fake. He showed that Mack could not have reached the office of his attorney, Robert E. Cantwell, a half hour after the robbery. He said only a fast automobile could have covered the distance in that time.

SWEETEST STORY EVER TOLD.

Mack's tale that the $1,700 still missing went to pay an “old peterman” for tipping off the bank as easy Mr. Heyman called “the sweetest story ever told—the one delicious bit of humor in the case.”

He painted Mack as the master mind who had inveigled the four boys into the crime. He said Mack was “the craftiest

DRAMA EXPERT SOUGHT BY WIFE

Clandestine letters discovered by Mrs. Karl L. Dietz, whose husband is a dramatic authority and former director of the Little Playhouse of Cincinnati, brought her to Chicago yesterday. She went into close retreat at the Blackstone hotel and conferred only with her attorneys, Holt, Cutting & Sidley.

She refused to discuss the report from Cincinnati that Dietz had pursued a Chicago woman of estimable reputation who formerly was president of the Drama League of Chicago.

Leaves in “Temperamental Mood.”

Dietz left Cincinnati in a “temperamental mood.” Mrs. Dietz is reported to have told friends in Cincinnati that she was going to Chicago to investigate.

One of the members of the Cincinnati Little Theater society, according to Fred L. Brown of the firm of Crandall & Brown, lumber dealers, was Mrs. Elisabeth Crandall, wife of James N. Crandall, his senior partner.

Mr. Brown explained to a reporter for THE TRIBUNE last night that it was his desire to have Mrs. Crandall's position clearly established in the public mind. Mrs. Brown is a sister of Mrs. Crandall.

Mrs. Crandall in Hospital.

“Mrs. Crandall left Cincinnati,” said Mr. Brown, “several weeks ago. She now is in St. Luke's hospital undergoing treatment. She was associated with Dietz in the Little theater in Cincinnati. Mrs. Crandall has always had a keen desire to be of use in the dramatic world and she has been president of the Drama club of Chicago.

“She has not seen Dietz since she left Cincinnati. It is possible that Dietz may have been infatuated with Mrs. Crandall, but to suggest that there has been any basis for rumor is absurd.”

Mrs. Crandall resigned her office as head of the Drama league in August, 1915. She accepted a rôle in the play “Molly and I.”

Letter Gives Clew.

In Cincinnati Mrs. Dietz is said to have found a love letter written on her personal stationary addressed to “Louise Brownell, General Delivery, Chicago.” “Toujours à toi” was the closing French phrase in the letter. Dietz is said to have been accused of duplicity and to have admitted that the name “Brownell” was one of convenience and that his correspondent had been a member of his company.

CREATE $1,500 CLERKSHIP FOR MAYOR BUSSE'S WIDOW.

Aldermen Provide Place for Her in Ettelson's Office After Plea That She Is Without Means.

Mrs. Fred A. Busse, wife of the former mayor, is to be given a $1,500 clerkship in the city law department.

The position was especially created for Mrs. Busse yesterday by the council finance committee. Corporation Counsel Ettelson said he approved the action of the committee and would find work for her to do.

Chairman John A. Richert brought the matter to the attention of his associates. He said a committee of Mrs. Busse's friends had called on him with a plea in behalf of the former mayor's wife. They said she was practically without means of support.

Her husband's estate was wiped out by claims.

MILDRED FARWELL BEGS TO BE FREED

Sends Plea to U. S. Through Greek Messenger—Ordered to Sofia by Bulgaria.

ATHENS, Feb. 29, via Paris, March 4.—John Yusuf, the former Greek consul at Monastir, confirmed reports of the mistreatment of Dr. Henry Forbes, Mrs. Mildred Farwell, and Miss Mitchell by Bulgarian soldiers, when he arrived here this morning carrying a message to Garrett Droppers, United States minister to Greece, from the three interned Americans, in which they begged that the state department make efforts to obtain their release.

According to Yusuf, the three were ordered to go to Sofia from Monastir on Feb. 9.

He reported that Dr. Forbes was ill and that all three had undergone so many hardships that they were most anxious to leave Bulgaria.

HISTORY OF DETENTION.

Dr. Henry Forbes is a resident of Boston and is attached to the American Red Cross. Mrs. Farwell is the wife of Walter Farwell of Chicago and is a war correspondent of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. They were reported to have been attacked by Bulgarian soldiers, who forcibly entered the American Red Cross hospital at Monastir last December.

They were refused permission to leave for Greece shortly after the attack.

BRYAN FIGHTS WILSON PLAN ON SEA PERIL

House Delays Decision After Power of President Weakens.

SENATE AGAIN BOILING

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., March 4.—[Special.]—The efforts of the administration leaders in the house of representatives today to obtain an indorsement of President Wilson's policy in the submarine controversy with Germany failed.

So strong was the sentiment in the house favoring the adoption of a resolution of warning to Americans to shun armed merchantmen, and so great was the opposition to the proposed tabling of the McLemore resolution under a gag rule, as proposed by the administration, that the leaders did not dare to bring the matter before the house today.

After a protracted conference, the Wilson lieutenants decided to postpone action until next Tuesday. In the meantime, the administration will redouble its efforts to round up a majority in support of the president.

BRYAN ENTERS THE FIGHT.

A factor in the fight of the opposition of the administration forces was the arrival of William J. Bryan in Washington this morning. Mr. Bryan opened headquarters at the residence of his son-in-law, R. L. Hargreaves, and made it known that he intended to aid the opposition to President Wilson's demand for the rejection of the warning resolution.

Mr. Bryan immediately established telephone communication with his followers in the house and soon there was a procession of Democratic congressmen arriving at the Hargreaves' residence and another procession departing with their instructions.

Mr. Bryan declined to discuss the situation that has developed from the struggle between the president and his party in congress. He said he came to Washington primarily to address the Economic club tonight.

ALARM TO WILSON FORCES.

The fact that Mr. Bryan was in Washington and in conference with the Democratic insurgents in the house created great excitement among the supporters of the president. They began to blame the former secretary of state for the miscarriage of the plan to put an indorsement of the president through the house today.

One of the members who was called into conference by Mr. Bryan was Representative Bailey of Pennsylvania. Mr. Bailey on his return to the capitol was asked what the former secretary of state thought of the senate's action yesterday.

“Mr. Bryan,” was the reply, “thinks the senate's action was nothing more nor less than a warning to Americans to remain off armed merchantmen. He said he could not see how the president could obtain much comfort out of it.”

“What is Mr. Bryan's attitude toward the house?” Mr. Bailey was asked.

“He thinks the McLemore resolution should be passed if one briefer and more satisfactory is not obtained.”

DEBATE REVIVED IN SENATE.

The debate was revived in the senate today when Senator Lodge sought to refute the statement that Great Britain, in the Russo-Japanese war, warned its subjects not to take passage on belligerent merchantmen.

“There has been a widely circulated statement that Great Britain, during the Russo-Japanese war, issued a warning to its citizens not to take passage on belligerent merchantmen,” Senator Lodge said. “The library reference division of the library of congress examined this thoroughly. They could find nothing about it.”

Senator Lodge presented the following statement by the British embassy: “The embassy inquired of the foreign office whether any such notification had been issued, and received the reply that the statement was untrue.”

The French Report.

PARIS, March 4.—The official communication issued by the war office tonight reads as follows:

“In the region of Verdun a very violent bombardment has been in progress all day on the left bank of the Meuse at hill 304 and Cote de l'Oie. On the right bank the enemy, after an intense bombardment directed on the Haudremont wood east of Cote du Poivre, launched against our positions an attack, which was stopped by our machine gun and infantry fire.

“In the morning the Germans had succeeded in again gaining a foothold in the village of Douaumont, from which we had driven them last evening by a counter attack.

“In the Woevre there has been less activity on the part of the artillery.

“In Artois an attack by the enemy with the object of driving us from the crater which we occupy near the road from Neuville to La Folie was repulsed.

“In the Argonne we cannonaded the German organizations in the region to the southeast of Vauquois and demolished several shelters.

“In Lorraine, in the region of the ponds of Thiaville, after artillery preparation we carried several sections of an enemy trench. About sixty prisoners were taken, including one officer. Two machine guns and one bomb thrower also remain in our hands.”

The German Report.

BERLIN, March 4, via London.—The text of the German official statement of the situation in the western theater of war follows:

“On both sides of the Meuse the French increased the activity of their artillery, and after a great increase in the volume of their fire they attacked the village of Douaumont and our lines adjoining it. They were repulsed partly in close range fighting and sustained heavy loss. We took more than 1,000 unwounded prisoners.

“After the work of clearing the battlefield it has been ascertained that the booty taken since Feb. 22 has been increased from thirty-seven guns and seventy-five machine guns to 115 guns and 161 machine guns.

“Near Obersept, northwest of Pfirt, the enemy attempted in vain to recapture the position taken by us on Feb. 13. His first attack succeeded partly in reaching our trenches, from which, however, he immediately was ejected by a counter attack.

“The enemy after suffering losses consisting of a great number of killed or wounded and eighty prisoners, was compelled to retreat to his former position.

“The fighting to the southeast of Ypres has for the time being come to a standstill. The position held by us prior to Feb. 14 is firmly in our hands and the bastion is in the hands of the enemy.

Italian, Recently Wounded in Eye, So Paints Germans in Reply to Condolence Over Injury.

PARIS, March 4.—Gabriele d'Annunzio, the Italian poet, who was wounded in the eye in a military aeroplane accident recently, in replying to Maurice Barre's telegrams of condolence, says:

“If the light fails or dims today it matters little, as one combatant is worth another and is easily replaced, but the light mustn't dim or die in the world, which is menaced by the vilest barbarians who threaten our creative race. French blood is today the light.”

VILLAGE RUINS A SHAMBLES; DEAD IN PILES

Four Days' Fighting at Douaumont Has No Decisive Result.

GERMANS HOLD TOWN.

BULLETIN.

PARIS, March 4.—The extent of the preparations made for the capture of Verdun are revealed by L'Eclair, which asserts that every day during the first week of the bombardment the Germans expended more than 400,000 projectiles. The total fired now exceeds 3,000,000.

(By Cable to The Chicago Tribune.)

PARIS, March 4.—The fourth day of the battle for possession of the little village of Douaumont, to the northeast of Verdun, has closed with the Germans in possession of the village, but with the French holding the dominating heights to the south.

The village—now the smoking ruins of less than fifty houses—has been the scene of the most terrible fighting of the war.

Eyewitnesses say that nothing at Charleroi, on the Marne, along the Yser, or in the Champagne equaled the sacrifices which the troops of the crown prince already have made for the little group of ruined houses which lies a little northwest of Fort Douaumont.

BODIES PILED ON GROUND.

Parts of the town had been taken and retaken repeatedly and each time that the fortune of battle has changed more dead from the thick masses of German assailants have been added to the piles behind which their surviving comrades sought brief protection.

Each time remnants of regiments already cut to pieces were pushed ahead by other bodies of troops surging on the field of battle until the ground was strewn with bodies.

Unofficial estimates say that the French losses in dead, wounded, and missing will reach 30,000. The Germans, who have been on the offensive against strongly consolidated positions for the greater part of the time, are supposed to have lost many more men.

BATTERIES DOMINATE RUINS.

The determination of the German attacks on the village are explained by the strategic advantage of the height to the south held by the French barring the way to the bastion and fort.

The village is dominated, together with the ravines at the foot of the advanced bastions of the fort, by the French batteries massed on the plateau and heights in the rear, so that the instant the Germans come to the clearing from the woods and ravines they are immediately exposed to a galling fire.

Possession of the plateau of Douaumont is essential to the Germans in view of operations seemingly projected in the region of Vaux, but it is pointed out that even with the line from Pepper hill (Cote du Poivre) to Douaumont in their hands the Germans would again find the French solidly fortified from Froide Terre to Souville and Vaux, where sacrifices equal to those made in the assaults upon Douaumont would be necessary to gain the slightest advantage.

ATTACK BY THE GERMANS.

The battle for the village opened on Wednesday. After an all day bombardment the German line crept forward through the ravines northwest of Douaumont at dusk. At the same time another German column advanced along a little brook leading to the village of Vaux.

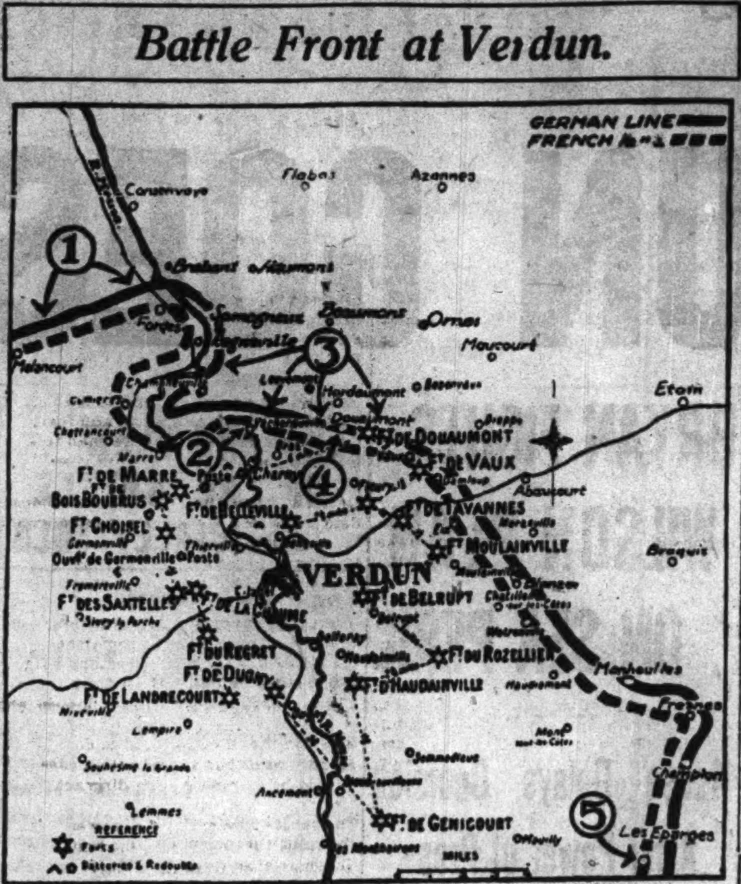
During the night the Germans brought up masses of reserves. At dawn Brandenburg and Pomeranian regiments renewed the assault against Douaumont.

“On the first two occasions,” said a Paris dispatch today, “the assailants with great bravery reached the French barbed wire, but so fierce was the hail from machine guns and rifles that the gray clad legions simply melted away.”

The heaviest German attack was made Thursday afternoon. The Germans

FOUR DAYS' BATTLE MAKES SHAMBLES OF RUINED FRENCH VILLAGE

Battle Front at Verdun.



1. Germans continue to pound French positions west of Meuse with heavy artillery fire.

2. French troops under Gen. Petain reported to have blocked all attempts of Germans to capture Pepper heights to the northwest of Douaumont.

3. Germans after terrific artillery preparation north of Verdun renew infantry attacks on Pepper heights, Fort Douaumont, and to the southeast.

4. French in desperate attempts to retake village of Douaumont fail to dislodge Germans.

5. French forces prevent Germans from occupying crater of mine exploded under lines at Les Eparges.

vanced on the French intrenchments regardless of a terrific fire, broke through the wire entanglements, and penetrated the French front at several places.

German artillery, meanwhile, spread a heavy fire over the French rear, making it impossible to bring up reserves. At nightfall Prussian regiments joined in the action, and, overwhelmed by weight of numbers, the French were forced back upon the village of Douaumont, driven through the streets in hand to hand combats, and finally forced to evacuate the town altogether. A counter attack early yesterday reëstablished the French lines at the outskirts of the village. Last evening the French again drove the Germans out, only to be forced to retire again today.

Hopes of the Germans.

It is the opinion in all quarters that the crown prince has determined to pay the price necessary to capture Douaumont as a movement on Verdun, if possible, drive the French from the right bank of the Meuse, and establish a front along that river if he is unable to pierce the lines and open up the way to Chalons and Paris.

All information thus far received indicates that Verdun has not been shaken. The ultimate cost of the drive is problematical. Paris remains confident that the Germans will find it impossible to achieve eventual success. This feeling has been still more pronounced by the recitals of the wounded and of German soldiers.

French infantry is disputing every inch of the ground, they assert. Whenever the German assault on the French line reached the danger point, the blue clad troops leaped forward with fixed bayonets to the strains of the national battle hymn. Accounts of this fighting from French sources say that on each occasion the soldiers of the republic got the better of their opponents, pushing back the Germans who did not fall under the cold steel.

Paris Remains Confident.

All reports reaching Paris represent the French troops as in the highest spirits, with ample reinforcements in reserve for all eventualities. The defense lines around Verdun thus far have been assured by the troops of the Verdun sector without the intervention of strong reserves, available in case of need.

The apprehension caused in Paris by the ground given up to the Germans in the first battle has disappeared under analysis, the public being reminded that field strategy sometimes requires that forces retire in order to advance, as in the case of the battle of the Marne.

The military critics hold that with a heavy loss of men the original French line might have been maintained, and economy in the strength of the defending force, through sagacious recoil, has counted heavily in the check of the Germans after their twenty-six infantry attacks. Forces so important as those launched against Verdun, it is urged, must have lost spirit when stopped after so many courageous assaults.

The French public looks at the situation in this way, attributes to that fact the early interruption of the second battle and show remarkable confidence in the eventual outcome.

Opening of New Phase.

"Verdun," says the Temps, "marks the beginning of a new and decisive phase of the campaign. It will be a formal and incontestable demonstration that the entente allies' front in France and Belgium cannot be broken, and that the imperial armies are incapable of operating effectively by the lightning-like methods that succeeded with them in Belgium and France before the battle of the Marne and in Russia in 1915.

"It is from that point of view that the battle of Verdun presents so considerable an interest. It furnishes us with precise elements for a sincere appreciate of the wastage of the German forces. It will teach us at just what point is the strength of the enemy, and what effect, energetically sustained, we must still make finally to vanquish him.

"If, after all the fluctuations inseparable from a struggle like that in the region of Verdun, it should finally end in a check that would be impossible for the Germans to conceal, the moral and political consequences in Germany would be profound."

Explains Delay in Fight.

"The period of ten days separating the first and second battles of Verdun—Feb. 21 to March 2—appears to be the normal time for these continuing battles, which seem to have become the type of the present day conflicts," says the military critic of the Journal Des Debats. "In Champagne there was a similar delay between our first great offensive, on Sept. 25, and our second, Oct. 6.

"Evidently it is not with cheerfulness that the various general staffs have adopted this kind of battle, which delays almost indefinitely a decision—thus far, in fact, never obtained. But such is the progress of defensive organization; such is the number and extent of positions taken that it is impossible to carry them in a single stroke. It is virtually admitted in all countries that when the first position is taken it becomes necessary to stop for the purpose of organizing and preparing for a new battle.

"It is difficult to imagine that in this new battle the assailant's chances increase, for, if they are well chosen, the second positions are stronger than the first. The aggressor loses the advantages of surprises, of so much importance in war. His artillery preparation is less methodical, not so well regulated, and less complete. The defender, who knows exactly the point menaced, has had time to concentrate his reserves and take his dispositions.

"In fact, second battles have always been, up to now, not only less furious, but not so extensive or efficacious as the initial attack."

Survivors Tell of Horrors.

Stories of the experiences of soldiers in the earlier battles—experiences now being repeated at Douaumont village—show the fierceness of the struggle.

"On Feb. 21, before my company had taken part in any engagement, it was composed of 200 men and twenty-four officers. Then we went into battle and the organization came out reduced to one officer and seventy men. It is a miracle that any of us escaped. The fire of the French machine guns was so powerful and well directed that entire lines of our men were cut down.

"During a certain stage of the fighting we were effectively flanked by the French. For a moment my company stopped and for us this move was fatal. The French fire poured in and the bodies of the victims covered the ground. Then the entire Twelfth regiment hesitated in turn. The men scattered and made their escape as best they could. Our losses were enormous. As for myself, I had only time to throw myself down on the ground and play the dead man. I was taken prisoner and conducted within the French lines."

Saved at Terrible Cost.

Another German prisoner described his experiences in much the same way. On the 27th of February this man is quoted as saying a German battalion was ordered to occupy the wood to the east of the fort at Douaumont.

"We were successful," this soldier relates, "in making our way into the wood, but it was absolutely impossible to go any farther, for we were at once subjected to a fierce fire from the French machine guns. We were under a well directed cross-fire, the bullets singing all about us. This put a complete stop to our forward movement and compelled us to retreat.

"We saved ourselves, but at what a terrific cost. Two-thirds of our effective force had been struck down, either killed or wounded. Some of my comrades who were escaping endeavored to bring me with them, but my condition was such that I could not be moved. The evening of the 27th French patrols came over the battlefield and I was taken prisoner."

Story of French Captain.

A captain of French chasseurs has given the following account of the attack of the Germans near Douaumont on Thursday:

"German forces along a front of three miles delivered a furious attack with the village of Douaumont as the principal objective. Detachments of two German divisions recently brought into the zone of fighting threw themselves against our organization.

"Our antagonists showed tenacious bravery, but notwithstanding this the French chasseurs once again lived up to their reputation and a veritable slaughter of the enemy was their reward. There were stacks of the enemy dead right up against our barbed wire entanglements. Fierce fighting at close quarters and in some places hand to hand engagements, gave us at some points the advantage. Nevertheless the Germans came back to the charge again with fresh companies of men.

"The second attack began precisely at 6 o'clock, and it was as determined as the first, if not more so. A little after this I was wounded in the head by the explosion of a shell, but I was able to take note of the good work done by my men. Their aggression throughout the day's fighting had been marvelous."

QUIET AT OTHER POINTS.

LONDON, March 4.—With the exception of the small field at Douaumont, near Verdun, there was comparative quiet on the western front today.

The official statement issued at Paris also reported minor fighting in Lorraine, near Thiaville, where the French captured several German trenches and about sixty prisoners. There was artillery action in the Champagne and other points, and the activity on the British front was described in the following official report:

"During last night and early this morning there was sharp grenade fighting in some mine craters near Vermelles. The enemy bombarded our trenches while trying to capture the craters. All the craters remain in our hands."

BERLIN EXPECTS BIG DRIVE.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

BERLIN, March 3, by wireless to Sayville.—With approximately 20,000 French prisoners, close to 100 guns, many of them big caliber, and the possession of Douaumont, one of the important permanent armored forts, as the result of the ten days' attack upon Verdun by the crown prince, the indications tonight (Friday) point strongly to other and greater developments impending in the operations against the powerful fortress.

The curtain which for the last two days has been hung over the scene was slightly lifted today when the official communication reported the taking of the village of Douaumont, together with 1,000 prisoners and six heavy guns.

From other sources it is learned that with the greatest part of his heavy artillery moved up and again in position, the crown prince's army has regained its breath from the first impetuous assault. Vast quantities of ammunition have been brought up for the big guns and the Germans probably will renew the attack with all the fierceness and energy that characterized the first few days.

Even in the two days in which there was no official report it is said that progress was made, the Germans bettering their position by clearing roads for artillery and with infantry working its way forward to various points of vantage for storming when the artillery is again in position to prepare the way.

RUSSIAN ATTACKS REPELLED, BERLIN AND VIENNA REPORT.

Germans Recite Success in Small Action—Austrians Claim Slav Offensive Brought to Standstill.

In a small engagement near Alssewitschi, eight miles northeast of Baranovichi, the Russians were driven out of their positions.

Austrian Official Statement.

VIENNA, March 4.—The following statement on military operations was issued by Austrian army headquarters today:

A Russian attempt to cross the Ikwa river, in the Dubno district, failed. The enemy press has repeatedly reported that the Russian offensive was progressing on the Dniester and near Czernowitz. This is an invention. The Austro-Hungarian front at these points has suffered no modification for the last half year.

Russian Official Statement.

PETROGRAD, March 4.—The following official statement was issued by the war office today:

On the Dvina river, between Dvinsk and Jacobstadt and near Illoukst, our scouts have made successful observations. To the south and on the Galician front there has been the usual exchange of fire.

NEW INDICTMENTS ISSUED AGAINST GERMAN CONSUL.

Federal Grand Jury in San Francisco Charges Conspiracy Against British Ruler Plotted in U. S.

San Francisco, Cal., March 4.—New indictments charging a conspiracy against the king of Great Britain plotted in San Francisco were returned today by the federal grand jury against Franz Dopp, German consul general, and six others. They were substitutes for a similar indictment rendered invalid last night when Judge Maurice T. Dooling in the United States District court sustained demurrers against it.

BIG AVALANCHE BURIES SMALL AUSTRIAN FORCE.

Troops Intrenched on Mountain Side Overwhelmed—Only 100 Rescued, and Most of Them Are Injured.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

ROME, March 4.—Austrians intrenched on the side of a mountain on the Italian front were overwhelmed by an avalanche.

The rescue was delayed for two hours and only a hundred were saved, mostly injured.

Seven farmhouses were buried in snow to a depth of fifty feet.

Kenosha "German-American" Ousted from Canada to Take Matter Up with Government.

Kenosha, Wis., March 4.—[Special.]—International complications are in sight between the United States and Canada, for John Hesse, who is an American citizen first and a "German-American" second, today started for Winnipeg to establish claims against the Canadian government. Hesse, formerly a farmer in Saskatchewan, asserts that the neighbors objected to his German birth and that to get rid of him had him placed in an asylum for the insane. When he was released he was deported to the United States. Then it is said Canadian officials sold his interest in his farm and his personal effects and sent him a check for $32.20. He claims that his equity was worth more than $800.

GERMAN PROOF DUE SOON.

Photographic Copies of Alleged Orders to British Merchantmen Will Reach New York Today.

Washington, D. C., March 4.—The photographic copies of the appendice to the German armed merchantman proclamation, containing alleged secret British admiralty orders to captains of such ships, are due to reach New York tomorrow morning on the Dutch steamer Rotterdam, which left Falmouth, England, on Feb. 26. A cablegram to this effect was received at the state department today from London.

Two Armed French Merchantmen and British Patrol Sunk—Two Others Lost.

BERLIN, March 4, via wireless to Tuckerton, N. J.—Acting under the new submarine order to torpedo armed merchantmen, German submarines on March 1 sank two French steamers, each armed with four cannon, off the port of Havre, the admiralty announced tonight.

The statement supplemented the announcement made today that two French auxiliary cruisers and one English torpedo boat had been sunk by submarines. The French merchantmen, being armed, were classified by the admiralty under the new decree as auxiliary cruisers.

The British patrol boat was sunk off the mouth of the Thames a few hours after the new submarine decree went into effect.

Germany Admits an Error.

In making public the statement regarding submarine operations, the admiralty admitted it was in error in reporting the sinking of the French cruiser Suffren off the Syrian coast on Feb. 9 by a German submarine.

The French warship torpedoed was not the Suffren, but the armored cruiser Amiral Charrier, whose loss was subsequently admitted by the French.

The admiralty also made public without comment the Paris report of the sinking of the auxiliary cruiser Provence while en route to Saloniki carrying troops.

[The British admiralty has not admitted the loss of any English patrol boat off the mouth of the Thames. The Berlin statement locating the submarining in the English channel disposes of a London report that the English patrol boat reported sunk in an earlier Berlin statement was the mine sweeper Primula, torpedoed in the Mediterranean.]

One of First U-Boat Victims.

LONDON, March 4.—The Italian steamer Giava, torpedoed and sunk in the Mediterranean, is believed to have been the first passenger carrying victim of the new Austro-German submarine campaign against armed merchantmen.

The Giava, an old steamer displacing 2,631 tons, was owned by a Naples ship company and sailed from Leghorn, Italy, only a few hours before the new submarine decree went into effect, carrying several passengers. It is no secret that practically all Italian steamers, under orders from the naval authorities, carry armament to resist attacks by submarines.

Passengers and Crews Saved.

Athens dispatches tonight said the passengers and crew were rescued by British ships after twenty-four hours in open boats. Athens reported no Americans were aboard.

In the first four days of the new submarine war, German promises of wholesale torpedoing have not been fulfilled.

The Russian steamer Alexander Wentzel, the Italian sailing vessel Elisa, three small Lowestoft fishing smacks, the British mine sweeper Primula, and the Italian steamer Giava are the only vessels reported sunk since March 1.

The British steamer Tentonian was added to the list of vessels sunk, in dispatches received here tonight. It was stated that all members of its crew were landed.

French Steamer Sunk.

LA ROCHELLE, France, March 2.—The French steamship Lakme of Dunkirk, 3,117 tons gross, which sailed from La Rochelle on Tuesday, was sunk on the same day in the Bay of Biscay at a point six miles northwest of Ile d'Yeu. It is believed to have struck a mine. Six of the twenty-two men of the crew lost their lives.

Gasoline Torch Being Used in Making Repairs Blows Up—One of Victims May Die.

San Diego, Cal., March 4.—One man was probably fatally burned and three others seriously injured today by an explosion of a gasoline torch aboard the United States torpedo boat destroyer Preble as it was lying alongside the municipal pier here.

Coxswain Arthur Grossert was scorched from head to foot and probably will die. The torch was used in repairs aboard the warship. A "flareback" was said to have caused the explosion.

TEACHERS DEFEND WILSON.

Think Joke About President in Play Is in Bad Taste.

The Wilson tango is unpatriotic.

This question was decided yesterday by the Ella Flagg Young club, composed of public school teachers, after it was explained to them that the Chin Chin company was making merry at the expense of the president of the United States.

The Wilson tango is, according to the report made to the teachers, one step forward, two steps back, side step and retire.

Having decided such language was unbecoming at a time of national crisis a resolution was passed to be sent to the Chin Chin company requesting the withdrawal of the offending joke.

BY ROBERT HERRICK.

New York, March 1.—Correspondence.]—The temporary lull in the German attack on Verdun may be nothing more than a delay in bringing up the big guns nearer the main fortress over the miry roads or a new attack shaping from the Woevre—the east flank—but at least it is a breathing space in the slaughter.

I remember well the sunny summer afternoon on a Sunday last August when I was at Fort Douaumont. Leaning against the cement parapet, I looked through the field glasses that the bearded artillery captain handed me and examined the gentle slopes, the broad flat plain beyond, over which in an irregular line the German trenches wandered, following an arc around the hilly plateau of the Verdun northern defenses.

It was inconceivable to me then that human beings should ever attempt to climb that long slope upwards in the face of concentrated artillery fire. And I do not think that it ever entered the minds of the officers, lounging there beside me explaining the points of interest in the broad landscape before us, that hell would break loose some day just at this point on the long defense lines.

Outer Forts Almost Dismantled.

It was a quiet day at the front. A little to the north a French observation balloon was directing an intermittent artillery fire, and nearer at hand an enemy aeroplane had drawn some shots from French guns.

"Do you care to see the guns here?" an officer asked indifferently, with a little shrug of the shoulders. "No; they don't amount to much now."

The fort itself, I judged from the attitude of the officers, was virtually dismantled, as were so many of the ring forts about old Verdun which we had seen on our way there in the motor—empty grassed slopes in some cases, without even a garrison. The position was chiefly valuable, I gathered, as an observation post.

From the parapet the eye could sweep many of those little villages which the Germans carried the other day, dots in the winding trench girdle. Many are now within the German lines. The summer sun was lying on their white, silent houses then, as if nothing ever could come up out of the empty plain to disturb their repose.

Heroism in German Charge.

The Germans in their pompous, boastful reports of the ten days' fighting around Verdun have made much of the destruction done by their big guns, the blowing up of Douaumont, but I should be greatly surprised if the French ever counted on this or any other of the many old works (some of which had been remodeled since 1870) which lie about Verdun hill. They had a most neglected air, with their nicely cut masonry embrasures for small guns, their grassy slopes, the overgrown light railroad that linked them up with each other, and with the central citadel.

I remember standing on one grass covered parapet discussing with a staff officer the immense amount of military material that had been scrapped in all this costly defense work around Verdun.

The tremendous thing, the unexpected thing was the charge of the German host up those slopes on to the ridge of the fort itself! It is still incredible to me how they could have reached Douaumont in face of the awful fire the French must have concentrated from the superior heights.

Proves Men Are Indomitable.

It proves that men can be literally indomitable when there are enough live ones to take the places of the dead, when they are hurled as by a machine, relentlessly, without regard for loss.

I don't believe that those artillery officers ever expected last August that the Germans would try for Verdun just here rather than from the northwest, where through the Argonne forest the German crown prince's army had been pressing for months. Instead of the flank attack they came head on up the blunt front of the French defense, battering their way like a human ram straight at the object.

Already they have shifted the attack toward the east. They may try next from the two sides—the Argonne and the Woevre (for as I write it looks more like a lull than the final passing of a storm). Thus they would bite off the whole of the Verdun defense in one snap of a gigantic jaw. But, if so, why this murderous charge up the slopes in front of Fort Douaumont, which is the hardest way of all, the impossible way if there is a way impossible, for the German machine?

Germans' Courage Marvelous.

The courage, the terrible fatalistic drive of those German regiments that came up the slopes is more marvelous to me than the destructive power of the big guns which the Germans say blew up the fort in four shots. (They always vaunt whatever is mechanical in their military feats.) As to the fragility of these "defenses of Verdun," I am sure that the French had no illusions whatever. I think I wrote in a TRIBUNE article of the instructive panorama of military history, of useless fortifications that could be studied from one of the little forts around Verdun.

But Verdun itself is another matter altogether. It is a natural hill of considerable proportions, one side of which has been converted into an immense fortress dating back for many years.

Already early last June the big guns from the crown prince's positions could smash the houses on the slopes of Verdun. So Gen. Coutensau's staff dug itself in part way down the hill, and there we found them, with maps and typewriters and telegraph, busily working by electric light, like rabbits in the depth of a warren.

Verdun Vast Supply Depot.

One got to their earthen chambers by an outer staircase protected by sandbags from stray shells. Still farther down by a hundred feet or so, level with the ancient ditch around the bottom of the hill, were miles on miles of chambers hollowed out and filled with supplies, ammunition, bakery, water works—all the arrangements for housing an army corps of 40,000 men for weeks and months if necessary.

Apparently the French staff had then no intention of surrendering Verdun fortress even if it were completely invested. And to my lay mind it would seem impossible even for forty-two centimeter guns to shave off hundreds of feet of a solid hill and reach the troops in the rabbit warrens at the bottom. It would take such an enormous mass of metal to raze Verdun hill that even the colossal German imagination could never contemplate trying it!

Just what good an army corps of Frenchmen buried at the base of Verdun would be I can't say, except for the sentimental idea that the great eastern gate of France had not yielded to the foe. Perhaps that is enough reason to make the sacrifice of an army corps worth while.

Verdun Not Vital Defense.

But even the evacuation of Verdun, the loss of the entire salient of the Hautes de Meuse and the Woevre from the Argonne to Saint Mihiel would not really be a decisive defeat to the French; would not even open the way to Paris, as the press comment glibly asserts. The enemy would be hardly any nearer Paris and between them and their goal lie many, many defensive works, as every one knows who has been through that carefully intrenched country.

In their desperate effort after a decision the Germans have punched in the head of the Verdun salient, gained a few miles of battle-torn territory, lost many men and killed many Frenchmen. But thus far—even counting all the Verdun position as theirs—they are not nearer a real decision. And can they afford to swap lives with the allies on even terms? All that is to doubt, as the French say.

Villages Knocked to Pieces.

Meanwhile the pleasant little town of Verdun has probably been knocked pretty much to pieces, including the lovely old cathedral, which presented its flying supports to the Meuse, and also the homely military club across the river, where for several days I enjoyed such excellent hospitality.

Little Cumières, I see, is within the German lines now, along with Beaumont and many little villages I visited. Cumières was two or three miles behind the front then, in the lee of a shell plowed ridge, and was occupied by a regiment which kept the place extraordinarily tidy. They had made it their home for nearly a year, and had excavated some shellproof retreats in the hillside.

The day I was in Cumières the soldiers were doing their washing in a small stream, and at Beaumont the regimental band gave a fine concert. Now all that must be an unrecognizable mass of débris, for "even the topography of the country has been completely changed by the terrific bombardment," one account says.

But it is the memory of the men I met out there on the front beyond Verdun that comes back to me most vividly. Where are they all now?

I never met a pleasanter, more alert and keen minded lot of men than those officers about Verdun. They were serious and serene and full of faith in ultimate victory. And where are all the cheerful, witty soldiers, so confident, whom I passed in every village, in every trench? Many of them, men and officers alike, must have been obliterated when that hell broke loose north of Verdun ten days ago.

Battle May Shape History.

Victory will come, but not for them. They lie literally mingled with the German enemy over the valley of the Meuse and the slopes of the Verdun heights. That is what hurts, not the temporary reverse, but the additional bleeding of brave French blood in the wanton, wasteful slaughter of this greatest of German "drives."

Outside my room the taxis shriek and the city roar goes by, all unmindful that even now, at this moment, the struggle may have recommenced in all its fury—the struggle of the German to break through into France, and so end the war. Another world battle to shape the course of destiny, such as that at Chalons, long centuries ago, may be drawing to its crisis.

SENATORS FRAME AND INTRODUCE ARMY MEASURE

Radically Stronger than That to Be Launched by Hay in the House Tomorrow.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., March 4.—[Special.]—Senator Chamberlain, chairman of the senate military affairs committee, today introduced in the senate the committee's measure for the reorganization of the American army and the formulation of an army policy.

The measure is radically stronger than that completed by the house military committee this week and which will be introduced in the house on Monday by Chairman Hay.

The senate committee proposes to increase the peace strength of the regular army to 178,000 men, an increase of 38,000 over the house committee bill.

Also it proposes the creation of a national guard of 217,000 men immediately under the strictest federal control. The house measure provides for a national guard of approximately 424,000, the full number to be recruited at the end of six years.

The senate measure also proposes the creation of a federal volunteer army, reserves of both the regular army and national guard; and a reserve of engineers, doctors, mechanics, and all other civilian supporters of the fighting corps, as well as an officers' reserve corps with definite obligations to the federal government.

Chamberlain Outlines Bill.

In a statement which he issued concerning the measure Senator Chamberlain said:

"The essential features comprise a sufficient increase of the regular army to enable the mobile force to be organized in divisions and brigades and to provide a sufficient corps of coast artillery to man existing and approved new batteries.

"The new mobile army will comprise sixty-four regiments of infantry organized into seven divisions, twenty-five regiments of cavalry organized into two divisions, and the remaining regiments attached to infantry divisions, twenty-one regiments of field artillery, and seven regiments of engineers.

"This will give proper garrisons to Panama, Hawaii, and the Philippines and provide infantry and two cavalry divisions within the United States where it is intended to train large numbers of men during short enlistments for the reserves, the new enlistment contracts to provide for that feature."

Volunteer in Each District.

In addition to the reorganization of the regular army, said Senator Chamberlain, provision is made for the organization of volunteer forces in each congressional district. More liberal appropriations for the national guard and other features intended to build up that force are included. The volunteer force authorized will be a strictly federal force and will not be under the control of governors in any way.

Provision is made for an officer's reserve corps and for a reserve officers' training corps intended to embrace students at colleges and other institutions of learning where military instruction is a part of the curriculum.

A short enlistment is provided to induce men of the regular army to enter the reserve, and a payment of $24 per annum will be made so as to insure their connection with the war department authorities.

To those enlisted men of the regular army who remain six years with the colors, among whom are found those best qualified for the positions of noncommissioned officers, an opportunity to enter the civil service under the war department is provided. For the younger enlisted men there will be provided an opportunity to enter the United States academy as cadets.

Enlisted men between 18 and 22 years of age may be appointed at the rate of one from each regiment, and the corps of cadets is increased to provide for this, said Senator Chamberlain.

Under the terms of the senate bill the continental army plan evolved by ex-Secretary of War Garrison is to be given a thorough trial without making it the backbone of the second line of defense.

President to Rule Army.

The measure provides that the president shall organize, maintain, and train volunteer forces not exceeding an average of [illegible] enlisted men and officers for each congressional district in the country. If the volunteer army is recruited up to the limit this would give a force in addition to the regular army and national guard of approximately 265,000 men.

Officers and enlisted men in the volunteer army are to be paid during their actual training service at a rate of one-[illegible] the pay of regular army men up to the rank of captain. Members of the national guard are to be given the same pay during the entire year and not just during periods of actual field training.

[illegible] D. Bennet, taken into custody by the immigration authorities and ordered deported, does not want to be sent back to Canada. The government says there are two reasons for this disinclination—Bennett is wanted in Regina on charges of trying to defraud the government, and he was quartermaster sergeant in the Canadian militia, which is attracting some attention from the [illegible].

He claims that although he gained entrance into the United States from Canada [illegible] in October, 1915, he is entitled to remain because he was born in [illegible], Wis., of American parentage. According to Assistant District Attorney [illegible] P. Epstein, Bennet first told the authorities that he was born in [illegible]. FAVOR DRILLS IN HIGH SCHOOLS

Representatives of preparatory schools throughout the central western states placed their stamp of approval yesterday on the proposed plan, advocated by THE TRIBUNE, to institute elementary military training in the high schools of the country. Their views were obtained at the eighth annual convention of the North Central Academic association, held at the Hotel La Salle. The association comprises thirty-one leading secondary schools and military academies in Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Indiana, Ohio, Michigan, Kentucky, Missouri, and Nebraska.

A reporter for THE TRIBUNE interviewed several who attended the afternoon session. In only on instance—a seminary professor who regarded the idea as "a part of preparedness hysteria now sweeping the country"—was opposition expressed.

Advantages Pointed Out.

Following are some of the benefits that would result from placing the plan in operation, in the opinion of the other educators interviewed:

It would tend to develops boys mentally, morally and physically.

In numerous cases a boy who has had military training is better equipped to enter business than a boy who has not.

It would constitute one of the best qualifications for good citizenship.

There would be a decrease in big cities of crime of the "youthful bandit" variety.

Stimulation of a deep interest in all questions arising as to the national defense would result.

Eventually such training would become the best "insurance policy for peace" that the nation could possess.

Urges It as Citizenship Requisite.

That military training should constitute qualification for citizenship was the view of Col. R. P. Davidson, superintendent of the Northwestern Military academy of Lake Geneva.

"I favor the plan advocated by THE TRIBUNE," he said. "There is nothing about military training that can possibly hurt a boy, and everything about it tends to develop the best that is in him—mentally, morally, and physically.

Maj. A. M. Hitch, head of the Kemper Military school of Boonville, Mo., stated that the benefit would be derived if only the manual of arms were taught.

Approved by Richards.

John W. Richards of Lake Forest academy, one of the best known preparatory schools near Chicago, approved the plan.

"To be sure, a boy cannot obtain the discipline he would derive from actual service in the army or at a military school by a training of only an hour or two a day. That requires twenty-four hours a day of military life. In addition to having an hour or two of military instruction daily during the school year, pupils should go into camp during the summer vacation. Such camps should be supported by the government.

"Youthful criminals develop more rapidly during vacation time in big cities than during school. That is because boys often have nothing to do in vacation. Vacation military camps would materially decrease forms of juvenile crime with which Chicago is familiar.

Only One Opposed.

The one expression of opposition to the plan was voiced by Prof. Hubert Phillips of Grand Prairie seminary, Grand Prairie, Ill.

"If I had a bo yin the public schools I would vote 'no' on the proposition," he said. "The primary object back of the plan, as I understand it, is to have a reserve of young men available in case of war. Therefore, the idea is worthless, as more real preparation for war could be made in thirty days than in years of military training in the public schools."

Capt. J. F. Grant of the Culver Military academy of Culver, Ind., opposed the view of Mr. Philips.

"The views of all military men are that the military training of boys is an asset," he declared. "Outside of its value in the making of soldiers, they believe it to be an asset to education generally."

Wants Vacant Camps.

It was the opinion of Maj. Roy F. Farrand, head of St. John's Military academy at Delafield, Wis., that "consummation of the plan advocated by THE TRIBUNE is to be desired if carried on properly after being placed in operation." He favors vacation camps and opposes the idea of drilling boys with broom handles, instead of rifles.

Col. T. W. Winston of Morgan Park academy also vouchsafed the view that military camps during vacation should be included in the plan. He said that military instruction in the public schools should be compulsory and not merely voluntary.

That institution of the plan would be a big step in behalf of preparedness was the expression of Dr. Milo B. Price, principal of the Pillsbury academy of Owatonna, Minn. A similar opinion came from Col. Harry Abells of Morgan Park academy.

Members of the association, before closing the convention with a banquet at night, indorsed the president's stand on national preparedness. Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: President, Col. L. R. Gignilliat, Culver; vice president, Prof. Richards, Lake Forest; secretary, Maj. F. L. Beals, Northwestern Military and Naval academy; treasurer, Prof. Phillips, Grand Prairie seminary, and directors, Prof. Grant, Culver Military academy; Prof. Harris H. Holt, St. John's Military academy, and Prof. Edward W. Marcellis, Evanston academy.

ILLINOIS BABY CROP ON VIEW

State's Mothers to Hear Lectures This Week—Prizes for Children.

Chicago's baby crop will be harvested this week.

The six days beginning tomorrow and ending Saturday have been set aside throughout the state as "baby week," during which lectures will be given by leading physicians to mothers on the proper feeding and care of infants, child welfare exhibits will be shown the public and the prize babies of the city will be measured, weighed, and judged according to the set standards of infant perfection.

The lectures and baby contest will be under the direction of the child welfare committee of the Woman's City club, the Chicago Medical Woman's club, and the Illinois Congress of Mothers. They will be held on the eleventh floor of the Boston store, beginning at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning. The baby welfare exhibit, arranged by the Woman's City club, will be open to the public between the hours of 9 and 5.

Babies Enter for Prizes.

Among the many entries for the baby contest which have been pouring in are Winfield Gordon Rogers of 3939 North Paulina street, 1 year old; Herbert Goodman of 4826 Calumet avenue, 9 months old; Edith Goldberg of 18 South Crawford avenue, 1 year old, and Leonard Ruskin of 2727 East Seventy-sixth place, 9 months old.

Applications for entrance must be in the committee's hands by 5 o'clock on Wednesday, together with the name and age of the baby, and the telephone number of the parents. No child over 4 years of age will be admitted. The judging will take place on Thursday and Friday and the winners will be announced at 2:30 Saturday afternoon by Mrs. F. M. Barker, chairman of the child hygiene committee of the Illinois Congress of Mothers.

NAVY WOULD BE A TOY FOR FOE IF U. S. JOINED WAR?

George von L. Meyer Criticizes Daniels and Says Present Force Is Inefficient.

New York, March 4.—"If war should be declared tomorrow morning, our navy, under Josephus Daniels, would be absolutely impotent to check the invasion of our coast," declared former Secretary of the Navy George Von L. Meyer today.

"Congress is talking war," Meyer continued. "Thanks to Mr. Daniels' incompetence, war tomorrow with any one of four European nations would find the way open to the enemy.

"The public has not yet realized the deplorable condition of our navy. Its confidence has not been fully shaken. But I say to you that demoralization already has attacked the personnel because military efficiency has not been Daniels' goal.

Meyer Indictment of Daniels.

"Let us draw the indictment:

"Our navy has no organization prepared to act on a war footing.

"It has no tested war plan.

"It has no tested mobilization plan.

"It has no general staff.

"It has no national counsel of defense.

"It has a small supply of ammunition, a shortage of enlisted men and officers on practically every fighting ship.

"It has no enlisted reserves.

"We have no fast cruisers with the exception of three that are obsolete.

"We are lacking in armed hydroplanes and the lamentable condition of our submarine flotilla was demonstrated in the fall maneuvers.

"We have fewer torpedo destroyers in commission than in reserve.

"Our battleship fleet numbers fifteen. It was twenty-one when Daniels entered office.

Battleships Lack Speed.

"Five of the Connecticut class of battleships have demonstrated that they cannot exceed a speed of twelve to fifteen knots an hour without danger of breaking their drive shafts.

"Daniels has demoralized and disorganized the organization he found in force when he took office. He has not appreciated the conditions this country has faced since war started.

"The last year and a half, a period of incalculable value, has been absolutely lost through Daniels' failure to grasp the advent of this nation's crisis.

"Many deplorable defects in the navy might have been remedied in that time if Daniels had not been in the wake of public sentiment—an unwilling proselyte to preparedness.

Hobby Is Not Good Navy.

"Instead of upbuilding the efficiency of the navy, his hobby has been rather the pedagogic program of naval officers teaching naval fighters readin' ritin' and 'rithmetic.

"This program has led us away from the preparedness that would mean so much to the country at this moment.

"Many of the conditions I have enumerated might have been remedied or ameliorated during that time.

"Now, what can be done at this, the eleventh hour?

"The remedies lie first with congress.

"Nothing would make a better impression or do more good than the instant authorization of a general staff.

"Add to this the authorization of a national counsel of defense, an increased navy, enlistment of 50,000 men, and the passage of an immediate act to build four battle cruisers at a speed of not less than thirty knots.

"It will do no good to enlarge the congressional naval appropriation without enlarging the personnel. That would only increase taxes on the public, not efficiency or preparedness in the navy.

Vote "No Battleships."

"The first thing the house naval committee did when Daniels took office was to go into caucus and vote 'no battleships.'

"It is a fact that the government hasn't even started to lay the keels of the two battleships authorized by the last congress; and it takes three years to build these fighters.

"Every fighting craft that has been launched since Daniels took office, including the just launched and tested superdreadnaught Pennsylvania, were authorized by the former administration.

"It is a fact that the navy has not one up to date mine for the protection of the harbors on our coast.

"The navy is a great corporation, spending $150,000,000 of the people's money each year. Its finished product is efficiency. The public can judge that efficiency only as a national crisis brings disaster or success.

Efficient Leader Needed.

"What if one of these great new steel combinations announced that it was headed by a man of no experience in the business and that his first act was to disrupt the organization and put the puddlers and huskies to crocheting nightcaps instead of heaving ingots? How many shares of that company's stock would the public buy?

"The analogy and inference I leave to you. I do not think it would be seemly in me to say that Mr. Daniels should be ousted, especially since there are many others to say it in my stead."

RESIDENTS NEAR WARSAW MAY WRITE TO AMERICA.

Representative of Hebrew Society Gains Permission from German Military Governor.

BERLIN, via London, March 4.—It will henceforth be possible for residents of the governmental district of Warsaw to communicate with relatives and friends in America through the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid society, 229 East Broadway, New York City.

Isidore Hershfield of the Hebrew society went to Poland and after negotiating with the military authorities for several weeks gained an order from the military governor of Warsaw permitting residents of the district to write direct to the Hebrew society. The letters may contain only the address, the signature, and the following text: "We are well, but in need of money and aid. Please help us. We send hearty greetings."

Notification of the death of any member of a family may also be incorporated in the text, but nothing else. The Hebrew society will send these letters to their destination, the society paying the postage.

The Warsaw governmental district includes the old Russian governments of Lomza, Plotsk (Plock), Kalisz, part of Siedelce, and part of Piotrkow. This order has been posted on the walls throughout the entire governmental district.

Mr. Hershfield received assurances that where it was impossible to send money from the United States through the usual channels, such as banks, the German military authorities would themselves look after the payment to the individual of the remittances received.

CYCLONE HITS CAPITAL; NO DAMAGE; JUST POEM

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 4.—Yesterday's mixup in the senate impelled Representative "Cyclone" Davis tonight to pen the following little epic:

BY "CYCLONE" DAVIS.
[Representative from Texas.]

In war we find that might makes right.
Right is wrong and wrong is right,
According to the power that wins the fight.

England made a big war zone,
And made the world just let it alone,
England, feeling that she was boss,
Forbid the world her zone to cross.

That all the world must doff to her,
And stand in awe and dread and fear,
And refuse to trade with German folk,
But bow the neck and take her yoke.

Germany turned her "dash hound" loose,
Said sauce for the gander was sauce for the goose.
She made herself a big war zone
And told the world to let it alone.

Then Uncle Sam said that was mean,
'Cause Germany used a submarine.
He refused to accede to Germany's right
And bristled up to make a fight.
Then congress flushed and flopped and flew
And didn't know just what to do.
Some swore that war in such a case
Would be a crime, a rank disgrace.

The senate rose with all its power
To settle the question of the hour,
One man there is always blind,
But a better man is hard to find.

This blind man, T. P. Gore,
Was the man that got the floor.
He opposed a war with all his strength
And in debate he went full length.
Then the senate fussed and fumed,
Its wisest men were coached and groomed.

"The German war zone must be crushed"
And all Gore's clamor must be hushed.
They were war drunk, had lost their mind,
And fell a victim to the blind.
They thought they'd call the blind man's bluff,
But when they did they got enough.

The joke is on—the tale is rich;
The blind led the blind; they went to the ditch
They tabled themselves instead of Gore,
And now they are sick and sore.

All this shows that the wisest men
May be routed now and then.
But all is left in the president's care
And the rank war fiend is up in the air.
And the country moves on as before,
With compliments to Mr. Gore.

AMERICANS TO WAR ZONE.

Twenty-four Cabin Passengers Are Aboard French Liner Rochambeau, Leaving New York.

New York, March 4.—The French line steamship Rochambeau sailed today from this port for Bordeaux with seventy-five cabin passengers, twenty-four of whom are Americans. Among the passengers is Dr. Jane Wells Craven of Pittsburgh, who is in charge of the Pittsburgh field ambulance. Dr. Craven was accompanied by W. W. Clendenin, T. W. Marten, and A. J. Arroon, all of Pittsburgh.

MORGAN HEIRESS URGES WOMEN TO PREACH DEFENSE

Asks Sex to Launch Campaign for Universal Military Service in United States.

St. Louis, Mo., March 4.—Miss Anne Morgan, in an address before a woman's club here today, said the women of the country should begin a campaign of education looking towards universal military service in the United States.

"In the present crisis the woman's part must be idealistic and creative," Miss Morgan said. "Otherwise American women could not pass on to their children the right ideals of honor. For centuries it has been woman's part to love and suffer.

Sees Opportunity for Women.

"Civilization has played the world a sorry trick. We now have false values. For this some people say that women are chiefly responsible. Now, and not too late, the women of America are face to face with a great opportunity. Shall we fail?

"It is to the women to force on the nation a realization that universal military service is the corner stone of the nation's existence. Women demand equality—then they must share an equal part when the demand on them comes in a crisis.

Urges Preparedness Campaign.

"It is in our hands to arouse the entire country. Ours is the educational problem, in which the home is the first field. Immediate action is demanded of the women of America.

"Let us so arouse public opinion on the need of preparedness that nothing can stand against it. The women were called on to give their all when it was too late. Let us see that we are not too late. We shall help to arouse the world to preparedness, not to meet war, but to preserve peace."

TURKS NOT SUING FOR PEACE

Berlin Much Amused Over Anglo-French Reports—Denies German Anti-War Demonstrations.

BERLIN, March 4, via Wireless to Sayville, L. I.—Berlin, the semi-official news agency said today, is much amused over Anglo-French reports that Turkey is about to sue for peace and that hundreds have been killed in peace demonstrations in the German capital, despite German successes at Verdun.

"The distinguished gentleman who writes these stories," said the news agency, "seems to belong to the family of merry persons who try to exhilarate the spectators at a funeral."

SEA WAR TO GO ON NO MATTER WHAT STAND U.S. TAKES

Germany Determined to Pursue Campaign—Life of the Empire Is at Stake.

BY KARL H. VON WIEGAND.

[Copyright: 1916: By Press Publishing Company (New York World).]

BERLIN, via Amsterdam, March 4.—"Whatever action congress or President Wilson may take cannot change the determination of the German government to stand firm on its memorandum in regard to the manner in which armed belligerent ships will be considered and treated as auxiliary warships, nor alter the military necessity compelling Germany to adopt this course against England as a result of its illegal arming of such ships for offensive purposes."

Thus declared a high German government official to me tonight, in discussing the situation in Washington.

Not Defying Washington.

"I am not saying this as defying Washington, with which I have no quarrel and want none," he continued. "If, as some of the dispatches indicate, some of the American people consider the mere question of enforcing the right to travel on belligerent armed ships as affecting American honor, which I cannot admit or see, I will say that for Germany the question of conducting submarine warfare within the lines of the memorandum made necessary by England's attitude and action is even more than a question of national honor.

"It is a question of life or death to our nation. It certainly cannot be claimed that the question in any way affects vital principles or interests of the United States."

Break Up to Wilson.

Asked if a break in relations might mean war between Germany and the United States, this official said:

"The question of breaking off relations, or what that might lead to, is in Washington's hands, not ours. Our submarine war is against England, not against America. We maintain we are within our rights when we consider belligerent armed merchant ships as auxiliary warships, in view of their attacks upon our submarines and the secret orders of the British admiralty, which the British now admit but call it 'attack in defense.'"

The German government, I was told, could not admit the legality of "attack in self-defense," the contention being that the British and coined this phrase, now realizing that the American people might take the German view.

Justified in Its Course.

The British admission that its armed merchant ships had on occasion taken the offensive—that is, had fired on a submarine before it had made any hostile move—but holding that the mere approach of a submarine as a hostile action, is contended by the German government as proving Germany's contention that they are belligerent warships armed for offensive and justifying as legal Germany's action to treat such ships as war craft.

The British contention that the mere approach of a submarine is to be regarded by a merchant ship as a hostile act, if allowed to stand, it is claimed here, would in itself make impossible the very thing Washington wants Germany to do—that is to warn and search the ship first; that if the legitimate purpose of a submarine's approach for the purpose of searching a merchantman is to be regarded as a hostile act, for which such an armed trader may "attack in self-defense," then a submarine expecting such an attack from an armed merchant ship also has the right to "attack in self-defense."

Watch Washington Moves.

Developments in Washington and the conflict between President Wilson and congress over the question of warning Americans is being watched here with keen interest.

Nowhere, however, does one get an impression that there is a likelihood of the government receding from its stand in the memorandum in the event that the president wins.

There is a grim determination in all quarters to carry the matter through. There is considerable surprise that the memorandum delivered to Ambassador Gerard has not yet reached Washington.

In some quarters there is an expression of confidence that the president may modify his views when he receives this memorandum, together with facsimiles of the British admiralty's orders.

MAYORS FAVOR PREPAREDNESS

St. Louis Session Hears Bryan and Ford Rapped; Army of 500,000 Urged.

WANT BIGGEST NAVY.

St. Louis, Mo., March 4.—The two day conference of mayors on national defense closed tonight with a banquet at which the principal speakers were George W. Wickersham, former attorney general of the United States; Mayor William Hale Thompson of Chicago, and Miss Anne Morgan of New York.

Mayor Thompson said:

"Apparently, as a people, we have failed to profit by our own experience. The revolutionary war was won by sheer audacity and a remarkable display of nerve against tremendous odds. The victory was no more due to our ability than to our opponents' assininity.

"Our civil war took an awful toll from both sides, because neither was prepared for that irrepressible conflict. It is a reproach to us that we do not learn from our own history.

May Have to Defend U. S.

"There is not even a remote possibility that the people of this country will ever be called upon to wage a war of aggression on foreign soil, but we may be called upon to defend our own hearths and homes against invasion.

"We may indulge in smug complacency over our alleged neutrality, but we cannot hide the ugly fact that our people are contributing to the horrors of the conflict through the stream of death dealing munitions going from our shores to European battlefields. Legally we are within our rights in taking this business, but it leaves us in a weak position to invoke the Golden Rule if we should be attacked.

"A complication in our situation is the powerful and crafty neighbor that has grown up on our west. Some day, not far distant, demands will be made upon us from that quarter which we must refuse. Shall we be able to defend our position? When that time comes we shall have to fight unless our defense is made impregnable. We invite aggression by our helplessness."

"U. S. Neglecting Defenses."

That the United States is sadly neglecting its defense was the charge by Frederick L. Huidekojer of New York.

Huidekojer said since the war of 1812 the United States has not made any effort to keep its preparedness apace with the growth of the country.

Richard Metcalfe of Nebraska brought down the house when he cried:

"I am a neutral among neutrals; the men who are responsible for the European war should be sunk in the pits of hell.

"But we must be prepared so that we may remain neutral," he continued. "There are two men who are crying pacificism. They are Henry Ford and William J. Bryan. They also advocate that the country does not need armament. They are hybrids and do not know what they are talking about."

Martin Littleton of New York divided the people of the United States into two classes—Americans and traitors.

BRANDEIS CASE NEAR END.

Senate Subcommittee Will Hear Only a Few More Witnesses in the Inquiry.

Washington, D. C., March 4.—[Special.]—The senate committee investigating the fitness of Louis D. Brandeis for appointment to the United States Supreme court practically ended its labors today. With the testimony of William Whitman of Boston and William H. Ingersoll of South Orange, N. J., the direct testimony was concluded. Only the cross examination of Edward McClennen, Mr. Brandeis' law partner, by A. G. Fox, attorney for the Boston protestants, remains to be completed.

It is probable that a considerable time will elapse before the subcommittee completes its report, although it is assumed that the report will be favorable.

TAFT WOULD AID PRESIDENT.

Says Senate Did Right in Giving Its Support to Demands of Mr. Wilson.

Boston, Mass., March 4.—Ex-President Taft would have voted "aye" on the tabling of the Gore resolution. "In a situation of this kind we have got to stand by the president," he said today. "I think the senate voted rightly. It is the way I would have voted myself."

'PEACE!' PLEADS BRYAN, AND HE GETS HIS WISH

Crowd Straggles Away as the Commoner Raps Preparedness at Washington.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., March 4.—[Special.]—Introduced by a chairman of marked pacifist tendencies, preceded by several pacifist speakers, and addressing an audience in which there were many avowed pacifists, William Jenings Bryan, high priest of pacifism, failed dismally tonight in his attempt to inspire pacifism in the Economic club of Washington, gathered 400 strong to hear him. Fully fifty left the hall long before he had completed his remarks.

The tendencies of the meeting, despite the inclusion of pacifists among the speakers, were clearly indicated before Bryan began. James K. Vardaman, senator from Mississippi, was interrupted in his peaceful observations by an occasional inquiry from the diners, and during his recital of a poem mentioning the beauties of peace the audience broke into uncontrolled laughter. This followed Vardaman's declaration that "in spite of jingoes" the navy and army are better prepared than ever before.

Some One Takes Exception.

"You're poorly informed, senator," said some one in the front row.

The Rev. Frank Vrooman, brother of the assistant secretary of agriculture, on the contrary, received more applause than did Bryan. His speech urged preparedness.

"If war comes we will have to fight the war alone," he said, "for many have not known who their friends are.

"The pacifists will argue that we should gamble, stake our lives and our possessions of a hundred million men and women, all we are or ever hope to be, our ideals and institutions on the hazard that Germany will order her policy after the sermon on the mount, and that Japan will shape her policy on the golden rule. I'm not gambling on that. The pacifist says, 'Save your money and take your chances.' I say: 'Safety first.'"

Bryan's speech was based on the text that if the neutrals had suffered it was not by intent but by the accident that befalls any bystander who gets in the way of a street fight. He defied the "jingoes" and declared he spoke for "the common people, who carry the Bible as their philosophy."

He failed to arouse enthusiasm by that. He also said he had enlisted in the Spanish war when others did not, and went on to say that those who make war instead of going to war are at home making good contracts and exacting usurious interest rates. His summary of the way to end the war was to "tender our services, not once or twice, but continually until accepted."

SEES RIOTS IF U. S. GOES TO WAR

GERMANS WILL FIGHT.

New York, March 4.—[Special.]—A gloomy picture of what would happen in the United States, and particularly in New York, in case of a war between this country and Germany is contained in an article published in the English column of this morning's New Yorker Herold.

It is in reply to an editorial which appeared a few days ago in a local morning paper which asserted that "War with Germany would not be a very serious matter to the United States." A copy of the Herold's editorial is to be sent to every member of congress.

"In case of war with Germany," the Herold says, "the Germans in America would keep perfectly quiet and studiously avoid anything that might cause inner strife—but they would certainly fight back if attacked. And in that case the draft riots would look like a Sunday school picnic."

Predicts Mob Riots.

The editorial points out that of the 5,751,000 inhabitants of New York about 800,000 are Germans or of immediate German descent, and continues:

"Would there be enough police to protect them? Would they suffer themselves to be attacked without offering resistance? Is it human nature to expect this? In fact, would New York not see the best imitation of civil war you can imagine?"

Mob violence of the worst possible nature is predicted by the Herold in case that "the Germans torpedo everything coming along and perhaps sink one or two American troop transports or one of the finest warships Uncle Sam has."

SEES FINAL U. S. AID.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

LONDON, March 4.—The Times, in commenting on the senate's vote on the Gore resolution, anticipates that the house of representatives will show greater hostility to President Wilson, but says that it is convinced that if all Americans "are clearly and convincingly shown that the issues are what we know them to be they would give us without hesitation their undivided moral support and perhaps more than their moral support in the struggle which they will then see is a struggle for their highest aims as well as ours."

The Times attacks the British government for not countering the German propaganda in the United States.

REPORT OF RESIGNATION AROUSES THE WHITE HOUSE

Statement Issued by Tumulty Denounces Paper Which Would Print Such a Rumor Now.

Washington, D. C., March 4.—The White House issued the following statement today:

"When Secretary Tumulty's attention was called to the story appearing in certain papers that the president had resigned or was considering resigning, he said:

"'An American newspaper that would publish a story of that kind in a situation like the one which now confronts America dishonors itself.'"

BRYAN FIGHTS WILSON PLAN ON SEA PERIL

House Delays Its Decision on Warning, but President's Forces Weaken.

result of a torpedo attack, they are victims of their own bravado, and the United States should not go to war over them, was the sentiment expressed on the floor by senators today.

Senator Jones had read a newspaper dispatch quoting Mr. Bellows as saying he enjoyed the thrills of eluding submarines.

"Is it possible," Senator Jones said, "that if this boat should be sunk and this man lose his life it would be held that we are justified in maintaining the national honor in the assertion of his rights to enjoy a 'thrill' to embroil the whole American people in this conflict?

"We may find that under international law this man has a right to do what he is doing, but the American people will never stand behind such a proposition as that and try to enforce it at the expense of their peace and their welfare. They will never fight for a 'thrill.'"

Many Pledge Opposition.

The supporters of the president have good reason to fear that a straightaway vote on the merits of the resolution would result in the adoption of a resolution of warning by a large majority in the house. All except fifteen Republicans and a large proportion of the Democrats have signified their intention of voting for the warning resolution if it comes squarely before the house.

In order to avoid this result, which would be a repudiation of the president's policy, the Wilson leaders conceived the plan of tabling the resolution without debate on its merits.

This plan was represented as a means of expressing disapproval of interference with the president's foreign policy at this time. It was believed that a large majority of the house would favor action subject to such interpretation.

Refuse a Gag Rule.

The Republicans refused to assent to the reporting of a gag rule and informed the Democrats that the Republican members of the house would fight any effort to suppress reasonable debate. The Republicans said they have taken the position from the start that the president should be allowed to handle foreign affairs without interference by congress. Democratic insurgents, however, said the Republicans developed a movement to have congress warn Americans to shun armed merchantmen. The Republicans gave no encouragement to this scheme, but held aloof from the Democratic quarrel with the president. Mr. Wilson finally demanded that congress reject the resolution the insurgent Democrats had put forward.

Decide to Delay Decision.

Unable to enlist the support of the Republicans for a gag rule, the Democrats of the rules committee confessed their failure to devise a plan under which the warning resolution could be defeated without opening up protracted debate the result of which might be a signal repudiation of the president.

In this dilemma they adjourned the committee at 4 o'clock in order to take counsel with the White House. The committee will meet again Monday morning to consider a special rule, but under the parliamentary situation it is unlikely that the matter can be brought before the house until Tuesday.

THE DAY IN CONGRESS

'FIRESIDE' LETTERS BACK UP WILSON IN U-BOAT STAND

Reach President by Hundreds—Many Others Urge Him to Warn Americans to Stay at Home.

Washington, D. C., March 4.—President Wilson today was communing with the people "back in the country." Following his statement at the Gridiron club dinner a week ago, that he would rather hear from the home firesides than congressional cloakrooms, there has been a tremendous response. Letters have come in hundreds from every section of the country—from men engaged in every business, and from women and children.

In the pile was one, written with quavering stroke of the hand of an old man. It said: "I am 81 years old and a veteran of the civil war, but I am not too old to take up my gun and fight for the stand you have taken." It was from the south.

There were many telegrams of support from party organizations and others, urging him to warn Americans that their travel on armed ships endangers the peace of the country.

Denver, Colo., March 4.—The actions and policies of President Wilson in enforcing the rights of American citizens and in dealing with the foreign relations of the United States and belligerent nations were "approved and ratified" in resolutions adopted today by the Democratic state central committee.

SKIM SURFACE IN PLOT INQUIRY, LAWYER AVERS

U.S. District Attorney Marshall Excoriates Congressmen—Charges Lack of Faith.

New York, March 4.—[Special.]—After the congressional subcommittee investigating the office of United States Attorney H. Snowden Marshall had adjourned its session here at noon, Chairman C. C. Carlin received a bristling letter from Mr. Marshall in which the latter accused the committee of attempting to ruin him and his office by hearing in public complaints made by persons who had run "afoul of the criminal law."

Mr. Marshall's avowed purpose in writing the letter, which was his first communication with the committee, was to take up the cudgels for Leonard R. Holme, a reporter who had been adjudged in contempt by the committee for refusing to tell where he got the basis for an article written by him and published in his paper. The article in question set forth the supposed opinion of the prosecutor's office regarding the object of the investigation

Comes to Reporter's Aid.

Mr. Marshall not only assumed responsibility for the statements made in the article, but declared that in his interview with Holme he had accused the committee of a lack of good faith in the expedition to this city, which he asserts was undertaken for the purpose of intimidating prosecutors who had the courage to indict congressmen.

Mr. Marshall's letter to him contained these statements:

"You are exploiting charges against me of oppressive conduct toward a member of your honorable body who is charged with a violation of law and of oppressive conduct on my part toward shysters in the blackmailing and bankruptcy business.

"I may be able to lighten your labors by offering to resign if you can indicate anything I ever did that remotely approximates the lawless tyranny of your order of arrest of Mr. Holme.

"It is not necessary for you to place any one under arrest in order to get the answers to the question which you asked Mr. Holme, because I can and will answer it.

What Marshall Told Holme.

"What I told him was about as follows:

"I said that your expedition to this town was not an investigation conducted in good faith, but was a deliberate effort to intimidate any district attorney who had the temerity to present charges against one of your honorable body.

"I pointed out to him that you, contrary to usual practice, had come here and had held public hearings; that among your witnesses you had invited every rogue that you could lay your hands on to come before you and slander me and my assistants under the full privilege of testifying before a congressional committee."

IRISH-AMERICANS CHEER ATTACKS AGAINST BRITAIN

Convention in New York Roars as Orators Express Hope of Allies' Defeat.

New York, March 4.—[Special.]—From Boston to San Francisco and from Tampa in the south to Delegate John Walsh's far northern home town of Nome, Alaska, came men and women of the Irish race in America to assemble in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Astor today.

They came to cheer such sentiments as the hope expressed by the temporary chairman, Supreme Court Justice John W. Goff, that England will be defeated in the present war, or the equally fervent prayer of the permanent chairman, O'Neill Ryan of St. Louis, former judge of the United States Circuit court, that the United States will not wage war against the central powers.

Delegates jumped to meet oratorical utterances before the orator had even got as far as his verb, and the applause every few seconds set the crystal chandeliers far aloft clinking.

Applaud Attacks on England.

There was a roar of applause whenever there came from the platform such words as Justice Goff's—that "we have one supreme interest and that is to see England, the tyrant and oppressor of Ireland and her people, the evil genius of France and of every nation blighted by her alliances, defeated."

"Down with her!'" thundered the deep voices of hat waving men jumping to their feet.

"To——l with England!" screamed a man above the uproar.

Next to the overthrow of England the convention showed its emotion most over the expression of sentiments having to do with Ireland's participation in the present war on the side of the allies. Cries of "No, no, no," came from all over the densely packed hall whenever the matter of Irishmen fighting under the British colors was broached.

See Opportunity for Ireland.

"England's difficulty is Ireland's opportunity" was another sentence that aroused applause. When Justice Goff voiced his belief that American citizens should remember that "the interests of the state must take precedence over those of the individual" — that Americans should stay off the ships of belligerent nations if such sailings might result in trouble for us—the applause rose to a roar.

Irish-American admirers of John Redmond who met at the Waldorf-Astoria a few evenings ago issued a statement to the effect that the convention now in session was not representative of the Irish in America. Be that as it may, almost 2,000 of the 2,300 delegates expected from all sections of the union were on hand.

Form National Organization.

One of the results of today's session was the forming of a new national organization, to be known as "The Friends of Irish Freedom." National conventions will be held twice a year, or oftener, it was announced. Any person of Irish extraction who "sympathizes with the country in its aspirations for independence" is eligible to membership.

The objects of the organization will be "to encourage and assist any movement for the national freedom of Ireland and to aid in the industrial improvement of the country, as well as in the revival of the language, literature, music, and customs of the Gaels."

CANADA RED CROSS HERE PLANS CONCERT IN APRIL.

Organization in Chicago Is Made Permanent, Headed by John Crerar and Martin J. Insull.

The Canadian Red Cross fund committee effected a permanent organization at a meeting held last night at the Auditorium hotel.

The British organizations were represented by ten different societies. John Crerar was elected president; Martin J. Insull, vice president; W. H. Davis of the Bank of Nova Scotia, treasurer; S. J. Duncan Clark, secretary, and W. A. Leighton, manager of the Savoy Drug and Chemical company, chairman of the publicity committee. Other committees also were appointed.

It is planned to hold a concert at the Auditorium about April 28, and it is expected that from the sale of tickets $30,000 will be raised. The Canadian Red Cross society is international in this respect—that it takes care of German and Austrians, as well as the soldiers of the allied armies.

One of the Lake Shore drive residences will be opened, on a date to be announced later, for an auction sale of box tickets for the concert, and this is expected to be one of the society events of the season.

Mrs. Crandall was associated with him in the Little theater in Cincinnati.

FIRM U. S. NOTE ON PETROLITE

Will Demand Apology, Punishment of U-Boat Chief, and Indemnity.

Washington, D. C., March 4.—The United States is preparing to make formal demands upon Austria-Hungary as a result of the attack by an Austrian submarine upon the American tank steamer Petrolite. A note on the subject will be dispatched within the next few days.

It was authoritatively stated tonight that the United States would stand by its original contentions and ask an apology for the attack, punishment of the submarine commander, and reparation for the damage done to the vessel and injuries inflicted on a member of the crew, who was hit by a piece of shell.

Thought Petrolite Enemy Ship.

In reply to the first American communication on the subject Austria informed the state department that its version of the affair was that the submarine commander thought the Petrolite an enemy ship disguised with the American flag; that he fired on the vessel because he thought it was about to ram his ship, and that the commander of the Petrolite voluntarily furnished provisions when asked to do so.

The state department since has secured information from the captain and crew of the Petrolite directly contradictory to the Austrian version.

Contrary to Vienna Version.

They have declared in affidavits that the Petrolite was stopped in the Mediterranean by an Austrian submarine which fired a number of shells at it; that the submarine commander asked for food, which the commander of the Petrolite refused to give him, and that the commander of the submarine then held one of the members of the tanker's crew as a hostage while his men went aboard the ship and took such stores as they desired.

Washington, D. C., March 4.—[Special.]—President Wilson and Mrs. Wilson left Washington tonight on the yacht Mayflower and will not return to Washington until Monday morning. The Mayflower will cruise down the Potomac as far as Cape Henry.

BUILDERS UNABLE TO MEET F-BOAT SPEED REQUIREMENT

Decline to Construct Submarines Under Specifications Demanded by Government.

Washington, D. C., March 4.—American shipbuilders have declined to build the two fleet submarines authorized by congress last year because of a stipulation that the vessels shall have a surface speed of twenty knots.

Secretary Daniels wrote Chairman Padgett of the house naval committee today that he had been unable to obtain satisfactory bids and the only alternative would be to construct the submersibles in navy yards on steam driven designs.

According to expert naval officers, the speed requirements of twenty knots is impossible to attain. The maximum speed of such craft, with the most modern engine equipment, they say, is on an average of less than twenty knots and that cannot be sustained long.

Steam propulsion would be required to give a sustained speed of twenty knots and this is not believed to be fit for submarine use.

Secretary Daniels wants the money reappropriated and submarines similar to those of the coast defense type built. These have proved their usefulness, he says, and the larger craft are still in the experimental stage.

STANDING ARMY OF DOMINICA, 20 STRONG, GREETS COLONEL

New York, March 4.—The standing army of Dominica Island, W. I., twenty strong, turned out in dress parade to greet "King Roosevelt of America," when he visited Roseau, the capital, Feb. 20, according to tourists returning today.

The Negro inhabitants were wildly excited over the visit of the ex-president, and thought they were going to see a king, until otherwise informed, it was said.

They were bitterly disappointed to see that the colonel was not dressed even as brilliantly as the native police chief.

COMPLETE DEAL FOR GREAT LOAN TO THE BRITISH

Morgan and Syndicate Arrange Terms on Which New Credits Will Be Floated.

New York, March 4.—[Special.]—Wall street had a strong intimation today that the negotiations between the officials of the British treasury and J. P. Morgan, representing a syndicate of American bankers for establishing in this country another British credit, had been virtually concluded.

It was said that Mr. Morgan would return to New York probably within two weeks, when the terms of the agreement would be announced. A member of Mr. Morgan's firm admitted that he might be expected home within a fortnight, but declined to otherwise discuss his mission abroad.

Flow of Bonds to Cease.

From other banking sources it is learned, however, that Mr. Morgan has succeeded in stemming the tide of foreign liquidation, and that the heavy flow of American stocks and bonds from Great Britain will cease hereafter.

Mobilization was lagging when Mr. Morgan and Mr. Stettinius, his partner, arrived, and suggested that the mobilized securities be used as collateral for a banking loan, the proceeds of which should go for the purchase of supplies and munitions in this country.

Sure Banks Would Take Loan.

Mr. Morgan is said to have assured the British government that such a loan would be eagerly taken by the American banks and financial institutions, despite the fact that the Anglo-French bond issue has not yet been fully assimilated by the public.

Bankers interviewed in Wall street expressed the opinion that a bank loan of the character now suggested would be taken in practically an unlimited amount. The opinion was expressed that fully $500,000,000 of foreign owned American securities could be taken in this way immediately on loans running from one to three years.

MORE THAN 100 PHYSICIANS SEE I. C. HOSPITAL OPEN.

Model Railroad Institution Costing $360,000 Dedicated—Staff of 40 Doctors to Be Kept.

Dedication and formal opening of the new Central hospital, erected by the Illinois Central railroad at a cost of $360,000 and the largest and most completely equipped railroad hospital in the United States, took place last night. More than 100 physicians of the city attended.

Speakers were Dr. Joseph C. Bloodgood of Johns Hopkins university and Dr. W. A. Evans, health editor of THE TRIBUNE. The former spoke on "The Relation of the Medical Profession to Industrial Development in America," pointing out the advances that have been made in "first aid" surgery as the result of the European war. Dr. Evans chose for his subject, "Social Medicine," emphasizing the early recognition and treatment of abnormal physical conditions. He said that the work to be carried on by the hospital should not only be curative, but in large measure should be preventive.

Dr. G. G. Dowdall, chief surgeon of the railroad, is to be chief of staff of the hospital. He will direct a force of some forty physicians. A feature of the institution's work in curing infectious diseases will be experiments in treatment by sunlight, which has met with success in Switzerland.

PROTEST ALLIES' MILK BLOCKADE

Meeting Tonight Will Register Demands on Congress.

PRESIDENT APPROVES.

All Chicagoans who are "pro-babies" are invited to attend a massmeeting in the North Side Turner hall this evening to encourage and advance the movement fostered by the National American Red Cross for carrying aid to the babies of war stricken Europe.

Babies are dying by the hundreds daily in Poland, Austria, and Serbia, it is reported, from lack of proper nourishment. Milk in these countries is said now to be almost an unknown article. The real conditions have not been given proper publicity, it is said, because of the strict censorship forbidding the residents to discuss these matters in their letters.

President Approves.

The movement to send large quantities of milk in powdered form to these countries has received the sanction of President Wilson. A bill has been introduced to the same end in Congress, but has not passed.

Judge Ben B. Lindsey, who recently returned from a tour of investigation abroad, will be one of the speakers at the meeting tonight. Another speaker will be Dr. E. von Mach of Harvard university, executive chairman of the citizens' committee for food shipments. According to Dr. von Mach there are towns of 20,000 in Austria in which there are no more children under 3 years of age.

"Germany was not a great dairy country," said Dr. von Mach. "The Dutch and Swiss supplies have been cut off by agreements which these countries have been obliged to make with the allies and the exports from Sweden and Denmark have been greatly curtailed."

Polish Situation Acute.

Conditions in Poland were described to the members of the Irish Fellowship club at a luncheon in the Hotel La Salle yesterday by N. L. Piotrowski, who recently returned from a European tour.

"The children in Poland have all died except a few in the large cities," he said. "They died of hunger, disease, and exposure. Some of them were seen chewing the flesh of their own hands before they died. There was no milk, no butter and no eggs and the price of meat is prohibitive. Flour and bread are given out in small measures even to the rich.

BRIG. GEN. W. SOOY SMITH DEAD AT HIS ORCHARD HOME.

Brig. Gen. William Sooy Smith, who fought under Buell at Shiloh and under Grant at Vicksburg, died yesterday at the age of 85 years at his home in Medford, Ore.

For many years both before and after the civil war Gen. Smith resided in Chicago, performing notable engineering work. For the last seven years he had lived on his Oregon orchard. His death followed a short illness of pneumonia.

Gen. Smith was born in Tarlton, Pickaway county, O., on July 22, 1830. He worked his way through Ohio university, graduating in 1849 and going directly to West Point.

He was graduated in 1853, but later resigned to practice civil engineering.

When war broke out he volunteered in Ohio and rose to the rank of brigadier general.

Gen. Smith is survived by his widow, Mrs. Josephine Hartwell Smith, whom he married in 1884, and two sons, Charles Sooy Smith of New York and Gerald Sooy Smith of Medford, Ore. The funeral will be held next Saturday at St. Paul's Episcopal church in Riverside.

WOMAN SLAYS PRIEST AT ALTAR; CHARGES WRONG

Slayer Says Father Jajeski of St. Paul, Minn., Was Parent of One of Children.

St. Paul, Minn., March 4.—[Special.]—The Rev. Henry Jajeski, pastor of St. Casimir's Polish Catholic church, was shot and instantly killed tonight by a woman, said to be Amicla Dudek of Minneapolis.

Father Jajeski had emerged from a small confession room at the front of the church building and was seated on a chair at the right of the altar when the woman entered the building.

A boy who had been to confession passed her as she entered. A woman and a girl were the only other occupants of the building.

The woman approached the rail of the altar, ten feet from Father Jajeski. She paused a moment in prayer. Suddenly she drew a revolver from her muff and started shooting at the priest.

First Shots Prove Fatal.

One of the first shots penetrated Father Jajeski's head above the left eye. He never moved from his chair. Five shots were fired, one other taking effect.

Noise of the shots was heard outside and passersby rushed into the building. The woman sank to her knees before the altar, where she remained until the police arrived.

"Yes, I shot him," she said as the police placed her under arrest on the charge of murder. She repeated it over and over.

As she was escorted to the patrol threats of violence were made by an angry and rapidly increasing crowd. The police took her to the police station, where she was said to have made a complete confession to County Attorney O'Brien of the cause leading up to the shooting.

Charged Priest with Parenthood.

That the woman had charged Father Jajeski with being the father of her child was related after the shooting by John A. Jajeski, a nephew of the murdered man and auditor of the Mercantile State bank of Minneapolis.

"Four years ago in Minneapolis the matter was threshed out in court," he said. "The woman lost the case. Two years ago she threw pepper in his eyes. Since then she repeatedly had threatened to kill him.

"On one occasion she came to his residence with a baby in her arms. She was denied admission and the police were called. Before they arrived she had gone. What she planned to do then we do not know. My uncle believed she was demented.

Crowds Flock to Church.

Before Coroner Jones arrived at the church, hundreds of members of the parish and residents of the neighborhood flocked in the building. The police kept them moving. When the coroner arrived the doors were locked and men and women collected in groups on the street.

Father Jajeski played an important part in the founding of St. Casimir's parish twenty-four years ago. After leaving the parish, he served twenty years as pastor of the Church of the Holy Cross of Minneapolis. Two years ago he was transferred back to St. Casimir and has served here since. Weeping men and women testified to the high regard he was held by his St. Paul parishioners.

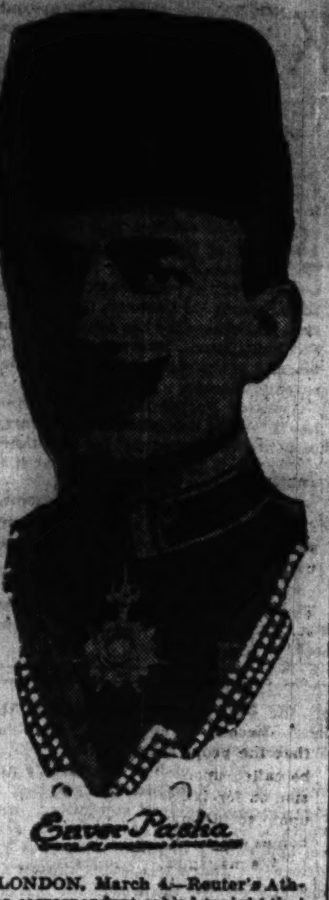
Slayer Wife of Laborer.

According to Minneapolis police, Mrs. Agnes Dudeke, whose husband is a laborer, left her home at 33 Twenty-second avenue, north east, Minneapolis, with $4.75 in her possession. With this she purchased a thirty-two caliber revolver and a box of cartridges. This left her with only sufficient car fare to reach St. Paul.

She took a 5 o'clock car for St. Paul. She reached the church nearly two hours later, evidently having waited some place for a favorable moment to approach the priest.

Mrs. Dudeke is said to have ten children. Police Surgeon Dohm, after an investigation, said in his opinion she is insane.

Turkish Dictator Assassin's Target.



LONDON, March 4.—Reuter's Athens correspondent cabled tonight that reports had reached the Greek capital from Constantinople of an attempt on the life of Enver Pasha, Turkish dictator. Enver was wounded by the assassin, it was stated.

Enver Pasha is only 33 years old, but has assumed a leadership in Turkish affairs unequaled by any other Turk in recent years.

He was one of the leaders of the Young Turk movement several years ago, commanded the Turkish force that recaptured Adrianople from the Bulgarians in the last Balkan war, and led a Turkish army in the Italian war in Tripoli.

ROUMANIA WOULD FIGHT HUNGARY AT DROP OF HAT

Not So Keen to Lock Horns with Germany—Army Is Fit If War Should Come.

BUCHAREST, via Berlin March 3, via London March 4.—"We would fight Germany with regret, Austria with indifference, and Hungary with the keenest satisfaction," said M. Filipescu, leader of the Roumanian conservatives and former minister of war, to the correspondent of the Associated Press today.

He expressed the opinion that there is no ill feeling against Germany and that Austria is disliked solely because it is linked with the Hungarians, who are hated on account of the alleged ill treatment of the Roumanians living in Transylvania and Banat.

What Makes for Neutrality.

According to the Roumanian press there are several factors which make for the continued neutrality of the country. These are, first, that the Teutonic sympathizers are better organized than the followers of the entente, and, secondly, the long duration of the war has created public apathy.

Another deterrent factor has been expense of mobilization and the later demobilization of nearly the entire army. The cost of living also has increased, some articles having reached a price higher than in the central power countries.

Morale of Army Good.

The correspondent observed improvement in the morale and appearance of the Roumanian army. The gaudy uniforms of the officers have been replaced by uniforms of a field gray color. The privates also are well clothed and present a good appearance.

Public opinion concerning the quality of the army is divergent. In some circles it is claimed the army contains excellent material which might develop into a fighting machine of great merit. The soldiers appear to be capable of great endurance. The officers, except those of the artillery who were trained under German influence, are friendly to the entente allies.

Frontier Well Fortified.

The work of fortifying the frontier has been pushed vigorously for several months.

No important point has been neglected. Much work has been done at Predeal and Palanka, where an invasion of Roumania might be attempted or the Roumanian army might try to invade Hungary.

THREAT TO BEGIN R. I. FORECLOSURE MADE BY LAWYER

Attorney for Peabody Bondholders' Committee Argues Against Receiver's Paper.

PRAISES DICKINSON'S WORK

Management of the affairs of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway company by Judge Carpenter and Receiver Jacob M. Dickinson was praised in Judge Carpenter's court yesterday by Redmond Stephens, attorney for the Bankers' Trust company of New York, which is trustee for the $20,000,000 debenture bond issue. Mr. Stephens declared that his remarks Friday regarding the affairs of the railroad had been misunderstood as censuring Mr. Dickinson. On the other hand, he said, the management of the Rock Island receivership was to be very highly commended. Net receipts, he declared, had increased 63.1 per cent and the properties were in better condition than ever before.

Pleas in behalf of the so-called Peabody bondholders' committee, together with a threat to start foreclosure proceedings "in the very near future," were made in Judge Carpenter's court yesterday by Attorney Louis C. Krauthaff of New York in an argument against the issuance of receiver's certificates to meet overdue interest amounting to $500,000 on the $20,000,000 debenture bond issue of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway company. Mr. Krauthaff declared himself the representative of the interests holding the first and refunding mortgage bonds of the railroad.

In presenting his side of the case, Mr. Krauthaff pleaded with Judge Carpenter to follow the examples set in the receiverships of other western railroads and permit a thorough reorganization of the Rock Island properties by the bondholders. To accomplish this, Mr. Krauthaff argued that the $500,000 interest on the debentures should be defaulted.

Would Start Foreclosure.

In this way, he said, a foreclosure would be precipitated, and the holders of the $112,000,000 first and refunding mortgage bonds would take over the properties, and initiate a thorough reorganization.

"Some $60,000,000 is needed to rehabilitate this railroad, and put it in first class condition, Mr. Krauthaff declared. "This need can never be met under the present receivership. The bondholders, however, are willing to make the necessary sacrifice if they are allowed to take over the properties. I represent the interests of the bondholders as expressed through the Peabody committee.

"The foreclosure plan is supported by Mr. Peabody, Mr. Rockefeller, and other New York financiers who are experienced in the reorganization of railroads. This court would make a grave mistake to fly in the face of the judgment of these men, and of other courts which have handled railroad receiverships."

At the close of Mr. Krauthaff's argument Jacob Newman, representing the Amster stockholders' committee, which favors the issuance of certificates, seized an opportunity to question the New York attorney. Judge Carpenter himself accidentally opened the wedge for Mr. Newman by asking Mr. Krauthaff how many of the bondholders he represented.

"Exclusive of the German owned bonds I represent $36,000 of the issue," Mr. Krauthaff said.

"How many bonds are actually on deposit with your committee?" Mr. Newman inquired.

"According to my latest figures, $22,800."

"Out of an issue of nearly $112,000,000?"

"Yes; but $14,000,000 additional have announced their adhesion to the committee."

The Amster interests maintain that the Peabody group really represents the old Reid-Moore faction, which, they declare, is trying to regain control of the properties through the foreclosure. The Peabody committee, Mr. Amster said, really represents less than 1,000 of the 8,300 bondholders.

Foreclosure Petition Prepared.

In closing his remarks during a discussion which followed his argument, Mr. Krauthaff declared that the interests he represented already had completed preparation of a petition asking a foreclosure of the railroad properties. "This petition," he declared, "will be filed in the very near future."

"ENCOMIUMS"

Showered Upon the Chicago Police by Government Secret Service Chief.

KNOCKS against the police are quite the order of the day, but here's something different from W. J. Flynn, chief of the secret service at Washington:

Mr. Herman Schuettler, first deputy superintendent of police, Chicago, Ill.

My Dear Sir:

I want to convey to you my personal appreciation and that of the service for your hearty personal coöperation and the very efficient and intelligent assistance of Officers C. Sloler, T. P. Etchingham, and A. J. Blazejowski and W. Fenn of your detective force in the arrest of Ed Leonard, George Bissett, and others for the robbery at the St. Paul, Minn., internal revenue office and in the recovery of the internal revenue stamps.

Operator Porter from time to time has informed this office of your hearty response to his request for assistance and I want to assure you that it is highly appreciated.

I shall be very glad if you will convey to the officers above named my personal appreciation and hearty good wishes. Very sincerely,

W. J. FLYNN, Chief.

The thieves stole $574,000 worth of revenue stamps and the detectives recovered $545,899 worth of them.

ORPET CASE UP TOMORROW.

Mrs. Lambert Reported Too Ill to Testify Before Grand Jury of Farmers.

Mrs. Frank Lambert, whose daughter, Marian, was the central figure in Lake Forest's love tragedy, was reported ill at her home last night and probably will be unable to testify tomorrow before the grand jury which will be asked to indict William H. Orpet, University of Wisconsin student, held for Marian's murder.

The grand jury, it was learned, will be composed almost exclusively of farmers.

Orpet's counsel are expected to ask for a delay if their client is indicted.

THOMPSON MEN SUPPLANT LINK PLAN ATTORNEYS

Wacker and Associates Fear for Big Boulevard Project Because of Change.

Four new lawyers, two of whom are closely connected with the city administration, have been retained by Corporation Counsel Ettelson in connection with the $7,000,000 Michigan avenue link improvement. They displace Robert Redfield and the members of the firm of Tolman, Redfield & Sexton, who since the undertaking was launched have handled the legal phases of the improvement in behalf of the city.

The change has caused a break between the Chicago plan commission and the city administration. The executive officials protested to Mayor Thompson without result. Yesterday they told the council finance committee they viewed the retirement of Mr. Redfield and his associates "with great apprehension."

These Four Named.

Following are the names of the attorneys who have been retained with the sanction of Mayor Thompson to conduct what is regarded as the biggest special assessment case ever started in the United States:

W. A. Bither. W. J. Donlin,
R. S. Folsom, Albert Martin.

Mr. Bither is president of the Third Ward William Hale Thompson club. Charles E. Ward, former private secretary to William Lorimer, is a partner in Mr. Bither's law firm. Charles R. Francis recently resigned from the firm to become city attorney.

Who New Members Are.

Mr. Folsom was Mayor Thompson's first appointee to the position of corporation counsel. He recently resigned to make way for Samuel Ettelson.

Mr. Donlin and Mr. Martin are credited with being competent special assessment attorneys. Mr. Ettelson said Donlin and Martin would each receive $50 a day, while Bither and Folsom will receive somewhat more, "at least $57.50 a day."

On the basis of appropriation made by the finance committee the first two will be able to charge the city $11,625 each during the year and the last two $13,375 each.

Wacker Fears Mistake.

Charles H. Wacker, chairman of the Chicago Plan commission, and Frank I. Bennett, vice chairman, spoke in behalf of that body.

"I think it is a mistake to swap horses in the middle of the stream," Mr. Wacker said. "Mr. Redfield and his firm have lived with this project for fifteen years. The plan commission has gone on record in favor of that firm, but we were unable to get the mayor to accept our view."

Statement by Ettelson.

Mr. Ettelson said it had been "all thrashed out" with the mayor, and it was decided too many cases were already assigned to that particular law firm.

Ald. Charles E. Merriam and others took the side of the commission, but it was the consensus of opinion the finance committee has no authority to interfere. An appropriation of $362,250 for legal and engineering services in connection with the improvement was approved.

FIANCEE'S NAME BAFFLES RAGEN

Commissioner Can't Swear It's Mary or Marian—Gets License.

SHE'S JUST TWENTY.

County Commissioner Frank Ragen did not know the name of his fiancée.

On that lamentable account he was put to much pain and perplexity yesterday in his endeavor to procure a marriage license.

Commissioner Ragen did not join the long line of waiting ones who sought licenses. In the first place, Commissioner Ragen is, as his title indicates, a county commissioner. In the second place, Commissioner Ragen's temper has gained him the name of terror.

Commissioner Ragen, then, walked directly into the sanctum of County Clerk Robert M. Sweitzer, who does not, commonly, make out licenses himself.

He Pulls Out Slip.

"Here," said Commissioner Ragen, pulling a slip of paper from his waistcoat pocket, "here is her name."

Mr. Sweitzer commenced to fill in the license.

"Mary O'Malia," he read.

"No," contradicted Commissioner Ragen, "it's 'Marian.'"

"'Mary' is the way it reads here."

"Well, she wrote it out herself," said Commissioner Ragen heavily. "I've always called her Marian, though."

He reached for a telephone and began calling various departments in the county building where his fiancée might be visiting friends. Department upon department told him she wasn't there.

Girl Saves Situation.

Sweat stood like dull pearls on his brow. Then a red cheeked young girl entered.

"I thought," she observed coolly, "that you wouldn't be able to manage it yourself."

Commissioner Ragen looked his relief and implicit faith in her. Now all would be clear sailing. It was.

"'Mary' or 'Marian'?" asked Mr. Sweitzer.

"'Mary' for all legal purposes," replied Miss O'Malia. "I myself changed my name to 'Marian.'"

She gave her age as 20; Commissioner Ragen gave his age as 38; he paid the $1.50 fee; and the license was theirs.

"We will be married on Tuesday by Father Cahill in Riverside," announced Miss O'Malia. "Then we will take several weeks in Cuba."

WOMAN WHO WED MAN FORBIDDEN TO MARRY SUES

Mrs. Anna Hutchinson-Weichsel Asserts She Has Rights Before Justice, Too.

Offended womanhood began an attack on the Illinois divorce laws yesterday. The rule that permits a divorced man, remarried within the period he has been told by the law to remain single, to cast off such a second wife by means of annulment, will be fought by Mrs. Anne Hutchinson-Weichsel.

Mrs. Weichsel, the wife of Ernest P. Weichsel, an artist, who is said to have found "a perfect princess" after his wife is said to have paid for his art education, lives at 2466 Orchard street, and is a sister of G. Fred Rush, an attorney.

It is charged that Weichsel married his present wife two years ago. Shortly afterwards he is said to have found his "perfect princess." He boasted of her to his friends, 'tis said, and his allegiance to his wife began to wane. They parted, and the wife brooded over her misfortune.

"It was the money that I was able to get from my family that permitted me to pay for his art education," said Mrs. Weichsel. "My husband has been thoroughly ungrateful, to say nothing of his actions with other women.

"For a time I thought it best to let the matter drop. Now I have decided that the Illinois divorce laws are a joke. I am going to fight this matter out, if it is only to save some other woman the disgrace of such a situation, and perhaps save her children from the stamp of illegitimacy."

Weichsel has brought suit for the annulment of his marriage on the plea that he married before the expiration of his two year term, within which, under the law, he is not permitted to remarry. Thus, in the estimate of his wife, he is making use of his own illegal act to commit another.

It is Mrs. Weichsel's plea that her husband does not come into court with clean hands, and on this argument she will base her fight.

FIRE AT LINSEED PLANT.

Damage Estimated at $100,000 Caused by Blaze at Hirst & Begley Factory.

Firemen fought a blaze in the plant of the Hirst & Begley Linseed company, 2013 Mendel street, yesterday. The damage was estimated at $100,000. Several small explosions occurred during the fire, but no one was hurt.

KATE REFUSES TO STAY DEAD

Twice Reported Killed by Police Bullets, Horse Comes Back.

THEN ITS HEART FAILS.

Kate had a great opportunity to die beautifully and earn a tear. But she spoiled it, like the tragedian who doesn't know the asbestos curtain is stuck, and gets up from his death scene, thereby getting a bigger laugh than the buffoon.

Kate's life had been that of the average horse. In her youth she hauled wine parties, in middle age, baggage. Her senile days, however, found her hooked up to nothing but her skin, which the owner coveted.

Telephones for Policeman.

John Muldinski, an expressman of 9324 Marquette road, telephoned Sergt. Jimmy Dubeck of the South Chicago station to send a man to shoot Kate. Policeman Berney Dill went over Friday evening and fired four shots into Kate's head, and she lay down. Dill returned and reported her dead.

Yesterday Sergt. Dubeck picked up the telephone, to hear Muldinski reproachfully inquire for some one to kill Kate again.

"When I went to feed this morning she trotted up as gay and hungry as a colt," said Muldinski.

He Adds Five More.

This time Policeman John F. Lewe was sent and added five bullets to Dill's four. He returned. Kate was dead—once more. And then Muldinski called up with sobs in his voice.

"Please, sergeant, haven't you got something bigger in the way of a gun? Kate's up again."

Policeman Michael O'Neill went over with a double barreled shotgun and the disgrace of two defeats to wipe out. When Kate saw him coming and realized that this other stuff had not been mere jest and horseplay, so to speak, she fell down and died of broken heart.

DR. J. R. STRUBLE ARRESTED AFTER DEATH BY ABORTION.

Accused in Ante-mortem Statement of Woman Who Died in Hospital of Illegal Operation.

Dr. J. R. Struble of 2759 West North avenue, who gave his age as 66 years, was arrested on a charge of murder by an illegal operation in connection with the death of Mrs. Augusta Bloom of 1940 North Kedzie avenue. She died in the Norwegian Deaconess hospital after making a statement in which she accused the physician.

Mrs. Bloom was taken to the hospital March 1 on recommendation of Dr. Nels Meling of 3201 Armitage avenue, who was called into the case the day before.

Dr. Struble denied any knowledge of the operation and denied that he had ever seen the victim.

Doubled production will not meet year's demand

The Cole Motor Car Company will build more than twice as many eight-cylinder cars during 1916 as we produced last year. Yet, judging by the keen buying interest at the great automobile shows, we will not be able to supply the immediate demand for the bigger-and-better Cole 8 at $1595.

Cole dealers now have 300% more orders—accompanied by deposits—than they have had at any similar period in the history of the company.

In daily use by thousands of owners, the Cole 8 offers overwhelming evidence of mechanical superiority, rare flexibility, buoyancy of power, consistently low gas and oil consumption, ultra-refinement in details—and a beauty of line and permanency of finish that are exclusive—in a word, Cole class that is so distinctive as to forbid imitation. And at $190 less in price, it sets a standard of value that is unapproached.

See the improved Cole 8. Ride in it. Get the feel of its pulse, the inspiration of its steady, full-flowing energy, the joyful comfort of its big, seven-passenger body.

Arrange for a demonstration now over roads of your own selection. Have the improved mechanism explained so that you can understand it.

Order early if you are to enjoy the improved Cole 8 this season.

We regard this announcement as important and necessary for those who have counted on driving a Cole 8 this year.

$4,000,000 GIFT A WEDDING LURE, SAYS MRS. BOYCE

Declares Publisher Wooed Her for His Son, Promising to Give Him Company.

A $4,000,000 wedding present was promised Miss Miriam Patterson of Omaha by William D. Boyce, the publisher, who hoped to become her father-in-law, according to an affidavit she filed yesterday in the Circuit court.

Miss Patterson, now the wife of Benjamin H. Boyce, the son of William D. Boyce, is suing her father-in-law for $25,000 for alleged violation of a trust agreement whereby she was to receive the income from 250 shares of the stock of the W. D. Boyce Publishing company.

Story in Affidavit.

Mrs. Boyce's affidavit recounts this:

"When Benny Boyce, during January, 1912, proposed marriage to her she suspected and feared his drinking habits. But his father reassured her:

"'Ben has been a little wild as a boy, but has sown his wild oats and now has settled down to hard work. He has cut out drinking entirely.

"'I'm so sure of him that I've made him vice president of the W. D. Boyce Publishing company. The company's profits amount to more than $200,000 a year. I'm going to give the company outright to Ben.'"

According to Mrs. Boyce's lawyer, Edward W. Everett, Miss Patterson understood from Mr. Boyce that the gift of the company to the son would be made soon after the marriage. Figuring an average annual profit of $200,000, the company was worth $4,000,000.

Mrs. Boyce's affidavit declares that William D. Boyce wooed her for his son, many times urging her to the marriage. He agreed to set aside for her 250 shares of the company's stock, so that she might have an annual $5,000 income in her own right.

Sues for Divorce.

She married Ben Boyce on June 11, 1912. After the marriage she received the dividends. On April 1, 1913, a daughter, later named Jane, was born to her.

For two or three years all went well. But last July, she says, she left her husband and sued for divorce on account of his cruelty and intoxication. Since then she has received no dividends.

Ben Boyce has ceased active connection with the W. D. Boyce Publishing company. Now he resides in Indianapolis, where he is business manager of a daily newspaper owned by his father.

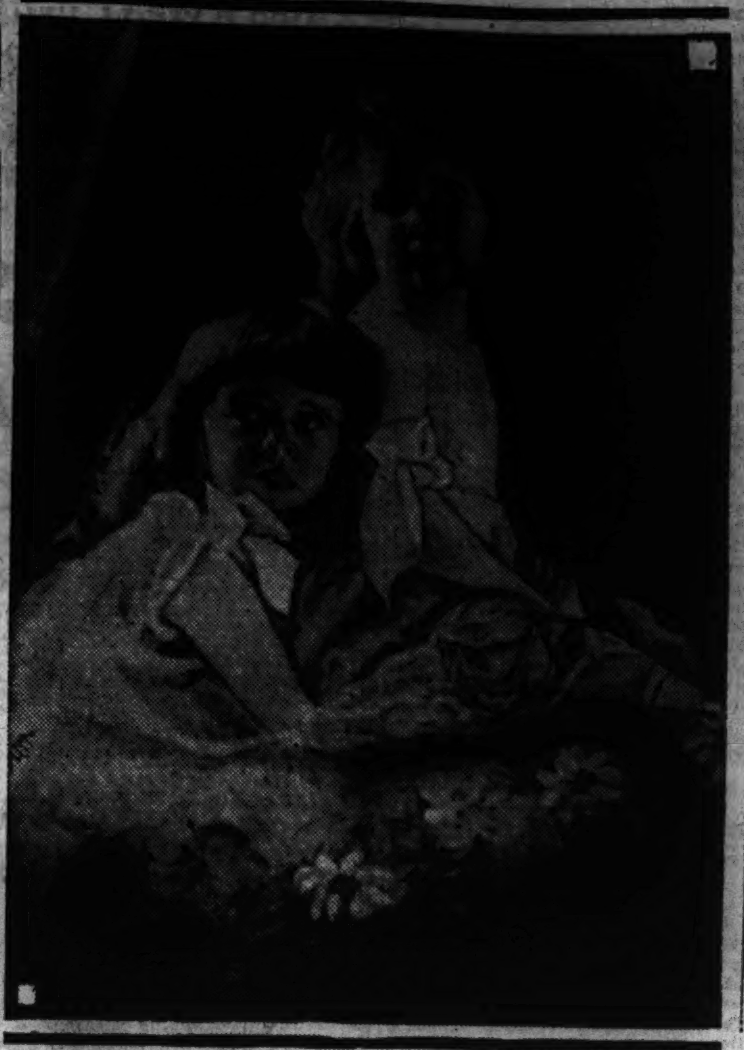
BY A LABORER'S WIFE

Painting of Jay Gould Children Which Woman Hopes to Sell to Family.



Mrs. Jay Gould's Children
Water Color by Maud Dutton Burritt

LABORER'S WIFE PAINTS CHILDREN OF JAY GOULD

Uses "Tribune" Pictures as Basis for Work She Hopes to Sell.

Ever since she was a little girl Mrs. Maud Dutton Burritt has dreamed a dream. Some day, she hoped, she would become a great artist.

Every day, when her husband has gone off to work in a can factory, she hurries through with her breakfast dishes and the other housework in her little cottage at 1338 South Seventeenth avenue, Maywood, and seats herself before an easel in the dining room to work with brush and palette until supper time.

Chance for Career.

Friends have highly praised her work and her teachers have told her she has latent talent, which would bring her a great career were it properly developed. But the wife of a factory hand has little money to spend for an art education, and so Mrs. Burritt has worked as hard and as faithfully in her little cottage as ever a Whistler or a Corot in his studio.

At odd times she has scraped together enough money to study for a while at the Art institute, and her pictures have been hung in the Dryden galleries.

But those who viewed them paused to admire and not to purchase, and so in order to carry on her studies Mrs. Burritt recently took them all to an auctioneer and sold them for cost of canvas and paint.

Paints Gould Children.

But not long ago Mrs. Burritt happened to pick up THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE which contained a portrait of the children of Mrs. Jay Gould.

"That gave me an idea," said Mrs. Burritt. "I decided I would paint these kiddies in my own way in water color. I determined to put all the art in me in this one picture, and I have. Now it is finished I shall send it to Mrs. Gould herself, and I know she will buy it. If she does then maybe I can carry on my studies as they should be."

Girl of 13 Solves Daniels' Objection to Battleship Crusade.

Miss Lorraine Link

Moline, Ill., March 4.—Miss Lorraine Link, who is raising dimes to help along Marjorie Sterrett's battleship scheme, is apt at repartee and logical, too. This little girl of 13 was asked:

"Why raise dimes for a battleship when Secretary Daniels has declared that a battleship from the children of America will not be accepted?"

And Lorraine replied: "But it's going to take a long time to raise dimes enough to build a battleship, and by the time we have gotten the money Daniels won't be secretary any longer."

POKER GAME OF YEARS AGO STILL HAUNTS GEORGE GIBBS

Former State Senator Contests Note for $3,400 on Ground It Was in Payment of Gambling Debt.

Nickels from the jackpot, nickels in the kitty, until former State Senator George A. Gibbs was in the hole for $3,400. Years have passed since then, and Mr. Gibbs is contesting a judgment for $4,800 on a $3,400 note, plus six years' interest and attorneys' fees. The judgment is in favor of Frederick H. Wickett of the law firm of Wickett, Walker & Wegg, which recently made "the Line."

The judgment results from a power of confession attached to the $3,400 note. Mr. Gibbs, through Attorney Edward H. Morris, yesterday obtained an order vacating the judgment and allowing him to file his plea.

The court's action was taken after Gibbs had filed an affidavit declaring that the $3,400 note was illegal because given for a gambling debt. The affidavit relates:

During 1906 and 1907 Gibbs, Lee Strauss "and others" commenced holding frequent sessions at cards. The former state senator lost to Strauss for $3,400. On Nov. 4, 1909, he gave Strauss a note for that amount. The note passed from Strauss to the Drexel State bank, and from the bank to Attorney Wickett.

The transfer will not be made until Mr. Barber has erected a number of buildings on the property suitable for the use of students.

DRIVER OF AUTO TRUCK FREED OF PORTER DEATH.

Edward Sorensen Exonerated at Coroner's Inquest Over Killing of Father of Nine Children.

George Porter of 2440 Cortez street was accidentally killed Friday night when he was struck by an automobile truck driven by Edward Sorensen of 1802 North Western avenue, a brother of N. C. Sorensen, an expressman, of 1802 North Western avenue, at Wabansia and Milwaukee avenues, a coroner's jury decided yesterday.

The first report that the automobile truck was driven by Edward H. Sorenson of 2651 Kimball avenue was found to be wrong at the inquest.

Edward Sorensen was exonerated by the coroner's jury.

The accident made nine children fatherless.

Ida Porter, 14 years old, was hit by an automobile near Kankakee last year and her foot permanently injured.

War Head Dismisses Proposal to Use Tolls to Pay for Illinois River Improvement.

Washington, D. C., March 4.—Maj. Gen. Scott, acting secretary of war, has approved the recommendation of Gen. Kingman, chief of the army engineers, and declined to accept the proposition of Gov. Dunne of Illinois for the improvement of the Illinois river. It was proposed to use tolls collected by the state to reimburse the expense of the improvement and finally turn the work over to the government with the provision that tolls should not thereafter be collected.

Gen. Kingman's view was that the proposition should be considered by congress before action was taken.

Manila, March 4.—Percy Farrant, auditor of the Manila Street Railway company, has been arrested. It is said that he is charged with embezzlement of funds amounting to $50,000, extending over a period of seven years.

MONTGOMERY AND MOORE MARITAL FOG CLEARING.

Decree to Annul Their Marriage on Bigamy Grounds Soon to Formally Free Stage Stars.

The illegalities of the marital tangle in which are mazed Florence Moore, the actress, and her old time vaudeville partner, William J. Montgomery, will be somewhat simplified by a decree annulling their marriage which will be entered in a few days.

Bigamy constitutes the count for the decree.

Miss Moore is now Mrs. Jules L. Schwob, having been married a month ago to a New York jewelry salesman. She takes the position that she never was legally married to Montgomery, whose first marriage had never been officially voided.

Sow Now Vaughan's "Chicago Parks" LAWN SEED

Few people realize the importance of sowing grass seed with the first softening of the earth, when it may readily sink into the ground and be covered by the washing of the spring rains. Vaughan's "Chicago Parks" and "Columbian" (for shade), originated by us, have been sold on their merits for more than thirty years in and about Chicago and have given entire satisfaction. They are the best permanent mixtures, making a close, velvety turf; no foul seeds; no weeds; sure to grow.

We are selling these mixtures at the lowest price possible for high quality. Prices: 25 lbs., $6.45; 15 lbs., $3.95; 5 lbs., $1.35; per lb., 30c. Orders of $2.00 and over prepaid.

Lawn Fertilizer—100 lbs., $3.00; 50 lbs., $1.75. Prepaid in Cook County.

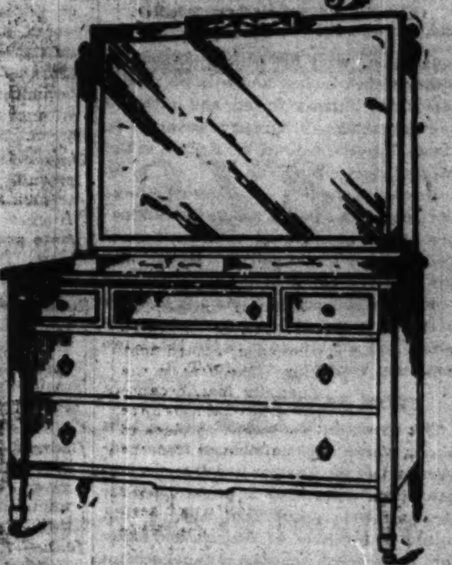
Scholle's Semi-Annual Sale

Brown Mahogany Twin Beds, Adam period; cane or wood panels head and foot. Sale price, ea., $45



Brown Mahogany Adam Dresser, 54 in. wide, sliding tray in top drawer. Sale price..... $65

YOU'VE been told by us and by others of the continued advance in the prices of furniture; they are still advancing.

This fact makes your opportunity in this sale of ours very unusual, because we not only contracted ahead on the old price basis, but we are making our reductions from those old prices.

For instance, pieces similar to those shown here were marked down as specials last fall, before the advance, and the prices on these are the same now.

So much as a result of our buying always from reliable factories who could and would allow us to contract ahead; buying job lots and factory ends would never give this opportunity.

Lyon & Healy's Removal Sale

Over 500 pianos and player-pianos, including instruments of the highest quality, will be sold at heavy reductions.

Remarkable Values in Pianos and Player-Pianos

In quality, variety and value these instruments cannot be duplicated elsewhere. A large number of them are only slightly used or merely "shopworn." Used instruments have been thoroughly renovated in our factory and are guaranteed to be in first-class condition. We have arranged them in groups as to price classification to be offered this week as follows:

Pianos of various makes, ranging in price from $75 to $115 All are good values and are offered at a fraction of original prices.	This group includes pianos of many well known makes, ranging in price from $125 to $225 These instruments are particularly recommended and guaranteed. Some of the late models are included in this lot.	An unequaled assortment of pianos and player-pianos, ranging in price from $235 to $465 This includes pianos and player-pianos of superior quality with a choice of many high grade makes. Unusual values in small grand pianos are a part of this lot, also some slightly used Steinway uprights.	This group includes upright and grand pianos and player-pianos of world-wide fame and highest possible grade, ranging in price from $475 to $675 These instruments are of the class always sold at established prices, hence the opportunity here afforded to buy them at substantial discounts is unprecedented.

Very low monthly payment terms will be provided so that all can take advantage of this unparalleled opportunity.

In addition to the foregoing special lots, we offer many exceptional values in Steinway, Lyon & Healy, Weber, Steck Pianos and Pianola Pianos. Musicians, teachers, and institutions should not delay making an inspection.

Harps, Violins, Mandolins, Guitars and Musical Supplies

The warerooms devoted to these instruments are crowded with special values. Remarkable opportunities will be found throughout our store.

It is almost twenty-five years since we moved into the present building and we intend to dispose of surplus and special stock of all kinds at very extraordinary clearance prices. When we open our new building, we shall signalize the event by beginning with a stock substantially new. So here is a bona fide opportunity for music lovers, such an opportunity as may not occur again.

convention, with his colleague, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, and with his predecessor, W. Murray Crane, and with the new Republican-Progressive governor of Massachusetts, Samuel W. McCall, as the Massachusetts Big Four.

Shrewd observers of eastern political developments say this means the elimination from presidential consideration of both Senator Weeks and Gov. McCall, and the decisive ballot at the Coliseum will record the old conservatives and the New Hampshire and Massachusetts Progressives and all others between these two extremes voting together for T. R.

FROM NEW YORK STATE.

The important development from New York, where the Republican state convention two weeks since had named an organization delegation in preparation for the statewide primary of April 4 that would be for Root or Hughes and never for Roosevelt, was the announcement from Buffalo that the regular organization Republicans there would not be bound by the state convention dictum, but would present candidates at the primary openly pledged to the nomination of Roosevelt.

Competent New York political critics differ as to the significance of this move. The average opinion, as expressed through the newspapers, gets to the conclusion that the dominant Republican organization managers have not abandoned hope that Elihu Root can be nominated; that Justice Hughes is absolutely out of the going through his own volition and cannot be coaxed in even by a convention nomination, and that even Col. Roosevelt himself will be prepared to say, on his return to the states next month, that Root ought to be the nominee.

In Southern States.

Developments in the south are significant. Florida had a peaceable and harmonious convention and named a delegation uninstructed and representative of all of the factions that were fighting hand to hand in 1912. The intelligence from there is that the Florida delegates will vote for the candidate who can show he can defeat Wilson.

North Carolina staged an acrimonious contest over the national committeeship, resulting in the defeat of E. C. Duncan, the present national committeeman. The delegation is fifty-fifty between the old Taft and old Roosevelt factions. All that North Carolina Republicans seem to want is a Republican president.

Kentucky indulged in a row, due to the strife between the whites and the blacks, fanned by the factional troubles that elected a Democratic governor there last November. The delegates at large are instructed for Fairbanks.

Out in Nevada.

Nevada's delegation was sent to Chicago without instructions and composed of all elements. Mrs. Thomas F. Moran, wife of Judge Moran, heads the list for alternate at large, the first woman to be honored by a political party in Nevada. There is some Roosevelt sentiment.

The Missouri district delegates elected during the week were uninstructed in each case. Nearly all of the district conventions gave conspicuous mention to former Gov. Herbert S. Hadley.

Between Senator Cummins and Senator La Follette, the reports from the northwestern states tended to indicate there is little chance for any outsiders to break in in Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, and Iowa.

THE DELEGATE SITUATION

How the Principal States Are Lining Up on Presidential Candidates.

Results of The Tribune poll of the presidential delegate situation in the different states are summarized as follows:

Alabama—Republicans will have uninstructed delegation, split between Roosevelt and Hughes. Democrats for Wilson and for national prohibition.

Arizona—Republican state committee will name delegates, probably for Roosevelt. No opposition to Wilson.

Arkansas—Republican state convention will send uninstructed delegation. Sherman has some Arkansas strength. Democrats for Wilson.

California—Republican delegates will be unpledged. Cummins' name may be on primary ballot. Factional smash-up of 1912 as bitter as ever. Wilson gets the state without serious trouble.

Colorado—Republican delegates will be uninstructed and ready to coöperate with eastern leaders on harmony program. No trouble for Wilson.

Connecticut—Republican delegation probably uninstructed unless it is determined to back Weeks. Strong Hughes sentiment in eastern half of state and pronounced Root strength in west. Democrats are for Wilson.

Delaware—Uninstructed delegation is probable Republican policy. For Root or Hughes. Democrats for Wilson.

Florida—Republican delegates already chosen, go uninstructed. Democrats are for Wilson because his is only name on primary ballot.

Georgia—Republican factions harmonizing on fifty-fifty division of delegates between 1912 factions. Will be uninstructed. Wilson has no opposition.

Idaho—Republican delegates will be instructed to use all possible means to secure nomination of Senator William E. Borah. Every reason to believe delegation would support Roosevelt, if his name is presented. Democrats will instruct for Wilson.

Illinois—Republican delegates will be instructed for Senator Lawrence Y. Sherman. Slight chance for avowed pro-Roosevelt delegates to break the solid Sherman strength. Democrats will be for Wilson.

Indiana—Republican delegation will be unanimously and earnestly for Charles W. Fairbanks and Democratic delegation will be for Wilson.

Iowa—Republican delegates will be unanimously for Senator Albert B. Cummins. No opposition among Democrats to renomination of Wilson.

Kansas—Kansas delegates probably will be uninstructed. Sentiment in Kansas is strong for Hughes. Wilson undoubtedly will have support of Kansas Democrats.

Kentucky—State convention, after a row, instructed for Fairbanks. District delegates about half and half as between instructions for Fairbanks and no instructions. Democrats a unit for Wilson.

Louisiana — Republican delegation probably to be harmonious and uninstructed. Democrats are for Wilson.

Maine—Republican policy probably will be for an uninstructed delegation, dependent upon later New England developments. Democrats are for Wilson.

Maryland—Republican delegation will be uninstructed and unpledged. Democrats will support Wilson.

Massachusetts—Indications now that Massachusetts will have uninstructed delegation and that Senator Weeks and Gov. McCall, both presidential possibilities, will be members. Roosevelt boom believed to be cooking in New England. Democrats are for Wilson.

Michigan—Michigan Republicans undecided. Probably will instruct for Senator William Alden Smith in primary April 3. Democrats for Wilson.

Minnesota—By agreement Minnesota Republican delegation will be for Cummins. After complimentary vote delegation will be free to vote for Hughes, Root, or Roosevelt. Wilson has unanimous Democratic support.

Mississippi—Republican delegation to be uninstructed and harmonious. Democrats for Wilson.

Missouri—Republicans likely to proffer former Gov. H. S. Hadley as state's favorite son. Considerable T. R. sentiment. Democrats are for Wilson.

Nebraska—Republican primary contest between Cummins and Estabrook. Individual delegates nearly all for Hughes. Bryan will head Democratic delegation under Wilson instructions.

Nevada—Republican delegates elected last week, absolutely uninstructed and unpledged. Democrats solidly for Wilson.

New Hampshire—Republican primary next week likely to send uninstructed delegates, but strongly for Roosevelt, with Hughes next. May determine New England states course. Democrats for Wilson.

New Jersey—Republican delegates probably to be uninstructed. Root, Hughes, and Roosevelt are the favorites. Democrats altogether for Wilson.

New Mexico—Republicans will instruct for Roosevelt. Democrats unanimous for Wilson.

New York—Republican delegates will be uninstructed, unless some avowed Roosevelt candidates break the organization slate. New York leaders have regained hope that Root can be nominated. Democratic delegates will vote for Wilson.

North Carolina—Republican state convention last week named uninstructed delegation, "fifty-fifty" as between old factions. Democrats for Wilson.

North Dakota—Republican delegation probably will be instructed for Cummins or La Follette. Democrats are for Wilson.

Ohio—Ohio Republican delegation will be for Burton until he is nominated or until it is apparent his nomination is hopeless. Democrats are for Wilson.

Oklahoma—Roosevelt will have some Republican strength. Delegation will not be a unit. Sentiment of Democrats for Wilson.

Oregon—Direct primaries will send delegation to Chicago unpledged to any candidate. Democrats for Wilson.

Pennsylvania—Republican condition still chaotic. Harmony may be reached before primaries of May 16. Much quiet Roosevelt talk in the cities. Democrats for Wilson.

South Carolina—Chicago delegation to be uninstructed and harmonious. Democrats for Wilson.

South Dakota — Undercurrent for Hughes, but Republicans will be instructed for Cummins. Democratic factions have indorsed Wilson.

Tennessee—If T. R. gives any encouragement Republicans will indorse his candidacy. Democrats will be pledged to Wilson.

Texas—Col. Cecil Lyon quietly working to control Republican delegates for Roosevelt. Democrats all for Wilson.

Utah—Senator Smoot and other Republican leaders are for Roosevelt. Democrats are for Wilson.

Vermont—May split the Republican delegation, giving Weeks a part, as his birthstate. Roosevelt has some strength. Strong Hughes sentiment. Democrats for Wilson.

Virginia—Republican delegates probably to be uninstructed and favorable to Hughes or Root. Democrats for Wilson.

Washington—Much Roosevelt talk, but delegates will be uninstructed. Democrats for Wilson.

West Virginia—Primaries will be held the day before the Republican national convention. Probably an agreed and uninstructed delegation. Democrats are for Wilson.

Wisconsin—Determined fight in progress to keep delegation from La Follette and to send uninstructed delegation to Chicago. Democrats have indorsed Wilson.

Wyoming—Republican delegation will be uninstructed, with no preference yet appearing. Democrats for Wilson.

CONFIDENCE MEN GET SAVINGS OF EIGHT YEARS.

Trick Steel Worker Who Had Saved $400—He Intended to Return to Europe After the War.

It took eight years of hard work in the steel mills in Pueblo, Colo., for John Lusneck to save $400. He arrived in Chicago yesterday on his way to a new job in Cleveland. He was going to add more to his savings there until the war is over and then he was going back to see his wife and six children in Austria. He carried the money and a ticket to Cleveland.

He was asleep in the La Salle street depot when two men aroused him and invited him to have some breakfast. After the meal they took a walk. Under a viaduct one of the men dropped a pocketbook. He picked it up and examined it. Two hundred dollars, he said, were missing. He accused Lusneck of taking it. In protesting his innocence Lusneck drew out his roll of $400. The man counted it and then shoved it back in Lusneck's pocket.

It was near train time when he thought of the roll. He drew it out. He found a $1 bill neatly wrapped around a lot of newspaper clippings.

Firemen Before Merit Board.

J. J. Sheehan, Peter J. Kelly, and P. J. Leonard, city firemen, were placed on trial before the civil service commission yesterday on the charge of having attempted to bribe Ald. Oscar De Priest in order to obtain a promotion. The men were acquitted when tried on this charge in the Criminal court. The commission took the cases under advisement.

"Get Busy," He Tells Them After Showing Increase in Robberies for February.

Capt. Morgan A. Collins faced the 150 or more plain clothes men and patrolmen under his command at roll call at the Central station last night and told them flatly that it was up to them to put a stop to the many safeblowings and other crimes in the loop in the last two or three weeks.

EDWARDS TOO ILL FOR MANN ACT TRIAL, ATTORNEY CLAIMS

Judge Orders St. Paul Man's Lawyer to Have Him in Court Tuesday to Answer Ada Cox Charge.

Mann act charges against William Rufus Edwards of St. Paul will come up for trial in the United States District court in Chicago next Tuesday morning, according to an announcement made yesterday by Federal Judge Anderson, who refused the request of William S. Forrest, Edwards' attorney, and advised Mr. Forrest to produce his client at that time.

But Mr. Forrest was not to be outdone. He sent formal notice to Assistant District Attorneys Igoe and Epstein that his client's health was bad, and added that he expected to present affidavits of physicians showing that it will be impossible for Edwards to be in court Tuesday to answer the charges made against him by Ada Cox.

According to Mr. Forrest, he has had telephone conversation with Mrs. Edwards in St. Paul, who informed him of her husband's ill health. The object of the notice to the government, he said, was to give the federal authorities opportunity to have their own medical talent examine Mr. Edwards.

Miss Cox, with Edward Litsinger, her newest attorney, appeared in the federal building yesterday and conferred with the assistants in charge of the prosecution. She was late keeping her appointment, and Mr. Igoe informed her that the government would have her put in jail under bond if such action became necessary to keep her where she could be reached.

SPECIAL DELIVERY BOY KILLED IN AUTO CRASH.

Taxicab Throws Him from Motorcycle Against a Tree at Adams Street and Kildare Avenue.

James L. Belmont, 18 years old, a special delivery messenger, was on his way to deliver his last letter early yesterday when his motorcycle was struck by a taxicab at Adams street and Kildare avenue. The boy was hurled headlong against a tree. His skull was fractured and his neck broken by the impact. He died at the Garfield Park hospital.

Thomas G. Woodside of 212 North Kildare avenue, chauffeur of the machine, who was driving a party of four from a social function at the Hotel Sherman, was arrested. Witnesses said the accident was unavoidable.

Young Belmont lived at 1115 West Harrison street.

SCHOOL TEACHERS' PAY LOW.

There are 2,514 teachers in Illinois who receive less than $300 as an annual salary. The report on finance of the Illinois school survey being taken by the Illinois State Teachers' association appears in the current number of the Illinois Teacher, the organ of the state association. The report is written by David Felmley of the State Normal university.

The report suggests that there should be a minimum annual salary of $400 and a minimum school year of eight months

CREAM OF RICE

2,217,342 American Babies

Yes, and twenty-one million American boys and girls past babyhood, are getting ready, the very best they know how, to continue the work that we must leave undone.

How are we helping them?

We can not live their lives or think their thoughts for them. The best we can do is to set their faces toward the Winning Goal, and wish them God-speed and a broader success than our own.

The ones who are keen-witted, bright-eyed and two-fisted will tackle Life's Long Trail with a vim and a purpose that will carry them over the rough spots with never a falter or stumble. Every step they take—every thought they think—every inch of ground they gain—must depend on brain, brawn, blood, sinew.

All of these things are—FOOD! FOOD first; mind and body afterwards! And the food of Foods is

CREAM OF RICE

CREAM OF RICE is richer than the reddest meats.

CREAM OF RICE is prepared in a few moments in a multitude of ways—for Baby, Laddie, Lassie—You.

CREAM OF RICE starts you on the day's highway with an easy stomach and a cool brain. Each day it is in season. It's the stomach's true friend—and the mind's best pal.

CREAM OF RICE cooks in five minutes. Makes delicious breakfast cereal—griddle cakes—muffins—coffee-cake—puddings.

MAX LOEB FIGHTS MAYOR'S PLAN TO AID MAC CORMAC

Says No Factional Henchman Should Be Paid School Money.

Max Loeb, one of Mayor Thompson's appointees on the board of education, issued a statement yesterday in which he said he will not go along with the movement to make Morton MacCormac school board statistician. MacCormac is the mayor's choice for the job. The mayor plans to make MacCormac his personal representative on the board as well as the board statistician.

Mr. Loeb states that he is against MacCormac on the ground that a scientific man, free from political influence, should have the work. He does not believe the mayor is entitled to a personal representative on the pay roll of the board, and states that the proposed examination of the Seventh ward politician tomorrow is only a useless form.

Statement by Loeb.

Mr. Loeb, who is one of the three members of the audit committee, suggests the appointment of Miss Edith Abbott of the School of Civics and Philanthropy or Prof. John Fairley of the University of Illinois. His statement follows:

"I have opposed the appointment of Mr. MacCormac from the beginning. A statistician should be removed altogether from any political influence. To be effective he must work in the true scientific spirit, seeking only the truth.

"There is work for a statistician on the school board. Present methods can be improved, efficiency can be increased, waste can be eliminated. The statistician should be an efficiency engineer, who will, absolutely fearlessly, make concrete constructive recommendations.

"My opposition to Mr. MacCormac is not based on opposition to the mayor. I entertain only the friendliest feelings toward the chief executive who appointed me. I have no animus whatever against Mr. MacCormac. But I would be derelict in my duty as a citizen and as a member of the board if I did not protest against any attempt to bring political influence to bear on school board statistics. The mayor is not entitled to a personal representative on the school board. He has the power of appointment, which is sufficient.

Active in Politics.

"Mr. MacCormac has been and is active in factional politics. He will be responsible to the mayor for his position—not to the board. The validity of his statistics, the cogency of his recommendations will immediately be called in question.

"I have no candidate to present. I object to the method of selection. Mr. Taylor, the present assistant supervisor, is thoroughly competent to take charge of the statistical bureau until a civil service examination can be held and a successor to Mr. Sercombe appointed.

"The president of the board wants the appointment of Mr. MacCormac made as a sixty day appointment. This is merely a subterfuge—an effort to "pass the buck" to the civil service commission. There is no immediate necessity for a supervisor. Let the office remain vacant until an examination can be held.

Urges Miss Abbott.

"Let us urge such people as Edith Abbott of the School of Civics, Prof. John Fairley of the University of Illinois, and others of equally high type to take the examination—persons entirely removed from the sphere of political activity—who will work with an eye single to the improvement of board of education methods and the saving of the taxpayers' money.

"I have no objection to the examination of Mr. MacCormac by the committee, but I feel such an examination will come to nothing. In the first place we of the committee are not competent ourselves to conduct an examination for statistician. Secondly, the examination is only a form, as a majority of the committee has already made up its mind to appoint MacCormac.

"I am sorry to oppose the mayor's wishes, but this is a matter of principle on which I cannot compromise. It is fundamental—shall the school system be kept free from political influence, or shall politics be allowed to dominate?"

Miss McDowell vs. MacCormac.

Mr. Loeb asserted, in giving out the statement, that many politically independent persons interested in civic matters believe as he does. Miss Mary McDowell is one of them.

"It is an extremely bad precedent," said Miss McDowell, "for the mayor to suggest any one. The board needs an efficiency expert, who should be appointed by the board. We ought to know something about school finances and have the assurance that what we got was right. I should say Mr. Loeb has taken exactly the right position."

George E. Hooker, civic secretary of the City club, is also in accord with Mr. Loeb's move. He said:

"It is necessary to select a statistician who will work on a scientific basis. He should not be permitted to have any personal relations with any one connected in an official capacity with his department."

Mr. Hooker said that Miss Abbott is well fitted for the work, and that Prof. Fairley is a high grade expert in political science.

SIX OF A KIND

Whole Family of Boys to Sing Tonight with Paulist Choristers.

Edmund, Howard, Frank, Donald, Bert, and John Tobin.

Six of the choristers who will sing with the Paulist Choristers this evening at the Auditorium theater belong to one family. Edmund, Howard, Frank, Donald, Bert, and John Tobin constitute this whole family contribution to the Paulist Choristers. Three of the boys made the European tour with the organization in 1912. All six boys are efficient songsters, and two, Masters Howard and Frank, are senior chanters, the chief choristers in the soprano and alto sections. The difficult program to be sung at the Auditorium on Sunday evening reveals the strange talent possessed by boys for coping with the most puzzling musical scores. The effect of long association with the Paulist Choristers can be seen in the Tobin brothers and in all the other boys, for, while they are all real boys, being most expert baseball players, boxers, and thoroughgoing athletes, they show the maturing effects of the serious responsibility Father Finn places upon them.

LA FOLLETTE BOOM BOOMS.

Petition for Placing Name on Wisconsin Primary Ballot Is Filed with Secretary of State.

Madison, Wis., March 4.—Petitions for placing the name of Senator Robert M. La Follette on the official ballot as a candidate for the Republican nomination for president and for placing the names of twenty-six La Follette candidates for delegates to the Republican national convention were filed in the office of the secretary of state today.

Candidates for delegates to the Republican convention, nominated at a state convention in Madison, will go uninstructed.

WILSON STRONG IN ARIZONA.

Democratic State Committee Pledges Support for Renomination and Indorses Administration.

Phoenix, Ariz., March 4.—The Democratic state central committee met here today and adopted resolutions indorsing the administration of President Wilson and pledging Arizona's six delegates to support the president for renomination at the national convention of the Democratic party at St. Louis.

BUDGET PEACE OFFER SPURNED

Ettelson's Program Rejected and Veto of Measure Is Seen.

A "harmony program" proposed by the city administration for the 1916 budget was spurned yesterday by the committee on finance. As a result the mayor is expected to veto the measure and there is a possibility that the wrangling may extend beyond April 1, the last date upon which the council can legally pass a tax levy ordinance. The council is scheduled to begin work on the budget tomorrow morning.

Ettelson Bears Proposal.

Corporation Counsel Ettelson appeared before the committee with the peace proposal. Several aldermen interpreted it as a "threat" to compel adoption of the administration's amendments. The program, which was worked out by Controller Pike and Mr. Ettelson, called for adding $102,475 to the budget.

Mr. Ettelson conveyed the impression the administration would battle for these increases to the bitter end. Of the total amount asked for the committee allowed only $19,475.

Refuse to Restore Law Item.

The committee argued for hours over Mr. Ettelson's request that $50,000 cut out of the law department appropriation be restored. Ald. Nance charged that several assistants in the office had spent their time in political activity. In the end Mr. Ettelson's request was denied. The committee also refused to restore Capt. P. B. Coffin's salary as head of the civil service commission to $5,000.

The mayor asked for $5,000 additional for his contingent fund—$35,000 in all—and $2,500 was granted. Action on a proposal to abolish the welfare bureau, the storm center of the Eaton-Rowe scandal, was deferred.

Ald. Eugene Block made a strong plea for harmony, urging that compromise was necessary to pass the budget, but the majority of the committee was against him.

Vice President Comes Today.

Vice President Thomas R. Marshall will be the guest of honor and principal speaker at the dinner of the Chicago Bar association this evening. The vice president and Mrs. Marshall will arrive in Chicago this afternoon. They will be the guests for two days of W. F. McLallan, deputy reserve agent of the federal reserve bank of Chicago.

HARRISON COMES OUT STRONG FOR WHOLE TICKET

Support of His Faction Pledged to Sullivan Aldermanic Candidates and Doyle.

Former Mayor Carter H. Harrison made the motion yesterday afternoon, pledging the support of the managing committee, Democratic party of Cook county, to the candidacy of Leo J. Doyle, nominated at the primary last week, for the Municipal court vacancy.

The motion was seconded by Philip J. McKenna and by William L. O'Connell, the Dunne leader in Cook county. Mr. Harrison's motion carried a flat indorsement of all Democratic nominees for aldermen.

First Move Toward Harmony.

This action was taken at a meeting of the managing committee in the party headquarters at the Morrison hotel. It carries big political significance in being the first time in many years of battling that there has been a disposition toward harmony as between the rival factions.

The Sullivan wing, maintaining separate headquarters at Hotel Sherman, put out its list of primary candidates, and won with Doyle for judge and with most of its aldermanic starters. Now comes the Harrison-Dunne-Lewis organization, acquiesces in the primaries, stands for the Sullivan list, and promises to go along.

Harrison Heads Committee.

After this action was taken Mr. Harrison was made chairman of the executive committee, and John J. Bradley, secretary, with the following membership:

John E. Traeger,
Peter Reinberg,
Frank Danisch,
John A. Cervenka,
John J. McLaughlin,
Daniel Ryan,
Joseph O. Kostner,
Richard McGrath,
Frank X. Rydzewski,
Jacob Loeb,
Frank D. Comerford,
Chris. J. McGurn,
Frank Wilson,
Peter J. O'Connor,
William H. Sexton,
Michael A. Schoenwald,
Michael Zimmer,
James S. McInerney,
Wm. L. O'Connell,
William F. Schultz,
Maclay Hoyne,
Michael F. Sullivan,
John Corcoran,
Frank McDonald.

It is understood that there is no relaxation of the contest to hold control of the organization as against the Sullivan people by the Harrison-Dunne combination. The fight in the April 11 primaries for ward committeemen goes along just the same.

FEAR LORIMER CASE DELAY.

Judge Dever May Have to Undergo Slight Operation Before Hearing Is Resumed.

Possibility of another delay in the trial of William Lorimer developed yesterday when it became known that a light operation must be performed on Judge Dever, presiding judge. Judge Dever's illness, accompanied by severe pains about the ears, prevented him from attending court last week. Yesterday, according to Mrs. Dever, physicians discovered the necessity of an operation to relieve congestion in one of the ears.

FLORIDA ORANGE JUICE SQUIRTS IN MAYOR'S EYE.

Growers of Atlantic Coast Fruit Object to Thompson's Decree in Behalf of California's Product.

When Mayor Thomson designated March 18 as "Orange day" and urged Chicagoans to eat California fruit, he injured the pride of the Florida orange growers and secured for himself a box of the Florida variety.

The Florida Citrus exchange sent the mayor a box of oranges with a letter protesting against his discrimination in favor of the California orange in the "Orange day" proclamation which he issued.

"There are many carloads of Florida oranges consumed on this market every week," said the letter, "and we think in justice to the many thousands engaged in growing this fruit in Florida, as well as the large number of dealers engaged in its sale in Chicago, that you should be familiar with the excellent eating qualities of the Florida orange before officially recommending their consumption."

Only 11 Days remain in which to purchase Bartlett Bonds in time to be able to apply them, at the special 5% discount, on the purchase of lots in our first big new bargain Subdivision of the year, to be placed on the market Sunday, April 16 (weather permitting).

(EXPLANATION—Before our Bonds can be converted into a realty purchase, or contract, they must not only be fully paid but at least a month old.)

WE find that some few folks have been holding off on the purchase of their BARTLETT BONDS under the mistaken idea that they can buy the bond on one day and "convert" it on the very next day. Such is emphatically not the case. You can easily see that if we permitted this the Bondholder would not have any great advantage.

¶ As a matter of fact, the Bondholder gets ALL the advantage under our new plan. When we place a new subdivision on the market our Bondholders will be the first to receive knowledge of it; they will be informed two weeks in advance of the opening of it; they will be told the location and invited out to see it. They will have the full two weeks' advance opportunity to make selections and reservation. When they get through picking, we will then throw on the market any lots that are left. But only the Bondholder will get the 5% discount on the prices. Only the Bondholder will receive advance information and be permitted to buy before the official sale. The Bondholder will get first choice. Also 5% discount—don't forget that.

¶ We have 3 big bargain subdivisions at present on the market. Starting April 15th we will begin to open up 3 new ones—"North Shore Acres," "Ravinia Highlands" (Highland Park), and a third one, which is a sort of a secret, but which we can say is one of the largest subdivisions on the Southwest side of the city and the biggest value, we believe, that was ever offered.

¶ We are not saying which of the three it will be, but we will open up the first of them Sunday, April 16th, provided the weather permits.

¶ Now is the time to procure your Bond if you want to be in position to apply it (or convert it) on or before the opening sale of our first big, new subdivision of the year. Better be safe than sorry. Act now! Use the coupon below and send in for full particulars; get your name on our mailing list; become a Preferred Customer. Don't put it off any longer. Send no money. Just write and get the facts.

* * * * * *

WHY do we extend such overtowering advantages to our Bondholders? some may ask who are not thoroughly acquainted with our wonderful new plan of realty purchase.

¶ Because our interests are centered in them.

¶ Because, under this plan, which makes it so easy for everybody to start on the proud road to real estate ownership, we expect to sell (and are selling) twice as much property as we ever sold before. Our selling expenses will be considerably reduced per lot, and we will make more money as a result of our increased business. Why shouldn't we share a part of these savings and these increased earnings with those who make them possible—the buyers of our Bonds?

¶ And this great CO-OPERATIVE movement is gaining new impetus every day. As people begin to learn of its unequaled benefits they are quick to fall in line with the thousands of buyers. Interest is growing daily. The letters we receive from admirers of the plan in every part of the United States are growing more enthusiastic every day. The people are beginning to see in the Bartlett Bond a great public benefaction.

¶ We have been compelled to take additional space on the third floor of our building in order to take care of the growing demands of our Bond Department.

¶ Nor is its success confined to Chicago. Woods Bros., bankers and real estate operators of Lincoln, Nebraska, introduced the Bond, under special license from us, in their community last Sunday. They sold $4,175 worth of these Bonds the first day. Enterprising real estate operators all over the country are preparing to take on the rights to the use of our Bond in their locality for the sale of their property. The Bartlett Bond is sweeping the whole U. S. A.

YOUTH ENDS LIFE; WOMAN AND GIRL TELL OF TROUBLE

Boy of 18, in Note to Mother, Hints He Was Hounded for Overdue Rent.

Weight of woe burdened Vernon Rapp, 18 years old, so that he ended it all yesterday by suicide with gas.

The young man was found dead in his room at the home of Mrs. Rose Rettinger, 170 Hill street. A gas tube extended from the jet to his pillow. On a table near by lay a note to his mother.

A coroner's inquest decided that he had been temporarily insane. His mother, Mrs. Louise Rapp, the wife of Otto Rapp, a grocer at 650 Willow street, testified that the boy suffered from the effects of an attack of typhoid fever of several years ago.

He Left This Note.

In the note, read at the inquest, the boy said:

> This is a cowardly thing to do, but all I can do is just merely exist without some one demanding money every week for keeping their mouth shut. I have lost my job, and merely because a dirty, contemptible woman like Mrs. Mader, 1309 Sedgwick street, wanted $5 of my pay to keep her from getting me in trouble. I must give up. V.

Mrs. Clara Mader testified that the youth and Miss Lillian Erickson of 1145 Townsend street had lived in her home as man and wife. She said they represented themselves as being married and lived there the first two weeks in January. She said she ordered them out when she found they were not married.

Owed Her Room Rent.

Mrs. Mader also said young Rapp had failed to pay her $5 owing for room rent and that she called at the Excelsior Printing company, 712 Federal street, for her money. She said the youth threatened her, whereupon she complained to the superintendent that Rapp had stolen stamps and stationery from the firm. Rapp was discharged.

Miss Erickson, who also is employed at the printing plant, said she called at the boy's rooming house yesterday and found him dead. She said he had been without friends and put out of his own home for a mishap with an automobile which his father had paid for.

"I got him a place with the printing establishment," said Miss Erickson, "and I tried to befriend him as much as I could."

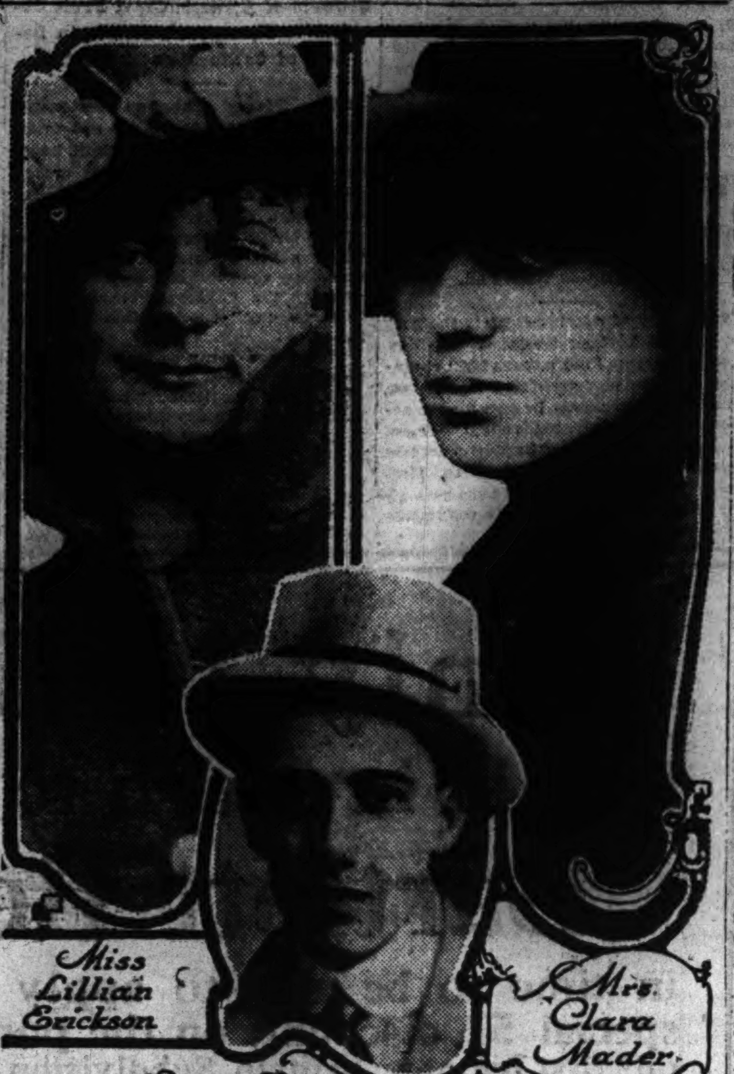
HOLD MEMORIAL SERVICES OF U. OF C. GIRL TODAY.

Student Body Will Honor Miss Margaret Cornelia Green, Victim of Scarlet Fever Epidemic.

The student body of the University of Chicago will hold memorial services in Mandel hall today for Miss Margaret Cornelia Green, who died of scarlet fever on Friday. She was stricken on Wednesday night after she had presided at a meeting at the university for the purpose of raising funds for sending a missionary to India. She was president of the University Young Woman's Christian league.

Miss Green recently joined the Baptist church. It was said about the campus that it was her intense religious conviction that prompted her to resign recently from the Mortar Board, the oldest of the campus woman's clubs.

Boy Suicide Blames Woman.



INCENSED THOMPSON AID FINDS HIS FOE IS WOMAN.

Sues J. Geiger for Slander and Discovers Later That J. Stands for Julia.

Patrick H. Moynahan of the famous Eighth ward, South Chicago, discovered a new hitch in politics yesterday. And that was something for Pat, for it was thought he knew them all.

He is the "Big Bill" Thompson man of the suburb. During the recent campaign there was a hot battle for aldermanic honors, and Moynahan's candidate lost to E. M. Cross. On the side of Cross was J. Geiger, 9919 Ewing avenue. A few months ago Moynahan brought suit against Geiger for $1,000, alleging slander. A letter to Mayor Thompson by Geiger is said to have contained these words:

"Your right hand man down here, Patrick Moynahan, is the man who sold us out to the railroads."

Yesterday a bailiff went to the house at 9919 Ewing avenue. There was no such man as J. Geiger. But there was a Julia Geiger and she admitted she sent the letter. So Moynahan's battle is with a woman.

VIRGINIA SOON TO GO "DRY."

Richmond, Va., March 4.—The lower branch of the Virginia general assembly tonight passed the state-wide prohibition bill, 85 to 5. The bill had passed the senate. One quart of whisky a month a person is the limit placed by the bill on importations of intoxicants from other states. The law will go into operation Nov. 1, 1916.

THEY'LL COME IN PAIRS TO SERVICES TONIGHT.

Twins Respond to Appeal in "The Tribune" for Attendance at Diversey Boulevard Methodist.

Like the shaking of a peach tree in the harvest season was the publication Friday in THE TRIBUNE of his "Twins Wanted" announcedment, Rev. Bert E. Smith, pastor of the Diversey Boulevard Methodist Episcopal church, Diversey boulevard and Seminary avenue, said yesterday. He appealed for twins to be present at the service this evening.

"I have received calls from twenty-four pairs of twins," he said. "Not all can be present tonight at the service, but I expect about fifteen pairs will come.

"THE TRIBUNE pictures did one family a lot of good. A father phoned me he intended to go to Milwaukee for Sunday until he saw the notice in THE TRIBUNE. Then he resolved to come to our service and bring his twin children with him. He then added 'When I read that notice I made up my mind to be a better man and a better father and to bring up my children in the church.'"

TRAPPED VICTIM IS BURNED ALIVE IN TRAIN WRECK

Former Illinoisan Begs Others to Shoot Him—Coaches Go Through Bridge.

Watertown, S. D., March 4.—Passengers on the South Dakota Central train that went through a burning bridge near here today broke down tonight when they told of the death of F. E. Dooling, a Denver traveling salesman, met in the fire that completely destroyed the passenger train. Two were killed and ten injured in the wreck.

Fire destroyed the train in twenty minutes. During this time passengers sought to drag themselves from the débris. Dooling was caught. Flames were rapidly approaching him. Nothing could be done. As the flames got nearer and nearer Dooling shouted his request that he be killed to prevent cremation. His grip contained a revolver, he told passengers.

Trapped Man Burned to Death.

The other passengers retreated several feet. Half an hour later his body, burned to a crisp, was taken from the smoking skeleton of the car.

Dooling, it was reported here tonight, was a former prominent business man of Springfield, Ill., and Democratic candidate for secretary of state of Illinois in 1908. He left Illinois several years ago.

G. S. Lovejoy, mail clerk, a Watertown resident, was the other man killed. He was caught in his car and squeezed to death.

Engineer Robert Maxwell tonight said he saw flames shooting from the bridge when he rounded a curve approaching the bridge. Nothing he could do would stop the train from destruction, he said.

Another Wreck; Three Killed.

Minneapolis, Minn., March 4.—Three men who were on their way from Iowa to Minnesota were killed and five other persons slightly injured when a freight train, standing on a siding, was struck by another freight train on the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha railroad near Mountain Lake, Minn., today, according to reports received by local officials of the line.

BANDITS CASE IN JURY'S HANDS

Bank Robbers May Know Their Fate by This Morning.

COURT IS KEPT OPEN.

criminal that ever sat in a witness chair. He asked why the police had allowed this notorious thief to live for years in fashionable Hyde Park, maintain an expensive flat on the proceeds of his thefts, and keep an electric brougham for his wife.

Hoyne "Gold Bricked."

He declared Mack's confession was not necessary to fasten the crime on its perpetrators. He said State's Attorney Hoyne was "gold bricked" when he accepted Mack's confession in return for immunity.

"Why," said Mr. Heyman, "should Eddie Mack go free and these four boys go to prison for life? Are they not better than Mack? They are all crooks—yes. But at least they did not betray their pals. It was an informer that sent Robert Emmett to the scaffold at 21—one of the brightest minds of any age. It is conceded by masters of law that the testimony of an informer is dangerous to use in any case. It lets down the bars for treachery. No one can tell who will be the next victim.

Eddie Waits Their Doom.

"Eddie Mack is waiting outside the courtroom door to hear the doom of these boys. Mrs. Charles Kramer, a bride of 17, is waiting also for the verdict. If you remember Eddie Mack, don't forget her.

"Give these boys a little bit of what Eddie Mack is to get—liberty without the trimmings.

"A day of reckoning always comes for the Eddie Macks of the world. There is a law of retribution. The scales at last will be balanced. The injustice meted out to these four poor fellows will be righted.

"But there is no place in the world for Eddie Mack. He is inhuman—a monster who would shame hell itself.

"Exercise every reasonable doubt in behalf of these defendants. They are criminals, it is true, but they are human beings, with souls and feelings. They are our brothers. Give them fair play. Let your verdict be guided by a sense of fair play so that to your dying day you may feel that if you erred, you erred on the side of mercy."

Address by Johnston.

Prosecutor Johnston said:

"This crime should justly incite that spirit of detestation and vengeance which such a reckless disregard of human rights provokes. It arouses a pitch of passion in honest citizens which is almost uncontrollable.

"A citizen should at least be able to pursue his lawful calling in the open day in this great city unmolested by brigands and robbers. Chicago is not a frontier town. Yet from the boldness and assurance with which this crime was committed one might imagine we are living in a western mining town of the early day.

Must Cast Them Out.

"Neither the laws of men nor the laws of God have sufficient power to check the utter depravity of these defendants. There is but one thing to do, and that is to cast them out of honest, decent society and to confine them so that they cannot further renew their vicious depredations.

"It is not to them that we owe the fact that human life was not taken. They were fully prepared to mercilessly kill if resistance had been offered.

"The defense, if it may be termed a defense, is nothing more or less than a confession of guilt. It is just such a defense as you would expect to be presented by professional criminals.

"Their attorney has apparently with serious intent urged that this case is a frameup or entrapment. He imagines that he has made his case by merely asking questions. There is absolutely no proof, not even a suggestion or hint, of frameup or entrapment.

"I think the attorney for the defense deserves a decisive rebuke for the wholesale, reckless manner in which he has cast aspersions upon the bank officials and the police."

NINA AND PINTA AGAIN ARE IN PERIL OF DESTRUCTION.

Retired Fire Boat Commander to Sink Caravels in Lake Because of Expense.

The Nina and the Pinta replicas of Columbus caravels again are in danger.

It is said there is a plan on foot to take them out in the lake and destroy them, because they are leaky, unseaworthy, and the cost of their upkeep is high. A year and a half ago they were started to the Panama-Pacific exposition with the Santa Maria, but the Santa Maria went on the rocks and the Nina and Pinta were returned.

"I'm going to make a fight to preserve them," said Capt. Cornelius Hallahan of 9702 Avenue M, a retired fireboat commander. "I think it wrong to destroy them. They should be put in dry dock and repaired. Their destruction would prove that the American people are losing something of their loftier ideals, and for that reason I hate to see it done."

WINTON SIX

Let Us Make for You Just the Proper Thing

If you are in doubt as to the style or size of body that will precisely fill your needs, or if you are uncertain as to the most desirable finishings or color effects for your car, let us help you reach a happy decision.

Sometimes members of one's family have different ideas and are unable to decide just what is best. Or the buyer may be too busy to plan a definite idea for himself. In any such case we are glad to prepare special suggestions for you to consider.

Our body designers and color artists are cheerfully at your service. You are never limited to any set "standard." Your need may be for a distinctly new body arrangement, or a color effect never before seen on the streets, and we are always alert to supply just the proper thing. Let us talk it over with you—simply telephone Calumet 1626.

THE WINTON SIX IS BUILT IN TWO MOTOR AND CHASSIS SIZES—33 AT $2285, AND 48 AT $3500

To the Man with $1000 to Put in a Car

We say to you that absolutely the best car $1000 will buy today in Chicago is the Jeffery "Four."

We say that this is a fact known, we believe, to the entire automobile trade of this city and to such part of the motoring public as have investigated it.

944 Jeffery "Four" cars sold in this territory are 944 reasons for your purchase of this car.

You can't argue with facts.

The value of a motor car is easily measured.

Power, speed, hill climbing ability, "pick up," size, economy, appearance, comfort, finish, the quality of materials and workmanship used in its building, durability, the experience of owners in its use, depreciation, standing in the second-hand market, and the service which goes with its selling—by these essentials this car—any car—may be judged.

We ask of you only this—that we have the opportunity to demonstrate to you the unquestioned superiority of this Jeffery car, at its price, at the earliest possible date convenient to you.

The Thomas B. Jeffery Company
Jeffery
Kenosha, Wis., U.S.A.

We thus urge your early action because the demand for all Jeffery models is so great in Chicago that we face now, March 1st, delivery conditions which would normally obtain 60 days later.

If you are to get a Jeffery car at all you must act quickly.

For weeks past we have suggested this demonstration—any time you wish we will make any comparative tests you name, side by side with any other car selling at this price, and which you can induce to make the trial.

We say—compare this car with every "Four," "Six," "Eight" and "Twelve" sold at around this price. We say that not one other car at the price can match it in power, in flexibility, in economy, in durability, in size and every other essential of a high class motor vehicle, and in the quality of materials and grade of workmanship used in its building.

Not one other car at the price is the equal of this in the beauty of its appearance and the quality of its finish.

Not one other car at the price can match its record for small depreciation. Almost never do you see a second hand Jeffery advertised. We ourselves cannot secure enough to meet the demand.

And remember this—it's as easy to see the inside of this car as the outside. The car is built but an hour away. We will gladly take you to the factory and give you a demonstration such as you have never seen of how good a motor car can be built.

Try This Test on a Man with a "Six" to Sell

The new Jeffery Light "Six" is sold on this basis: It will outdemonstrate any other "Six" in its class. We invite a side by side road test (if you can find any other maker who will risk the test) through sand and mud—over any hill. Starting at two to five miles per hour, this car will pull a grade faster at the top of a hill than any other car in its class.

We invite this side by side comparison in any sort of a demonstration you wish. The beauty of the body and the quality of the workmanship in this car speak for themselves.

COURT SEIZES A 'SHADY' HOTEL UNDER NEW LAW

The Metz Is First to Feel Force of Abatement Act Passed Last Year.

BY THE REV. W. B. NORTON.

The Metz hotel at 536 North Clark street is the first of the shady hotels to feel the full force of the injunction and abatement law enacted last year. It is believed to be the first case of a permanent injunction issued in Illinois under the new law. Judge Jesse A. Baldwin in the Circuit court entered a decree yesterday ordering the hotel placed in the custody of the court and closed for all purposes for one year, directing also that all of the movable property and fixtures be sold by the sheriff to satisfy the costs of the proceeding.

Joy for Thrasher.

Samuel P. Thrasher, superintendent of the Committee of Fifteen, rejoiced over what he called the effectiveness of the new law and predicted further injunctions against other hotels before the close of another week.

"That the hotel owners and lessees understand the drastic character of the new injunction and abatement law," said Mr. Thrasher, "is evident by the prompt action of most of them following a warning notice sent to them.

"We sent out 157 of these warnings. They were not legal warnings, but were simply letters of information concerning the nature of the new law. Of these, 145 acted.

Other Proceedings Due.

"A temporary injunction has been issued against three of the twelve remaining places. After our investigators check up on the remaining nine any who are found defying the law will be proceeded against.

"The decree in the case of the Metz hotel was issued against Dave Smith and Mary Smith, among the most persistent and troublesome offenders."

DENIES LEARNING PARTNER IS TO BE SHOT IN MEXICO

Wisconsin Doctor Answers Rumors That American Was Sentenced to Death by Carranzistas.

Superior, Wis., March 4.—"I have received absolutely no word stating that Dr. J. A. Reno, my former partner, is to be shot in Mexico March 15," Dr. J. A. Adams said here tonight. "I am quite sure there is nothing to the story.

"The only thing I have recently heard from Dr. Reno is a letter from him about a week ago, and he seemed in no danger. He has been conducting a hospital in western Mexico. Nothing has ever happened to indicate he has been in any trouble."

A report that gained wide publicity was that Dr. Adams had received a telegram stating Dr. Reno was to be shot at sunrise March 15 at Mazatlan, Mexico, by Carranzista authorities.

SHIPPING AND RAILWAY MEN TO DISCUSS FREIGHT TIEUP.

Both Groups Will Be Represented at Inquiry Instituted by Commerce Commission Tomorrow.

New York, March 4.—Telegrams received at the Merchants' Association of New York today from Chicago, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, and other cities indicated that shippers throughout the middle west and the east are planning to be represented at the interstate commerce commission hearing in Washington on Monday, on the causes of freight congestion at eastern railroad terminals.

It was stated here that the railroads which are members of the Trunk Lines association, as well as the New York, New Haven, and Hartford and other roads, together with the American Railway association, the Merchants' association, and other organizations, will be represented also.

VERY CHARMING—

Is This—Er—Young Girl or Young Man?

Frank Grover

This charming and beautiful young man—yes, young man—will make his appearance on the Chicago stage on the evening of March 25 at the Auditorium theater, when the Chicago alumni of the University of Michigan will stage the annual opera played by a student troupe of 100 Ann Arbor men, especially imported. There will be chorus girls, chorus men, singing and dancing, and all sorts and varieties of special features by the youthful disciples of Percy Hammond's ambi-sextrous Julian Eltinge. The costumes will be "better, brighter, and briefer" than ever is the word from the student master of publicity, urging that "really, double prices should be charged for the bald-headw rows."

"CALABRESE" EQUIVALENT OF "CEASE THIS FLIRTING."

Market Proprietor Warned That if He Looks at Her Again Biggest Part of His Body Will Be Ear.

For the life of him, Yelle Canzillo, proprietor of a meat market at 1148 Polk street, cannot recall making eyes at any pretty young signora.

But nevertheless he is frightened. Vengeance of a Calabrian has been declared upon him, a Neapolitan. His fear is so pregnant that he has appealed to Capt. "Barney" Baer for aid, and policemen have been instructed to watch his market.

Here is the "threat of a Calabrese" that has been turned over to Capt. Baer:

> I write you these words to advise you when you see my sweetheart in your store to not entertain her and not salute her for a long time. As you are a Neapolitan and I am Calabrese and the Calabrese have a solid head and the brains wise. Think that if you do another glance at that girl the biggest part of your body will be your ear. You have to think that I am on your track every minute so much I could see you are too secret. You think I am young. I am 22 years of age and my blood boils in my veins. I write but my hands are shaking. Just last night I saw your operations.

DECREE RECALLS RAID ON HOTEL TO RESCUE GIRL

A. L. Streeter, Once Wealthy Manufacturer, Gets Divorce from Wife.

An echo of the unfragrant turmoil that resulted in exposing conditions in the infamous Rensu hotel in Wabash avenue in 1906 was heard yesterday when A. L. Streeter was given a decree of divorce from his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Streeter.

Streeter was once the wealthy manufacturer who was accused of the abduction of Margaret Burke of Duck Creek, Wis. He is said to have brought her to Chicago through agents and to have maintained this 17 year old girl in the Rensu hotel.

The Rensu was raided and the Burke girl arrested. She told the police she had been abducted by an agent of Streeter. She was sent to the Geneva Home for Girls. Later she was paroled to a supposed "cousin." It was later found that there had been chicanery used in the release of the girl, but all charges were dropped by State's Attorney Wayman.

Streeter spent three years in Canada, where he was free from extradition, and later he returned to Chicago. It is said that he has lost his money and is now living at the Grace hotel. He denied that his wife had left him because of the Burke scandal, but said because of his health. Streeter has been a sufferer from paralytic strokes.

WANTS HIS BABY EXECUTED; DOCTORS MAY CURE DEFECTS

Plea of Iowan to Have Deformed Child Put to Death Brings Offers from Surgeons.

Des Moines, Ia., March 4.—A baby apparently doomed to a life of invalidism was assured of a chance of normal existence tonight because its father asked to have it executed.

The publicity that followed Charles Cleveland's request to legally kill his deformed baby daughter, Dorothy, led to offers of a dozen surgeons to correct the child's defects.

While the infant lay at a local hospital tonight, being prepared by nurses for the operations which within a few days will be performed to remold a face missing in some of its features, the child's mother rejoiced.

CLYNE ASKS AID FOR JUDGES.

Washington, D. Senator Lewis probably will introduce such a bill.

KIRMESS SEEKS $100,000 FUND

MARCH 28 TO APRIL 5.

Plans for the charity kirmess to be held in the Coliseum the last of March and the first week in April were announced yesterday by Otto C. Schneider, former president of the board of education, who is at the head of the executive committee.

In coöperation with Mrs. Carl Buhl, who is chairman of the women's auxiliary, Mr. Schneider has closed contracts with architects and artists that mean the transforming of the Coliseum into a fairyland of booths and old world scenes.

Seek $100,000 War Fund.

The committee estimates $100,000 will be turned over to the German war sufferers in Europe as a result of the affair. Last year at Bismarck garden several days of rain hurt the festival.

Mrs. Buhl has, with the assistance of her committees been working steadily since the first of the year.

"We have been holding meetings three times a week," said Mrs. Buhl. "and the spirit shown has been encouraging. We will have Mrs. Theodore Brentano in charge of the champagne booth, the Baroness von Reiswitz in the relief society booth, and some of the others who have taken booths are Mrs. Albertina Meixner, Mrs. Dr. C. T. Hood, Mrs. Kate Hirtenstein, Mrs. Oscar F. Mayer, Mrs. Richard Schmidt, Mrs. Henry Bartholomay, Mrs. Paul F. Mueller, and Mrs. Louis Guenzel.

"The Chicago Singverein will have charge of the music, and provision has been made to have some kind of music all the time. Then, too, there will be a Kaiser William theater, and the best attractions are being booked."

Drills and Dances.

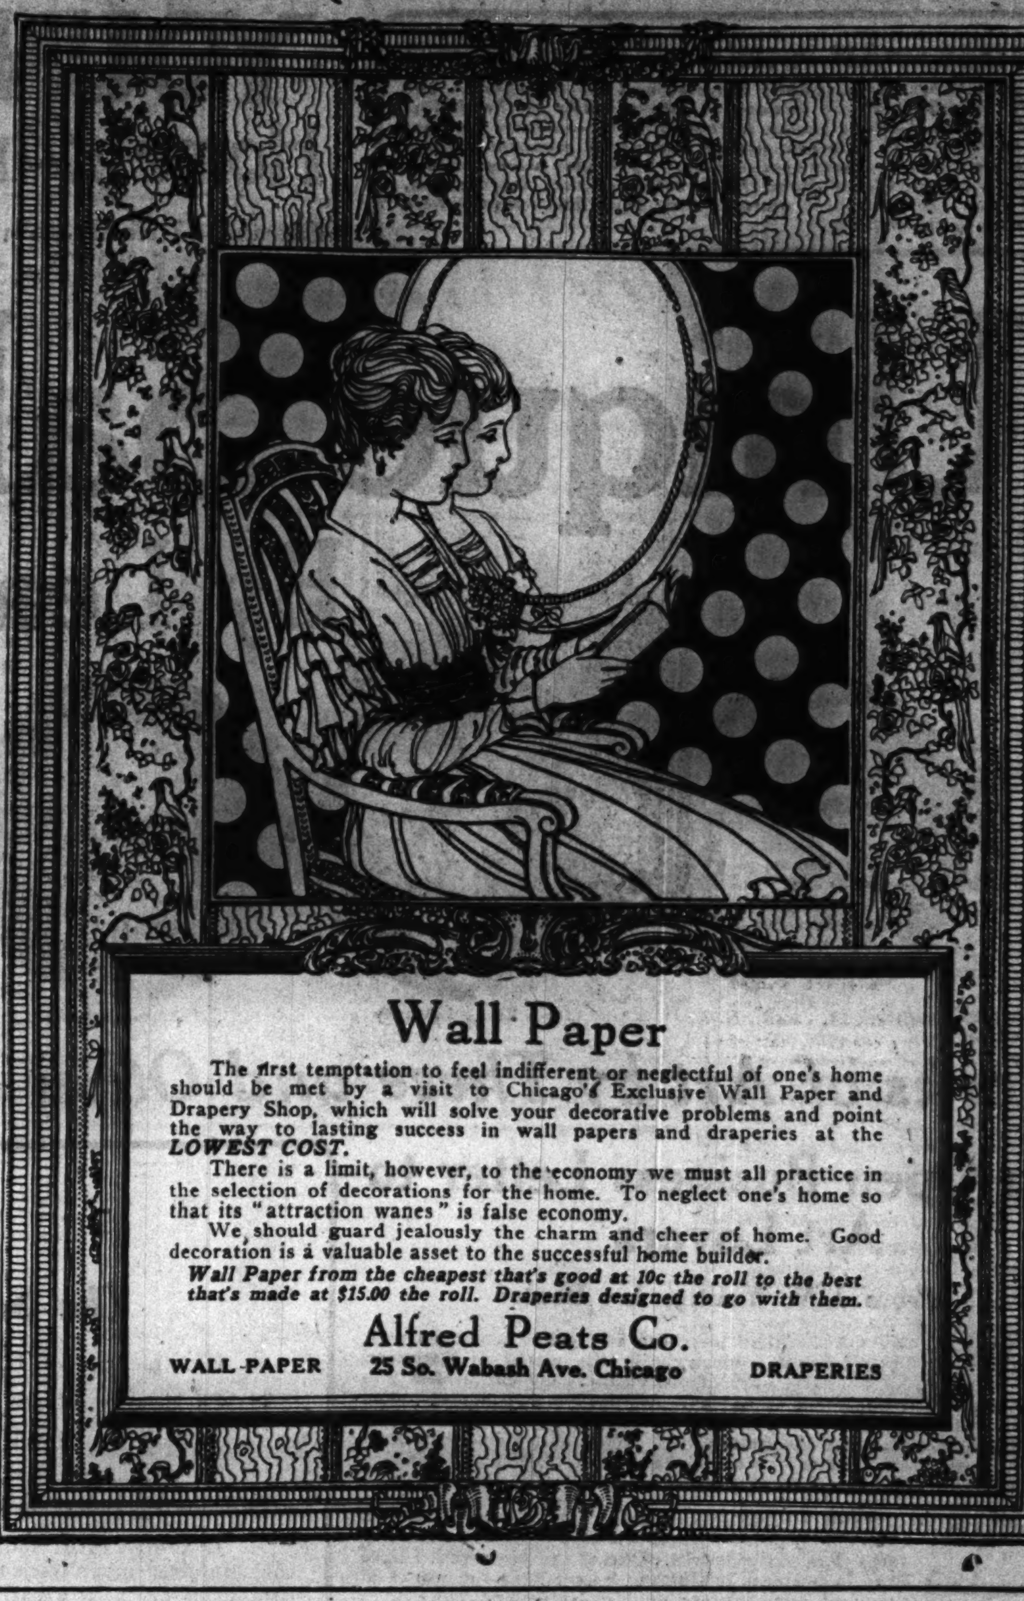
Various organizations have gone into the work, and during the kirmess there will be drills and dances nearly every day. These exhibitions will be entirely separate from the dancing for the public, for which music has been provided every afternoon and evening.

An especially attractive booth will be the one maintained by the Association of the Destitute Blind under the direction of Mrs. Hood. There will be big and little dolls, funny dolls, and pretty dolls; in fact, dolls of every sort imaginable.

The kirmess will open March 28 and run through to April 5, inclusive.

Law Freshmen Hold Banquet.

The freshman class of the Hamilton College of Law gave a banquet last evening at the rose room in the Hotel Sherman with twenty-four of the class in attendance.



Wall Paper

The first temptation to feel indifferent or neglectful of one's home should be met by a visit to Chicago's Exclusive Wall Paper and Drapery Shop, which will solve your decorative problems and point the way to lasting success in wall papers and draperies at the LOWEST COST.

There is a limit, however, to the economy we must all practice in the selection of decorations for the home. To neglect one's home so that its "attraction wanes" is false economy.

We should guard jealously the charm and cheer of home. Good decoration is a valuable asset to the successful home builder.

Wall Paper from the cheapest that's good at 10c the roll to the best that's made at $15.00 the roll. Draperies designed to go with them.

Works of Art by These and Other Men Will Be Sold by J. W. Young for What They Will Bring

An Open Business Letter to Art Lovers

From J. W. Young, Art Dealer

YOUNG'S ART GALLERIES were the first galleries opened west of New York to deal exclusively in the works of American painters. In the early days of our business my enthusiasm was so great it ran ahead of its day. Art dealers and picture lovers laughed at my enthusiastic support of native art. My motto from the first was "American Art for Americans." Some of my business competitors facetiously said that I would have great difficulty in finding Americans for American art.

American Art Triumphant

Now all this is changed. Nearly every dealer in the country finds it more difficult to sell foreign pictures than native works. During the years that I have been in business in Chicago I have seen the works of many of our painters double, treble and more than quadruple in value. Many of the early patrons of my galleries own American pictures purchased from me that are worth many times what they gave for them. But, what is far more important to collectors, they own in these works, pictures which have become so precious and dear to their owners that if they were to part with them, even at a very large price, they would still feel they had suffered a great loss in selling.

My business as an art dealer has been successful, and I have been enriched in ways that I value more than money. I enjoy today the friendship of a large number of America's foremost painters and I enjoy the friendship and patronage of nearly every important collector of good works of art in the Central West, between Duluth on the north and Memphis on the south. When a man has the friendship of thousands of those fine spirits who produce good works of art, and thousands more kindred spirits among those who love, enjoy and own fine works of art, he has a rare privilege. This is a privilege which I hope I deserve and I try to appreciate.

Art on a Business Basis

Every successful business enterprise must be founded upon elemental business principles. In buying pictures my endeavor has always been to buy direct from the artist for cash and always to buy, not the lowest priced picture that the artist produces, but his very best work.

The element of expense in the picture business is the one that causes so many dealers to fail. It is less expensive to sell a fine work of art that is attractive than a poor picture that is so unattractive it demands great salesmanship. Hence, the dealer who buys cheap pictures must always spend large sums to sell them. My galleries have reduced selling expense to the minimum by always having the best.

Broad, beautiful show windows, filled with lovely pictures, on fashionable thoroughfares, are very fine to look at, but I have always found that landlords ask such large rents for such shops that I could not afford this kind of place for my business and still give my patrons good value. So my galleries have always been located several stories above the street level where rents are much lower. Those who know where good pictures are to be seen will come to an upstairs gallery to see them, just as the bee that once finds a blossom which yields sweet honey will return again and again to get nectar from the same flower.

Handicap of Upstairs Gallery

I have never found it difficult to hold the patrons who have made purchases at my galleries; they will come again. But it is always difficult to attract the picture buyer to the gallery above the street level for a first visit. I know that my galleries at present contain as fine examples by as many great American painters as any galleries in the country. These pictures have been selected with the most painstaking care. I have spared neither time nor money in getting this collection together. Experience has taught me that if you have confidence in the public the public will have confidence in you if you deserve it, and I believe that there are a great many who never have been patrons of my gallery who would become patrons if they knew of the art treasures that I have collected and am offering.

My Amazing Offer

So in order to induce you, Mr. Picture Buyer, to come to my place, I have selected 125 pictures from my collection and submit them to you during the month of March in this sale at your own price. I believe this is the most generous offering that any one ever has made in the history of the art business in Chicago. Every picture in this sale will positively be sold at whatever price the public is willing to pay for it. There is no reserve whatever. Every one who makes an offer on a picture will get the picture at his offer unless some other buyer offers more. The plan of this sale is fully described on this page under the heading "Plan of Sale." My reputation is too valuable for me to permit anything else but a square deal in every transaction in my galleries.

All Need Art

We live in a great country—your country and mine—at a great period in the history of that country. We have an art in our country that is rich, inspiring and beautiful. You need to know more about it. Your mind needs to come under the influence of great pictures, as flowers need the dew and the sunshine. You will have finer thoughts, perform greater deeds and enjoy life more fully if you will make the thought and feeling that our great artists express in their canvases a part of your mental furniture for a lifetime by owning good works of art for your own home and having them in your every day environment. I am trying to appreciate the privilege that I have in serving you by securing for you the best that American painters produce.

Art Dealers Benefit City

Chicago needs every art dealer that she has. She needs the best men and the best women in the art business—men who know good pictures and who deal in them fairly, so that when the stranger comes to our city he will find offered to him, on fair, square terms, beautiful pictures. Men of wealth will come more frequently to our city on this account. They will stay longer to see the fine works of art that our dealers have. If the stranger in our midst prolongs his visit, the hotels, the theaters, and every merchant in every line of business will be benefited.

We have in Chicago a wonderful group of painters just rising to fame. They need the services of the dealer who can appreciate talent even before the public is aware of and clamoring for their works. We should so patronize these artists in our own city that they will want to remain and become a part of Chicago's life. I am coming to realize more and more fully the duties and responsibilities that come to one who deals in pictures in Chicago. I am hoping to become more and more useful both to the artist who needs my services to make his work known to the picture buyer and to that large and ever increasing number of intelligent and refined people who want beautiful works of art. If you are one of this cultured class, I invite you most heartily to my galleries. I want your acquaintance and trust that you will feel that the pictures I have to offer deserve your patronage.

PLAN OF SALE

The Sale Opens Tomorrow, March 6th, at 8 A. M.

Each picture will be for sale during the entire week beginning March 6th at the price stated in illustrated catalog.

On Monday, March 13th, pictures not previously sold will be for sale at 5% reduction from catalog prices.

On Tuesday, March 14th, pictures not previously sold will be for sale at 10% reduction from catalog prices.

On Wednesday, March 15th, pictures not previously sold will be for sale at 15% reduction from catalog prices, and each day a 5% reduction will be made from the catalog price until all are sold.

If any pictures should receive no offers during this sale, all such works will be given away on the 26th day of the sale, the first buyer from the sale being entitled to first choice of all unsold works, but cannot select works priced in the catalog as being of greater value than the amount of his purchases from this sale.

Any one visiting this sale during the week of March 6th may leave an offer to buy any picture in the sale at an amount equal to the price of the picture during any particular day later in the sale. That is, any time after the opening of the sale a bid of 5% or 10% or 15%, or any multiple of 5% of the catalog price, may be made for any picture offered, and if no better offer is made until the picture reduces itself to the price the bidder offers, the work will be sold even if only the one bid is made.

But should another bidder make a higher bid, I will undertake to advise the earlier bidder that his bid has been raised, so that he can again raise the bid if he so desires.

I require each bidder not known to me to leave a sufficient deposit to guarantee the good faith of his offer. Such deposit will be immediately returned in case the picture is sold to a higher bidder.

All bidders are required to give their names and addresses, which are registered in a book that is open to any bidder in this sale, so that all may know that each bidder is making a bona fide offer to buy.

All pictures purchased during this sale must be paid for on the day purchased, or satisfactory settlement made. All works sold must be removed by or at the expense of the buyer if sold for less than catalog price.

EXACTLY HOW THIS PLAN WORKS

THE above plan enables buyers to purchase any picture in the collection at their own price. I know the plan is so open and fair that no one who considers it closely can fail to be convinced of its honesty. I have tried to explain it fully to avoid personal explanations at the gallery while we are busy—and you may rest assured we will be busy.

We will make a concrete example of "Bruin's Sermon" by Wm. H. Beard, No. 7 on the list, using this because it happens to be the first in the catalog priced at $100, thus making it easier to follow:

Suppose Mr. A. comes to our sale Monday, March 6th, and is interested in buying this picture. While he may consider it well worth the $100, at which we have listed it, he will naturally want to buy it for the lowest possible price. Under the conditions he can leave a bid as low as 5% of the catalog price, i. e., $5.00. This bid is entered in our book as the 5% bid on this work, and Mr. A. generally gives us his telephone number with advice to call him up if any one raises his bid. Later Mr. B. comes in, who also wants to buy the same picture, and finds that only the ridiculously low bid of 5% has been made on the work and plans how he can get it for the lowest price possible. If he has never attended one of my sales before he usually gives us the next highest bid above the 5% bid made by Mr. A., that is 10%, or $10.00, which we register as we did A.'s $5.00 bid. We then endeavor to advise A. as soon as possible that B. has raised A.'s offer for the picture and give him a chance to again raise B.'s offer of $10.00. Mr. A. has full chance to learn from our book who Mr. B. is and get his address and determine whether the bid is bona fide.

If Mr. A. or Mr. B. have, either of them, been patrons of my former sales and are interested deeply in securing "Bruin's Sermon," No. 7 on the catalog, which they believe to be really worth the $100.00 I ask for it, they have learned by experience that often the best plan is to put on a fair bid of say 50% of the catalog price, or $50.00, and thus forestall any interest that the bargain hunters that always come to these sales may have in this particular work. Very often in this way, by making a medium price bid, a picture will be sold at a lower price than if it were started at the lowest bid possible to be made. Again I have seen what I considered to be the very best work offered in former sales go for a very low percentage of the catalog price (which I consider a fair price always), so I have no advice to give patrons as to the amount they should bid on any work in order to eventually get it at the most favorable price. I am here to sell to you at your own offer if no one overbids you.

But let us return to A. and B. and "Bruin's Sermon," No. 7 in the catalog. After A. raises B.'s $10.00 bid by offering $15.00, we then advise B., who again raises A., and possibly by this time Mr. C. and even D. may be competing for the acquisition of the work, until at the close of business, Saturday, March 11th, the picture has not yet been sold at the catalog price of $100.00, but stands at $90.00, bid by Mr. A. On Monday, March 13th, Mr. B. offers $95.00, the price at which the picture is sold on that day of this sale. It would not be fair to give the work to B., since A. has been the bidder up and has had no chance to raise B.'s bid, so we give A. the chance to meet B.'s price of $95.00, and if he does not do this the picture goes to B. at $95.00. But should A. have a bid of $90.00 on the picture at the close of business Saturday, March 11th, and should that bid not be raised during Monday, March 13th, the picture then goes to him at $90.00, and in case his first bid of $5.00 should not be raised, but should stand until the last day of the sale, he gets the picture for $5.00.

The only advice I care to give to prospective buyers is this: Early patrons of this sale are certain to have the chance to cover the pictures they like with the lowest bids. I can only say that after opening of business at 8 A. M. Monday, March 6th, I consider these pictures no longer mine, and will conduct this sale in exact conformity with the above rules in the hope to make every patron of this sale a further patron of my galleries.

Data About the Pictures in This Sale and Those Who Painted Them

Many of the painters represented are artists of international fame, members of the National Academy, Chicago Society of Artists and other leading art societies, who have received honors, medals and prizes from great museums or international exhibitions.

WHEN a collection of pictures of the importance of this one is offered at whatever price the public is willing to give, I am quite certain that many who read this page will at once say that Young has gathered up a motley collection of pictures among which are unimportant works by a number of famous artists, studio sketches or pictures discarded from collections. I pledge you that many of the pictures offered in this collection are as fine works as these artists produce. I have enough confidence in this collection not only to risk my reputation in offering it, but sufficient confidence to use this entire page to call these paintings to the attention of the art lovers of the Mid-West. I realize that many of you who read this know good pictures as well as I do, and I do not intend to say a word in praise of this collection that is not justified. I have confidence that the works I am offering in this sale have such beauty and merit in them that they will bring fair prices. I have confidence in the judgment of the thousands of picture lovers in this community. If the works in this collection do not justify this confidence, I have not selected them wisely.

William M. Chase, N. A.

It will be impossible to write the art history of our country in our generation without giving Chase a large part in it. Scores of our most talented artists are proud to have been his pupils. Undoubtedly, he has painted more famous men and women of our country in his day than any other artist. He himself believes his still life painting will make his name live longer than anything else he has done.

"The Old Black Pot," offered in this collection, is a fine example of his work and of true museum or collector's quality.

Emil Carlsen, N. A.

In Emil Carlsen we have another great master of painting. There is such consummate beauty in his still life paintings that, if he had painted nothing else, they would give him a great place in the world of art. He is represented in nearly every important museum in our country.

"Ripe and Ready," in this collection, has in it wonderful simplicity. He has used a yellow pumpkin and a green hubbard squash, broken open to show the golden meat, to produce a picture that speaks for him as a great painter.

Charles Warren Eaton.

Charles Warren Eaton has endeared himself to thousands of picture lovers by the quiet, dignified, stateliness of his paintings of the pine forests. "Pines at Sunset," selected for this sale, is a good sized canvas well representing Eaton and has in it the quality that charms us most in his work.

Edward H. Potthast, N. A.

Edward H. Potthast has been a famous painter for a great many years. Probably no artist of our day is more versatile than Potthast. His paintings from our own Rockies, or the Alps, give him high rank as a painter of mountains. Several such works I have in my gallery. The two moonlights in this collection have something of the poetic fascination we find in Corot's work, while the "Boats at Rockport," a third offering, might make us think of Thaulow. Potthast's pictures may remind us of other artists, but never in a way to allow us to forget Potthast for a moment.

Alice Schille.

Alice Schille's pictures, of which I own a number, have been great favorites in all the leading water color exhibitions of our country for quite a number of years. I cannot remember any one since Winslow Homer's time that seems to have won picture lovers quite so completely with water color painting as Miss Schille, and there is something about her work that in some ways reminds us of Homer. That her work is beginning to meet with the highest approval of her fellow artists is proven by the fact that she was given the Gold Medal for water color at the San Francisco Fair, the only prize of that kind that I remember in an international exposition since a similar prize was given to Homer at the Pan-American Exposition in Buffalo some years ago.

"The Little Nurse," offered in this sale, was given the prize over all water colors at the Woman's Art Club of New York.

Frederick J. Waugh, N. A.

The two great paintings by Frederick J. Waugh that are owned in the Art Institute have made his work well known to everybody that likes pictures. It is very seldom that Waugh paints marines or coast scenes successfully on small canvases, but these two little pictures, "Sunset, Monhegan Island," and "Noon, Monhegan Island," represent him at his best.

John Elwood Bundy.

Mr. Bundy's pictures of the country about Richmond and particularly his paintings of the woodlands are treasured by many who own his works and admired by every one who sees them in the public exhibitions. I feel that I have been very generous to my patrons in offering eight of his pictures in this sale. Several of them are smaller works, one or two of them quite sketchy, but at least three of them are quite important in size and have in them the quality that has endeared his pictures to so many.

Wilson H. Irvine.

Wilson H. Irvine is one of own Chicago men. We like a man; we enjoy his pictures, every one seems happy to think a self-taught Chicago artist has ly had so many honors and success. "Summer Days" is a ture that will please many and no doubt create a great interest this sale.

Alfred Jansson

Alfred Jansson in "Early Snow" has given us the true feeling of the charm of an early winter day such a manner as to make this picture desired by many.

Karl A. Buehr

Karl A. Buehr, has lived Chicago nearly all his life. worked his own way through Art Institute, after which he several years abroad. "At the Lily Pond" has in it so much of tenderness, so much of refinement beauty, that one must say this picture is just like Buehr.

Edgar S. Cameron

Edgar S. Cameron has been a cessful painter for a long Not long ago he spent two years newing old acquaintances and iting familiar scenes in Europe where he had studied as a man. It was from this trip brought back "The House on the Bridge, Pont-Aven," that spot loved by artists. He ticularly happy in rendering mystery of moonlight, and has en us a lovely picture.

Frank C. Peyraud

No more earnest painter entire self unsparingly to his than does Frank C. Peyraud. pictures of the hills and valleys the country not a great from Chicago have won him attention. "A May Morning" ever, was painted last year a trip that he made to the shires.

Alson Skinner Clark.

Alson Skinner Clark was here, but has painted in many "Chicago Street, Winter," any one in a most unmistak manner that it was painted where on the west side.

George F. Schultz.

We all know George F. as a painter who has developed own individuality in art, self The three pictures in this sale gained during a summer the coast of Maine.

A. Maestro Valerio.

A. Maestro Valerio is a late rival in the field of local art. talent as an art student the highest honors in Italy. "Storm Bound Boulevard," ing Washington boulevard in the of the blizzard, will prove surprise to his friends who him only as a portrait painter.

In Karl Krafft and A. H. many who have a right to tain of their opinions have two young painters promise and will be pleased Mr. Krafft's "Golden Cloud" Schmidt's "A Quiet French

Among the most earnest at the Art Institute some was C. W. Clarke, who studied signing there, and who later the knowledge that he thus to become a successful manu ing jeweler. I think the works I offer by him worthy attention.

Several eastern painters works are offered in this sale younger men who promise I have selected specially ples by Gilchrist, Cornoyer, Haven, Bicknell, and others.

Indiana has given us many talented artists, none show more talent than Glenn shaw. I have quite a number pastels that I think are beautiful, and have selected in this sale four of his pictures.

Henry M. Kitchell

Long ago Blakelock and friend, Kitchell, could not living painting pictures, but well decorating Vernis Martin niture until the furniture failed. Blakelock kept on masterpieces with a starving around him. One of his pictures cently brought $20,000.00. feeling he owed his first duty family, found other employment til his children were grown. when he returned to painting, ers bought his pictures quickly, to his chagrin he soon found offered as the works of Blakelock. He is making a great effort his pictures with dealers who sell them honestly. We half dozen works of his in this fully show his talent in a way no careful student of could mistake for the latter's

The two works shown by Alten are in this artist's The pictures by the two James and William Beard, plain the great popularity artists several years ago. number of pictures by a taught Wisconsin painter, Schneller, are certain to at very near the modest ed in the catalog. Smith has never painted ter colors than these two pictures.

I notice in these sales that best works sell for a very other pictures, more showy true worth, bring comparatively prices. There are many that will afford the buyer with of art an opportunity to for a modest sum.

WAR SPEEDS UP INITIATION OF NEW CITIZENS

Current of Immigration Turns from American Shores Since 1914.

PUBLIC RECEPTIONS PLANNED.

BY HENRY M. HYDE.

The great war has entirely reversed the current of immigration. More aliens have gone back to Europe during the last six months than have entered the United States. On the first of the year there were actually fewer people of European birth in this country than there were on July 1.

And the fire under the melting pot is still blazing—more brightly than ever before. In Chicago, for instance, nearly 1,000 more aliens were naturalized last year than during any previous year. The various courts turned out new citizens to the number of nearly 8,700.

Almost as many aliens filed their first papers, in spite of the stoppage of immigration, as during any previous twelve months. In fact, only two years show a larger number of filings since Chicago became a great foreign center.

Naturalization to Grow.

So long as the war continues it is certain that the Americanization of aliens will increase in rapidity. With the supply of raw material entirely shut off and the machinery for making citizens working at its normal speed there will be daily less reason to complain that the United States is unable to assimilate its foreign born population.

In some cities active movements are under way to stimulate naturalization. In Detroit several corporations have announced that they will not employ men who are not citizens or who have not at least taken out their first papers. They will not discharge aliens already in their employ, but notice is given that such men will not be promoted to places of responsibility.

For the purpose of making it easier for alien employés to prepare for citizenship a number of corporations, some in Detroit and others in Chicago and other cities, have opened evening or other schools of their own. The examination which an alien candidate for American citizenship is now required to pass would probably stump at least half of the native born voters. At these schools, supported by private companies, the immigrants are not only taught to read and write English but are given special instruction in the subjects on which the applicant for his last papers is most closely quizzed.

Government Increases Interest.

Within the last few months the national government has begun to take a more active interest in the work of making American citizens out of alien immigrants. The bureau of naturalization has prepared a course of study in citizenship, for use in the public schools and by other agencies which are holding classes for the instruction of immigrants. The course has already been adopted for use in the public night schools of Chicago and some 600 other cities have also taken it up.

This course is planned for men who are practically illiterate when they begin the work. It covers two years' continuous work on the part of such a pupil. Men who are better informed when they start the course will be able to complete it in less time. The government will issue a certificate or diploma of graduation to each alien who completes the course in any of the schools of the country.

Receptions to New Citizens.

With the idea of further impressing on the new citizen the responsibilities as well as the privileges which citizenship carries with it, government officials are now encouraging annual receptions to newly naturalized immigrants in the various large cities of the country. Such receptions were held in Chicago last year and the year before.

This year it has been suggested that the City club take up the plan and make the holding of a reception for the 9,000 new citizens of Chicago a feature of its year's work. If such an arrangement is made it is hoped that President Wilson will come to Chicago to make the address of welcome.

Among the foreigners naturalized in Chicago, former subjects of Austria-Hungary, including Poles, Bohemians, and Hungarians, make up a quarter of the total. Immigrants from Russia, consisting mostly of Jews, come next in number. Great Britain, with 16 per cent of the total is third, and Germany, with 14 per cent is fourth. Sweden furnishes 7 per cent of the new citizens, and Italy only 5 per cent.

National Job Bureaus.

Another new activity of the government of special interest to immigrants is the establishment of national employment agencies in a number of cities all over the country. The services of these agencies, which are free, are equally open to men and women who are already citizens.

Since immigration stopped, the demand for all kinds of labor, even skilled labor in many lines, has gone somewhat ahead of the supply. Last month, for instance, the local agency of the government service placed over 1,000 people in positions and it now has openings for nearly as many more on its books. It is especially interested in finding positions on farms for men or families who have been accustomed to farm work in the old country.

A still later development is the proposed establishment in a big building on the west side of a joint employment agency, in which the national government, the state and city will coöperate, the head of the three bureaus having their central offices adjoining. By this combination it is hoped that both the supply of labor and of jobs will be largely increased, while more careful attention can be given to picking the right man for the place in each individual instance.

"JUST ONE MORE SKATE"

Youngsters at Lake Shore Drive Playground Turn Out on Ice While It Lasts.

Eleanor McCormick

JACK FROST is packing up his snows, ice ponds, chilly windows, and other wintry theatricals to make room for spring's flowery samples. One of the ponds that still is sheeted thick enough for skating is that at the children's playgrounds at Delaware place and Lake Shore drive.

Scores of youngsters were out yesterday enjoying what may be the last bit of skating this winter, for unless a freeze stiffens the ice the sport will be closed down.

Among those who were at the playgrounds skating were little Eleanor McCormick, daughter of Robert Hall McCormick Jr., Reinette Thompson, Tommy Tyler, and Dexter Fairbank.

HAWAIIAN SUGAR CANE SHIPMENTS START EAST.

First of 160 Trainloads for Eastern Refineries Passes Through Chicago to Avoid Ocean Freight Rate

The first trainload of raw cane sugar ever transported across the United States passed through Chicago territory yesterday.

The first trainload carried more than 8,000 tons of raw Hawaiian sugar, which left San Francisco Feb. 24. According to A. W. Davis, who is in Chicago representing the domestic sugar producers, the consignment of sugar is valued at $25,000,000. It is shipped in trains of fifty cars and it will require more than 8,000 cars to transport it all. The sugar trains will be given the right of way over everything except live stock trains.

The freight cost for moving the sugar is more than $3,000,000.

"We are shipping the sugar across the continent because the price of shipping it by water is so high," Mr. Davis said.

"Sugar will not rise in price in the United States because of the war."

NO WONDER SHE FLED, AND IN EVANSTON, TOO.

In Which an Absent Minded Young Woman Discovered What the Crowd Was Laughing At.

According to THE TRIBUNE'S correspondent, this happened in Evanston:

A well dressed young woman, carrying a gold headed parasol, came into the Church street electric station. In an absent minded sort of way she swung the parasol backward and forward as she waited. Then she went into the dressing room and reappeared in a few minutes. She sat down in the same seat she had occupied before and again, in an absent minded sort of way, she swung backward and forward an object in her hand.

Suddenly she observed the amusement of other persons in the waiting room. She looked down at the object. It was not the gold headed parasol. It was the rubber capped "swab stick" used by the janitor to clean drain pipes.

In her flight she left the gold handled parasol.

SLATTERYS' HOTEL BILL BOOSTED TO $12 A DAY.

Sherman House Advances Rate of Speaker and Wife Who Have Held Anti-Catholic Meetings.

Joseph Slattery and his wife, Mary E. Slattery, who claim to be ex-priest and former nun of the Catholic church and who have been holding anti-Catholic meetings in Chicago attended by rioting, were notified that the rate of their room at the Sherman house had been raised from $4 to $12 per day.

"We have been presented with a bill for $12 per day and we have had it photographed and the photographs have been sent round to some prominent persons," said Mrs. Slattery. "We are going to see how far Russian methods will go in Chicago.

"But we may decide to stay even if the rate becomes $30 a day."

Manager Frank Baring said the rate was "raised for good and sufficient reasons, having nothing to do with the church."

JUST FOR SONG MRS. BELMONT AND MARIE SPAT

Miss Dressler Made Hit with It in "Melinda"—Now They Fight for the Score.

THEY WERE SO FRIENDLY!

New York, March 4.—[Special.]—Diplomatic relations between Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont and Miss Marie Dressler, late star of "Melinda and Her Sisters," the comic opera of which Mrs. Belmont admits authorship, have been abruptly severed.

The break between the erstwhile associates in art came last Wednesday night. Now Mrs. Belmont has set her lawyer on Marie, and Miss Dressler has spurned the gift with which the society leader recompensed the burlesque artist's services "for charity." But the crowning insult of all—Miss Dressler has bestowed on Mrs. Belmont a second name, the derisive title of Alva "Economical" Belmont.

And it is all for a song!—the Ballet Russe, in which Miss Dressler gave a screaming satire on "The Faun." It was the hit of the piece, and is the center and circumference of the quarrel.

They Both Claim a Song.

Miss Dressler claims the song as her property; Mrs. Belmont insists it is a part of "Melinda" and belongs to her. Miss Dressler holds the score and Mrs. Belmont's lawyer demands its return.

The story of the affray dates back six weeks before the performance on Feb. 19 at the Waldorf-Astoria, when society watched its prettiest debutantes, in a setting of distinguished professionals, act as superior chorus ladies. The opera, written by Mrs. Belmont and composed by Elsa Maxwell, netted $8,000 for the Congressional union.

The Russian ballet song was introduced when Miss Maxwell discovered a similarity between Miss Dressler's chief song and one now being used by another well known performer. Miss Dressler worked up with Miss Maxwell the idea of a satire on "The Faun." It was agreed that it should not be published with the opera.

Miss Dressler Takes the Score.

After the opera was over, Miss Dressler gathered up her song and took it home. The next day she received from Mrs. Belmont, who was not aware of the song's disappearance, a flattering letter of thanks and a jeweled parasol handle. Miss Dressler was happy over the letter and the gift. Her awakening came nine days later, when Mrs. Belmont demanded the return of the song.

"I don't fancy being called a thief," Miss Dressler said. "The song is mine. If Mrs. Belmont felt herself too poor to pay for the orchestra, I was ready to pay for it myself. The 'Ballet Russe' was not printed in a score of 'Melinda' and will not be. I, however, went to Mrs. Belmont's house and put that $75 parasol handle into the hand of her Turk at the door and asked him to deliver it to Mrs. Alva 'Economical' Belmont with my compliments. I spent nearly $500 out of my own pocket on that opera, but I'm a good loser. I'm waiting for the next move."

DETECTIVE BY CHANCE TRAPS TWO ALLEGED MURDERERS.

Sergt. Frank Bronskill in Bureau of Identification When Suspects in Another Case Are Brought In.

A Minneapolis detective sergeant, Frank Bronskill, dropped into the bureau of identification of the Chicago police department yesterday. He had a few hours to pass before train time. He was going to bring a prisoner back to Minneapolis.

As he was asking questions about Chicago police methods two men were brought in.

"Now, take these two men, for instance," Capt. Evans was saying. "This is the way we—"

But the visitor was not listening. Nor were the two men especially interested.

"I guess you'll come back with me, boys," the detective said. They agreed.

The detective explained the men are wanted in connection with the murder of a butcher named Carlson in Minneapolis on Oct. 1. Three men at that time entered his shop, held him up, and one of them shot him when he resisted.

One of the three, James Gleason, it is charged, is already in jail in St. Louis, serving an indeterminate sentence for another job. The two men identified are Carl Swanson and Ray Hawkes. Swanson was taken up on suspicion a few nights ago when, with Hawkes, he was seen prowling around a drug store at 4000 Indiana avenue by Patrolman Ward of the Sixtieth street station. Hawkes escaped.

Swanson admitted he had intended to rob the place and then told where Hawkes could be found.

Mrs. Roland is the aunt of Mrs. Kennedy, although only a year older.

ACTORS SHY AT UNION PLAN; ONLY SETTLE GRIEVANCES.

Charles A. Stevenson Denies Rumor Stars Will Align Selves with Federation of Labor.

Charles A. Stevenson, who is the chairman of the Chicago committee in charge of the meeting of the Actors' Equity association, at the Hotel Sherman on next Friday, yesterday denied a printed rumor that at this meeting the actors would form a union which would be associated with the American Federation of Labor and other labor organizations.

"We, as a profession, have the greatest respect for the Stage Hands' union, the Musicians' union, and the White Rats association," said Mr. Stevenson at the Garrick theater, where he appears in "Experience," "but the Actors' Equity association is purely a coöperative, nonfighting organization designed to adjust, by mutual agreement, any little differences that come up between actors and managers.

"Our decisions are rendered by a special council, and very often the decision goes against the actor and in favor of the manager. We do not contemplate forming any union whatever. Neither will any representative of the White Rats Actors' union have any official connection with this meeting."

"Petromortis" claimed another victim yesterday. Inhaling the deadly fumes from the exhaust of an automobile caused the death of Arthur J. Raab, 21 years old, of 2708 North Whipple street.

He was found in a small garage in the rear of his home. The doors were closed and the place was filled with the gases from the automobile engine.

Coroner Hoffman has again called the attention of automobilists to the danger attending the care of automobiles in small garages. He advises a pipe from the engine exhaust to the outer air.

B. L. T. LETTER LINKS WANDERER TO HIS FAMILY?

'Second Post' Epistle Identified as William Craigie's, Long an Alaska Adventurer.

BUT DAUGHTER DENIES IT.

William Craigie of somewhere in Alaska may have his troubles with a certain type of alarm clock, but he may live to thank this same clock for seeking him out in his Arctic seclusion and returning him to his daughter.

William Craigie disappeared about seventeen years ago. About two weeks since there appeared in "B. L. T.'s" column in THE TRIBUNE a letter under the heading of "The Second Post," describing the troubles of William Craigie of Alaska with a certain type of alarm clock.

Here Is His Letter.

THE SECOND POST.

Salchaket P. O. Chitina Fairbanks Trail Alaska—My clock is somethin the matter wit it it is diferen to a bluecain cartridge cause it goes like hell only when its face is dan on the ground. Somethin is the matter wit its guts cause it wont go at all when it stans up like any other clock that aint afraid to look a fellow in the face. I wouldnt give a dam it was my tillicum that I planted last year cause he was killd an I like to keep it fur his sake cause he was the best tillicum a dough ever had an me an him mushed over Alaska togeder fur near twenty year. It looks all right on the outside cause I keep it nice and shiney and I hate to part wit it an I need a clock and I cant pack to clocks all over the bloomin country wherever I go mebbe you can tell me how to fix it cause Im scared to dot fur fear I cant put it togeder again if I take it a part and I aint goin to trust it to no dam jeoler to monkey wit so I want to prospect the insides of the little walleyed myself. Please tell me yours truly WILLIAM CRAIGIE.

This was seen by the daughter of the William Craigie who disappeared, and she asked for the original letter that it might be compared with some of his older writings. The clock company complied with the request through Charles Anderson of 5516 Kimbark avenue.

Thanks Clock Concern.

Mr. Anderson wrote the following to the clock concern:

"William Craigie's daughter instantly recognized the handwriting of the letter. Comparison with old missives made the identity absolute. The Alaska adventurer is not the illiterate person which his phraseology might lead one to assume. He was a classmate of Sir Henry Irving, who, upon his frequent visits to America, sought him out and gave him tickets for his performances. Efforts will be made to establish communication. If after many months he breaks his seventeen years' silence, I'll be glad to acquaint you with the fact. Some romance! The daughter asks me to express to you her appreciation of your courtesy."

Miss Craigie Denies It.

When Mr. Anderson was called to the telephone last night he said Miss Craigie did not wish to have anything said about the matter. Presently a woman's voice took the telephone.

"There is nothing in it," she said. "The writings are absolutely unlike and there is no connection between the lost Mr. Craigie and the writer of the clock letter."

"But," she was told, "Mr. Anderson wrote the clock company that the writings were identical and that Miss Craigie was very thankful."

"There is nothing to be said. I am not Miss Craigie and there is no discovery of a lost man. Mr. Anderson was very foolish to write such a thing to the clock company."

And the speaker turned from the phone while she addressed some sparkling remarks to some one else in the room.

SOME FAITH IN MANKIND.

Farmer Who Advanced $15 Travel Money to Worker Laughs Last, However.

Frank Ratliff, a farmer living near Carpenter, N. D., has great confidence in "city fellers" who write him for money to pay their transportation to his farm that they may labor thereon.

Yesterday Postoffice Inspectors Germer and Albertie arrested a man who called at the general delivery window for John Small's mail. The man was taken before United States Commissioner Mark A. Foote. There he gave his name as Gus Snyder of 24 North Sangamon street. He said he had been in the navy and seen service in the Philippines and Asiatic waters. Snyder was permitted to sign his own bond for $500.

FIGHT FEVER IN ELMHURST.

Schools, Theaters, and Churches in Suburb Closed by Health Officer.

Scarlet fever has broken out among the school children at Elmhurst, fashionable Chicago suburb, and until the health officials lift the ban not a picture film, school book, or church hymnal will flicker.

On the order of Dr. E. W. Marquardt, town health officer, all churches will be closed today. The public schools and theaters were closed on Friday, and will be fumigated for two days steadily. Nine cases of scarlet fever have been reported since the first appearance of the disease five days ago.

Among those stricken are a son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Williston, an infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hobein, and a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Els.

ONE YEAR MORE OF WILSON—OR IS IT TO BE FIVE?

Differing Views as to President's Three Years' Service Which Ended Yesterday.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., March 4.—[Special.]—Do you know your president? He became your president three years ago today, and he will be your president for another year, God willing, and possibly for four years thereafter.

In the light of your knowledge of the character and ability of Mr. Wilson you will determine next November—provided he is renominated by the Democratic party, as now seems probable—whether he shall be retained as your chief executive.

Woodrow Wilson was almost an unknown quantity to the American people when William Jennings Bryan and fortuitous circumstances made him the nominee of the Democratic party at Baltimore in 1912, and a minority of the electorate, by further fortuitous circumstance, made him president.

HISTORY MAKING EPOCH.

Since then the people have been making his acquaintance during three years that constitute one of the most remarkable periods of the history of the republic. He has been subjected to the supreme test of ability in performing practically all of the functions of the presidency in time of peace in the relations of the nation with foreign powers.

How the president has endured this test is a matter upon which the opinion of the country is sharply divided. Republicans and Progressives condemn his policies—foreign and domestic alike—as failures. Democrats, while showing a greater degree of unanimity of opinion regarding the domestic policies, are divided in their estimate of the wisdom of the president's course in the handling of foreign affairs.

HAS KEPT OUT OF WAR.

Confronted with this increasing criticism of the president, particularly in his own party, the friends of Mr. Wilson have fallen back upon the rallying cry, "He has kept the country out of war."

That, apparently, is to be the slogan of the advocates of the reëlection of the president, provided, of course, his policy does not precipitate the nation into the great war before November next. The friends of the president believe that whatever the shortcomings of Mr. Wilson as an executive in dealing with extraordinarily trying situations, these faults will be completely overbalanced by the realization of 100,000,000 people that they are peaceful and prosperous while half the world is drenched in blood.

Such confidence have the admirers of Mr. Wilson in this slogan that they foresee a grateful nation burying all partisan bias and returning the president next November to another four years in the White House by an overwhelming majority of the popular vote.

Critics Call It Luck.

The critics of the president contend that the people will not be gulled by this campaign cry, that they will realize before election that only sheer luck has kept the country out of war in spite of a presidential policy so weak, so vacillating, and so blundering at times as to invite eventual disaster. They cite the policy of "watchful waiting" in Mexico, which, while not preventing the murder of nearly two hundred Americans and the destruction of millions of dollars' worth of American property, has only made eventual intervention, in their opinion, inevitable.

They cite the note writing, wavering policy of the president in the submarine controversy which still rages despite several loudly proclaimed "diplomatic victories," and which already has cost the lives of more than 150 Americans.

Three years' experience with Mr. Wilson have acquainted the people with some of his well established traits. That he is not better known is due to his instinct for aloofness from contact with his fellow man—the antithesis in this respect of Presidents Roosevelt and Taft.

The impression of Mr. Wilson the administration has sought to create is that of an infallible, superior being, dwelling in a higher realm of thought and action than the ordinary person and the ordinary legislator and administrator can understand. To such an extreme has this been carried that the Democratic press agents on the eve of the presidential campaign have undertaken to demonstrate from time to time that, while still a superior being, Mr. Wilson is "human, after all."

Secretiveness Unpopular.

Secrecy is another well established instinct of the president. Although he dwelt at length in his campaign speeches on the necessity of turning the limelight of publicity upon all the processes of government and entering the White House amid a blare of promises to take the public into his confidence on all matters, his administration has broken all records for secretiveness. Suppression of the facts from the knowledge of the people has been the rule, defended on the ground that public knowledge of the facts would be "incompatible with the public interest."

What the president has gained by this policy of secrecy and mystery is known only to himself. On the other hand, suppression of the facts has resulted frequently in repudiation of the president by his own party in congress, and revelation of suppressed facts by enterprising newspapers has still more frequently put the administration on the defensive.

Lofty Ideals in Addresses.

The fondness of the president for the expression of lofty ideals in well phrased generalizations of vague, mysterious, or enigmatic import is well known to the public. In almost every public utterance the president bears testimony to his "passion for humanity," to his conviction that the mission of the United States is to aid and benefit all mankind.

That he frequently is unable or unwilling to square his practice with his theory also is a fact demonstrated in the three years of his administration of public affairs.

That the president has no fixed convictions regarding practicable policies of government is the criticism that is most often heard at the close of his third year of office. He continually changes his mind, even to the extent of repudiating cardinal principles of his party. To this trait is due a large measure of Democratic dissension in congress today.

Too Many Experiments.

The prevailing opinion in Washington, however, is that Mr. Wilson's changes of front on numerous public questions is accounted for not so much by an absence of conviction as by a desire to consult political expediency. It is charged that every time he changes his mind he has sought to steal the thunder of the political opposition.

The first instance of this was the president's advocacy of a trade commission to regulate business, big and little. An agency of this character was proposed in both the Republican and Progressive party platforms in 1912. The Democratic party was opposed to the idea and omitted reference to it from its platform.

Mr. Wilson was opposed to the proposition. He condemned the creation of such regulating agencies in his campaign speeches. Democratic senators and representatives, campaigning for reëlection, followed suit. No sooner was Mr. Wilson in the White House, however, than he robbed the opposition platforms of the trade commission plank and compelled his followers in congress to incorporate the institution, much against their will, in the anti-trust legislation.

Adopts Tariff Commission.

The president, like other members of his party, also opposed the creation of a tariff commission such as both the Republicans and Progressives proposed. He maintained that attitude throughout the first two years of his administration. When the pressure for the establishment of such an agecy increased perceptibly a year ago Mr. Wilson surprised congress by stating that it had unconsciously conferred the powers of a tariff commission upon the trade commission.

The trade commission also was surprised and did not take kindly to the president's suggestion. Recently it became apparent that the Republicans intended to make the creation of a tariff commission an issue in the approaching presidential campaign. Then Mr. Wilson suddenly announced that he had changed his mind and favored the establishment of an agency of this character.

Change on National Defense.

The president also has confessed to a change of front on the question of national defense. When the great war broke out in Europe Mr. Wilson set himself sternly to repress the movement to put the country in a state of adequate defense. When congress met he referred to the leaders of this movement as nervous alarmists. When Germany proclaimed the submarine warfare on commerce and threatened to sink American ships the president allowed congress to adjourn without proposing to strengthen the army and navy. Not until July 21, 1915, when he dispatched to Germany the sharpest of the Lusitania notes, did he evince a change of front on national defense by calling upon Secretaries Garrison and Daniels for recommendations of a stronger army and navy.

The army plan was formulated and presented to congress by the president himself last December. Less than a month later Mr. Wilson changed his mind again and abandoned the continental army plan. This led to the resignation of Secretary of War Garrison.

Still Another Shift.

A similar fluctuation of attitude is responsible for the crisis produced by the new German program of submarine warfare on armed merchantmen. Until last January the president contended that a vessel might carry defensive armament without losing its character as a peaceful merchantman. When the Persia was sunk on Jan. 2 Mr. Wilson disclosed the first sign of modification of this attitude. The Persia carried a 4.7 inch gun and it was foreseen that the power responsible for its destruction might assert that the steamer was not entitled to warning because armed. The president immediately made it known that he would consider seriously such a defense and, moreover, gave out the information that the administration was considering the adoption of a similar view of merchantmen carrying guns.

Forced to Back Water.

On Jan. 18 the president went on record in favor of the German view of armed merchantmen carrying guns. At the instance of the president Secretary Lansing said in this note that even if the entente powers should not agree to the proposal the American government might issue regulations classing armed merchantmen as auxiliary cruisers.

The allies rejected the proposal and Great Britain threatened the United States with a trade boycott. The president then began to back water. By the time former Senator Root had delivered his Republican "keynote" address castigating the president for not assuming a more aggressive attitude toward Germany, Mr. Wilson had changed front completely and was opposing the German view of armed ships.

CAN'T FIND A WOMAN FIT FOR POLICE DEPARTMENT.

Spokane, Wash., Budget Provides for Job, but None of Applicants Is Able to Qualify.

Spokane, Wash., March 4.—The 1916 city budget provides for a woman member of the Spokane police department, but thus far efforts have failed to find a women candidate capable of meeting the civil service requirements.

Fourteen applicants have been disqualified because of flat feet, defective eyesight, overweight, underweight or deformity of the legs.

Mayor Fleming announced today that he was considering appointing a woman as an associate clerk in the police department without imposing civil service tests.

Robertson Asks That School Supply Be Cut Off to Permit Main Flushing.

Health Commissioner Robertson yesterday requested the engineer of the school board to shut off drinking water in south side schools for two or three days in order that the supply pipes may be flushed out.

This measure was taken as a final step in the campaign to stamp out the typhoid epidemic in the district bounded by Forty-third and Ninety-first streets. The commissioner recommended that all roof tanks in this district be drained and disinfected. He also urged that residents continue to boil their drinking water.

The epidemic is subsiding.

LENTEN RULES ARE LAID DOWN BY ARCHBISHOP

Instructions Will Be Read from Roman Catholic Pulpits Today.

Archbishop Mundelein issued yesterday his instructions to the members of the Roman Catholic church for observance during Lent. They will be read today in the various pulpits of the archdiocese. They are as follows:

"All days of Lent from Ash Wednesday (March 8) to Easter Sunday (April 23), Sundays excepted, are fast days of obligation for all the faithful who have attained their twenty-first year and are not otherwise lawfully dispensed.

"The sick, the very poor, pregnant women, those nursing infants, and in general all who, because of old age, weakly constitutions, or hard labor cannot fast without detriment to their health, are exempted from fasting. Those exempted from fasting are not restricted to the use of meat on days when it is allowed by dispensation at the principal meal.

One Full Meal.

"Those obliged to fast are restricted to one full meal in the day, which should not ordinarily be taken before noon, and to a collation not exceeding the fourth part of an ordinary meal in the evening, though the use of some warm drink, such as tea, coffee, or chocolate, with a small piece of bread in the morning, is authorized.

"Abstinence from flesh meat implied in this precept of fasting is, in this diocese, dispensed with on Sundays without restriction, and at the principal meal on all other days, except Wednesdays and Fridays, and the Saturdays in Ember week and Holy week.

"The use of fish with flesh meat is forbidden at the same meal, even on Sundays in Lent.

"Lard, the fat rendered from any kind of meat, may be used in preparing food on all days during Lent and on all days of fast and abstinence throughout the year.

"The above dispensations from the general laws were granted by an indult of the apostolic see Aug. 3, 1887, subsequently renewed.

Pastors Will Explain.

"Pastors will please explain to their people the dispensation also from the law of abstinence, in favor of workingmen, granted in an indult of the holy see, March 15, 1895, and renewed in 1905, and again in 1915.

"By virtue of this indult workingmen and their families are permitted to use flesh meat once a day on all fast days and abstinence days throughout the year, except Fridays, Ash Wednesday, Wednesday and Saturday in Holy Week, and the vigil of Christmas.

"Workingmen and their families availing themselves of this indult are not allowed to use fish and flesh meat at the same meal, and it is the earnest desire of the holy see, and ours as well, that they perform some other act of mortification, such as abstaining from intoxicating liquors.

Woman in Race for Alderman.

Mrs. Ira Couch Wood

For the first time in the history of Winnetka a woman is running for alderman. The woman is Mrs. Ira Couch Wood, social settlement and church worker. She is a candidate on the Citizens' ticket.

"Women can be of some help in municipal housekeeping," said Mrs. Wood. "They should devote some of their time and thought to the shaping of governmental policies. Surely if women have been given election privileges they should do all in their power to prove their right to have them.

"I believe the men and women together is the best solution to community problems. Women should not antagonize men, or men women. Coöperation is the fairest and the most sensible."

FOUR MILLION WOMEN VOTERS TO BE ELIGIBLE

Suffrage Leaders Lining Up Forces in Enfranchised Territory for Fall Election.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., March 4.—[Special.]—Taking exception to the recent statement of Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt that there are less than 3,000,000 women voters in the western states the Congressional union has issued a statement proving that at least 4,000,000 women will be eligible to vote at the 1916 elections.

The statistics are based on the census of 1910, which gives the female population above 21 years in the voting states at 3,666,445. By computing the increase during the last five years at one-half, the approximate female population at the present time is said by the union to be 4,400,114. It is admitted that among women as well as men there are large numbers of those eligible to vote who have never qualified.

Urged to Qualify.

To meet this situation the enfranchised states have been invaded by a band of field secretaries and organizers who are lining up the support to the suffrage amendment. The Congressional union is urging every one of the probable 4,400,000 women of voting age, who are eligible to be made voters, to qualify at once in order that the suffrage army may be readily mustered for action if it is forced into the campaign by the refusal of the dominant party to deal fairly with American women.

In its preparedness call the union says:

"The candidate of the party in power will run on the record of his party for the last four years. If these 4,000,000 women, or any considerable number of them, believe that the supreme issue in this country today is the issue of political liberty for all American citizens on equal terms, they cannot support a party which not only fails to support the issue but uses its party machinery to block its consideration."

Making Thorough Campaign.

For the next three months the union will be busy completing the organization of the western women voters into a group that will put suffrage before party allegiance and refuse their support to any party hostile to the national suffrage amendment. When perfected, the ramifications of the organization will extend down to the smallest political division of the twelve suffrage states.

PREACHES FIRST SERMON OF NEW PASTORATE TODAY.

The Rev. Thomas F. Campbell Takes Charge of Green Street Congregational Church.

Rev. T. F. Campbell

The Rev. Thomas F. Campbell will preach his first sermon today as pastor of the Green street Congregational church, Green and Fifty-sixth streets.

He resigned a short time ago from the pastorate of the Grace Congregational church, Powell and Shakespeare avenues, after a service of five years. During his pastorate there he received 111 members and made 2,500 pastoral calls.

He is a graduate of the University of Chicago and of the divinity school. He received calls from a Congregational church in Cleveland and from the Sixth Congregational church, Oak Park, which he declined in favor of Green street. The Rev. George R. Wallace, the predecessor of Mr. Campbell, resigned from the pastorate of Green Street church because of illness.

WHERE ARE THOSE BONDS?

Real Estate Dealer Called to Answer for Alleged Contempt of Court.

Elmer L. Ehrman, real estate and mortgage dealer in the Lumber Exchange building, will appear before Judge Windes on March 11 to show cause why he should not be held for contempt of court. The judge's attention was called to the fact that Mr. Ehrman had declined to answer certain questions while on the witness stand before a master in chancery. The suit is that of Emelie Campe against Lillian R. Winterberg and others to foreclose a trust deed for $65,000. One hundred and seventy bonds were issued against the deed. Ehrman, it is alleged, refused to answer questions relating to the whereabouts of the bonds.

WAITING LIST FOR FOUNDLING

When Baby Is Abandoned on Doorstep in East Chicago There Is a Rush for It.

Twenty married couples applied at the East Chicago, Ind., police station last night, less than two hours after a child they wished to adopt had been found on a doorstep. Several weeks ago the police had charge of another foundling, and a waiting list was made up of disappointed married folk who applied for it. The police last night at once notified the waiting list of the new opportunity. The child was apparently 6 weeks old. It was left, well wrapped up, at the boarding house of Mike Raich, 4851 Grasselli avenue.

YELLOW CAB COMPANY PAYS REWARD TO THIEF CATCHER.

Detective Gets $300 of $1,000 Offered for Capture and Conviction of Holdup Men.

Detective Alex Gasperick, by Chief Healey's permission, received a check for $300 yesterday from the Yellow Cab company for his part in the arrest and conviction of Charles L. Turner and George Van Brandt, sentenced to Joliet penitentiary March 1. The rest of the reward of $1,000 was divided between Charles Schulman, 1129 South Kedzie avenue, and Albert Weinschank, chauffeurs for the company.

After one of the cab company's chauffeurs was held up, John Hertz, vice president of the company, offered a reward of $1,000 for the arrest and conviction of the robbers. After the reward had been offered Weinschank was held up and robbed and Schulman, in resisting the robbers, was shot in the hand.

The chauffeurs obtained information on which Detective Gasperick arrested Turner and Van Brandt.

What Other Car in Your Mind Compares With the Cadillac Eight?

What other car measures up to the Cadillac in the things you must be sure of? But, first of all, what are those things? Ask men who know from experience.

Men who have driven cars for years insist first upon substantial, time-tested construction. They have "been thru the mill" with all kinds of cars. They know just what punishment a car has to stand. So they buy first for endurance, for continuous service, for stand-up quality. You're pretty safe when you do the same.

Now is there any car in your mind that compares with the Cadillac in long-lived good service, in endurance? If you know anything about cars, there is only one answer—any car that compares with the Cadillac costs more, but does not give more in the things you must be sure of. No car within $1000 of the Cadillac price has as good a reputation for durability, for substantial construction, for dependable service.

Think what this means to you! Here, in the Cadillac, at its moderate price of $2080, you can have a car which you know gives the maximum in the all-important essentials demanded by experienced owners. Design that all the world follows, quality that has never yet worn out, workmanship that sets the standard for accuracy—these are what you get in the Cadillac, and in no other car.

The certainty of Cadillac quality—the evidence of Cadillac engineering judgment—the incomparable Cadillac value for the money—constitute the reason why more than half the quality buyers today select the Cadillac—why there is no other broadly successful car near the Cadillac price.

In short, if you know cars and if you think straight, there is no other car in your mind which compares with the Cadillac Eight. Surely it would be short-sighted to select any car at any price until you have experienced the fascinating performance and learned the wonderful construction of the Cadillac. Come in and we will arrange to show you.

We take no used cars in trade except Cadillacs. Nevertheless, 54% of our sales this season have been made to people who had cars of some other make. The man who knows what the Cadillac is won't let an old car keep him from having a Cadillac.

CITES WEAKNESS OF VOLUNTEERS IN TIME OF WAR

Expert Shows How Regulars Would Use Brains Due to Strict Army Training.

"A free people ought not only to be armed but disciplined, to which end a uniform and well digested plan is requisite."
—GEORGE WASHINGTON.

BY CAPT. HENRY J. REILLY.

In 1847 the first Mexican expedition, consisting of regulars and a considerable number of volunteers, after the capture of Vera Cruz, had moved across the low country and, finally, one night camped at the foot of the mountains leading up to the plateau on which is Mexico City.

As the troops formed early in the morning preliminary to the daily advance, they could see immediately to their front tier after tier of hills thickly covered with tropical foliage, with here and there the red roofs of the villages and, above all, the almost perfect snow clad cone of Mount Orizaba.

The army in its advance was not only to march up the two main roads to the plateau, one by Orizaba and the other by Jalapa, but was to cover with small detachments all the trails between these roads and to the north and south of them.

How Volunteers Worked.

One of the volunteer regiments was to follow one of these trails and a few miles to the right of it a regular regiment up another. When they started in each case the advance party of the advance guard happened to be a platoon of infantry under a sergeant.

Sergt. Evans of the volunteers was an energetic young man, who always had taken great interest in military subjects. He had served in the national guard, and was of the type of American who makes an excellent soldier once properly trained. Evans started out by sending up the trail a point of three men and a corporal, which he followed with the balance of his platoon at a distance of about 150 yards.

Posts Flank Guards.

Sergt. Evans told Corporal Goldschmidt to take his squad out to the left and Corporal Mulvaney to take his out to the right, a distance of about 150 yards, to act as flank guards.

These flanking patrols soon found that due to the thickness of the brush they had the greatest difficulty in advancing at all, and also that they could not see the advance party. In a short while they became confused in their direction. So first one and then the other halted and tried to get in touch with Sergt. Evans on the trail.

After a deal of yelling and some little confusion they succeeded in reaching [illegible] their difficulties. He [illegible] they could come closer in to the [illegible] would move more slowly.

Is Slow to Advance.

About twenty minutes later he found the support [illegible] rear of him and the reserve [illegible] of the support. About this time the commander of the advance guard [illegible] over him for holding up the [illegible] by his slow advance.

In consequence, he moved ahead more rapidly, with the result that before long he [illegible] nor heard anything of his [illegible] patrols. As he was worrying [illegible] a spattering of shots followed [illegible] fire and wild yells of "Viva [illegible]" out on both flanks. He [illegible] a few yells for help from up the trail, but was so busy trying to get some order in his command that he had no time to think of his point, undoubtedly cut off. Some of his men were running up the trail toward him; some were standing and firing in different directions, while a few were confused and simply running about without obvious purpose.

Volunteers Lose Four Men.

Luckily the support and reserve came up quickly, and by their fire prevented the Mexicans from closing in. After some minutes of firing the Mexican fire ceased. The corporal and three privates of the point were found dead in the trail. They found no trace of Corporal Goldschmidt or of his squad. Probably they had been captured.

Corporal Mulvaney and his men had become utterly confused, with the result that they finally reached the trail an hour later, somewhere near the rear of the main column. They were so far back as not to have been in the fight at all. Three of Evans' men were killed and seven [illegible].

When Sergt. Watkins of the regulars looked up the trail ahead of him he was immediately reminded of the heavily wooded country of Samar.

With this came a vision of a rush of Filipinos, some of them armed with rifles, most of them with bolos, and all yelling "[illegible] Batay!" ("Kill! Kill!") as they attacked a column of American infantry marching along a trail.

Regular Uses Brains.

Watkins did not put out any point, because he knew in such thick country they would not give any warning and would only be cut off. He did not send out any flanking patrols for the same reason. Before he started he told his men he would lead the column; that the first two men back of him would rush up to the right and left abreast of him if anything happened; that all the odd numbers would deploy to the right, all the even numbers to the left, and the last three men down the trail, and all open fire the instant anybody fired on them.

With magazines loaded and everybody on the lookout, he started up the trail. About the same time the Mexicans attacked the volunteers they jumped Watkins and his platoon. As the first shot was fired his men quickly faced as they had been instructed and opened a heavy fire. In almost no time the cries of "Viva Mexico!" and the Mexican fire died away to be replaced by moaning and general cries of "Agua! Agua!" ("Water! Water!") on both sides of the trail. A search of the brush brought to light three dead Mexicans and eight wounded. One of Sergt. Watkins' men was wounded.

WEEKLY REVIEW of the WAR by CAPT. HENRY J. REILLY

FRENCH FRONT.

The greater part of the week the determined German attacks against Verdun continued. French attempts to retake Fort Douaumont failed. The German advance from the north the first part of the week later swung to the east, where in spite of numerous French counter attacks the Germans steadily progressed towards Verdun.

Verdun itself is under German artillery fire. Later there was a pause in the German infantry attacks. This was taken by some to mean the abandonment of these attacks, and by others as merely one of the necessary pauses to organize the defenses of the ground gained and move up the artillery.

The latter part of the week the Germans compelled the evacuation of Fort Vaux, at the northeast corner of the present line of the defenses of Verdun. The wedge to the Meuse south of Verdun, taken by the Germans last year, is now proving of value, as it is not only a break in the original fortified line from Verdun to Toul, but also continually threatens the right rear of the troop defending Verdun.

There have been a number of successful local German attacks at other parts of the French line. These are probably made with the purpose of keeping the French from withdrawing troops and sending them to assist in the defense of Verdun.

RUSSIAN FRONT.

There has been no action of any consequence along this front.

ITALIAN FRONT.

There has been considerable artillery fire along this front and some local attacks, but no action of consequence.

THE BALKANS.

The Austro-Hungarians have taken Durazzo and the resistance of the Albanians to the Bulgarians has apparently ceased. There has been no change in the situation in and around Saloniki. Saloniki and Avlona are the only two points in the whole of the Balkans now in the possession of the entente allies.

Roumania is reported to have definitely decided to remain neutral, but apparently with the reservation that when it is certain that one side or the other is going to win she will join that side at the last moment.

CAUCASUS.

The Russians continued their advance, but apparently more cautiously. In the north they have steadily approached Trebizond, which the Turks are reported to be evacuating.

MESOPOTAMIA.

The situation here is unchanged, with one British force shut up in Kut-el-Amara, the other well down the valley and unable to advance. There was a rumor during the week that Russian troops from Manchuria and eastern Siberia were being embarked at Downing to be sent to Mesopotamia.

EGYPT.

The tribesmen operating on the western border have been defeated by the South African troops, which were brought to Egypt after the capture of German West Africa.

SUMMARY.

The heavy attack on Verdun was undoubtedly the beginning of a general German offensive in France. That the Germans would start a general offensive somewhere was almost a foregone conclusion.

The interval between the end of the Balkan offensive and the beginning of the present one was needed to concentrate in France the guns and troops which have been used, first in the offensive which drove the Russians out of Poland, most of Galicia, and well back into Russia proper, and then in Serbia.

The probabilities are that Verdun has been selected as the main point of attack, although the main attack may be made elsewhere along the French front, and the present attack may be designed to draw attention away from it in the same manner that Hindenburg's offensive in the north preceded the main general attack made along the Dunajec river last May.

The German advance so far has shown the same perfect coördination between the artillery and the infantry which was shown on the Dunajec. France and England have had since the middle of November, 1914, to make a general offensive on the German line in France. Failing that, they have had the same time to prepare to resist another German general offensive.

If the present attack is a general offensive, and is not stopped by the French and British, it probably will be the beginning of the end for them, as Germany will have shown her ability to whip any one of the allies in any of the theaters of war. On the other hand, if this is a general German offensive and it fails, the probabilities are that Germany will have to rest on the defensive in all theaters of war, as it is to be doubted if she will admit the offensive to be a failure until she has completely exhausted her power to attack.

If this happens, it will be the first time since the beginning of the war that Germany will have been entirely on the defensive; in other words, the entente allies will finally have succeeded in accomplishing the first step towards her defeat.

The capture of Durazzo will set free a considerable number of Austro-Hungarian troops and guns which have been used in the Balkans since the beginning of the campaign against Serbia and Montenegro. The probabilities are that these troops may be used in some other theater of war on the offensive.

As any attempt to enter Bessarabia might cause Roumania to side with Russia, and as the Italian attacks along the Isonzo front have all failed, there are possibilities of the Austro-Hungarians attempting an offensive against Italy.

RABBI PRAISES GARY SCHOOL WAY OF RELIGIOUS TEACHING

Asserts System Tends to Remove Sectarianism from Education—Answers Critics.

The school system at Gary, Ind., in as far as it offers an opportunity for religious instruction by churches of various denominations, was warmly commended yesterday by Rabbi Tobias Schanfarber in his sermon at Kehilath Anshe Mayriv temple, Indiana avenue and Thirty-third street.

"There are some Jews who are opposed to the Gary system on the ground that it favors the perpetuation of sectarianism and that it is un-American and undemocratic," Dr. Schanfarber said. "I visited Gary and studied the system in vogue there, and I do not believe it favors sectarianism, but on the other hand tends to do away with sectarianism, as it removes all religious teachings from the school sessions and prevents friction. There is no need under the Gary plan for the reading of the Bible in the public school nor the introduction of Christmas exercises or other practices distasteful to Jews.

"The Gary plan will do away with the objection of the Roman Catholics that they are obliged to pay double taxes for the education of their children. The Gary system provides time enough for careful religious instruction. The ordinary Sabbath school gives far too little time for this purpose."

PROTEST ON NEW GARAGE.

Petition to Mayor Opposes Erection of Auto Building Near Nettelhorst School.

A petition to Mayor Thompson protesting against the erection of a garage at 3220 Broadway, less than 200 feet from the Nettelhorst public school, 3252 Broadway, was presented yesterday.

The construction of the garage is in violation of the city ordinance prohibiting garages within 200 feet of schools and churches.

HUSBAND FAILS TO MEET GIRL WIFE AND CHILD.

Police Care for Women Who Came to Chicago from Shelbyville in Response to Letter.

Mrs. Ozetta Morgan, 21 years old, and her 4 year old son, Kenneth, are being cared for in the South Clark street police annex and Policewoman Florence Van Amber is trying to find her husband, William A. Morgan, who is a farm hand. She and the child were found wandering in the La Salle street station, where they arrived from Shelbyville, Ill., Wednesday night. They were taken to the station by a representative of the Travelers' Aid society.

"My husband beat and then deserted me in Shelbyville a month ago," Mrs. Morgan said. "Last Wednesday I received a letter from him, saying he was in Chicago. He asked me to come at once with my child and the furniture. He said he would meet us at the railroad station. He failed to meet me. I had shipped the little furniture I possess here.

"I believe my husband asked me to come here to lose me in a strange city and cause me suffering. I'm convinced now that he never intended to meet me and his child."

TOILER'S DEATH A MYSTERY.

The Maxwell street police are investigating the death of Patrick Byron, who died suddenly yesterday while at work in the plant of the Chicago Tube and Iron company, Fifteenth and Jefferson streets. A postmortem examination disclosed that his skull was fractured.

Official Notice to All Drink or Drug Users

PHYSICIANS AND WHOM IT MAY CONCERN

Hon. James E. Bruce, a former Iowa senator and banker, now president of the modern "NEAL WAY" of PREVENTING high class men and women from becoming "Hopeless Wrecks," makes the following statement: First, the NEAL INSTITUTES COMPANY of the U. S. is the "parent" company of 60 splendid Neal Institutes already established and others opening in principal American and foreign cities. It has a paid-up capital stock of ONE MILLION DOLLARS. The head NEAL INSTITUTE is a fine, modern building containing accommodations for over 100 patients, located in the beautiful Drexel Boulevard residential district of Chicago.

Second, the secret of this world-wide success of the "Neal Way" is that it does more for the drink or drug user in a FEW DAYS than can be done by the "Old Way" in SEVERAL WEEKS or months. It removes the CAUSE of continued and FORCED indulgence, creates a loathing for liquor or drugs, and soon restores NORMAL mental and physical conditions.

We guarantee accommodations of the first class hotel with privacy of home. Treatment may be taken at home, hotel or club. For full information call or address the head NEAL INSTITUTE, No. 811-T East 49th Street, Chicago, or at Springfield, Ill., or phone Oakland 439.

$350 and a FORD makes this guaranteed one-Ton Truck

Think of it! A Ford and $350 gives you a truck with carrying capacity and efficiency equal to one-ton trucks costing $1,500 or more. It runs 10 to 15 miles per hour under full load—delivers 12 to 20 miles per gallon of gas and gives the cheapest delivery cost in the world.

$7,000,000 sold to date.

This is the best answer to what a Smith Form-a-Truck has done, and can do.

HOLMES PYOTT & CO.

IRON FOUNDRY

Manufacturer's Pick-Up

If any concern knows the problems and troubles of "pick-ups" and quick deliveries it is Holmes, Pyott & Co. And they know what haulage costs. They bought a Smith Form-a-Truck because in it they saw service greater than they had ever before found possible. In addition to service they found their delivery costs cut almost in half. No wonder they so enthusiastically endorse the Smith Form-a-Truck as their letter, reproduced here, bears witness.

The Smith Form-a-Truck guaranteed one-ton truck gives you the great economy and dependability of a Ford, plus a rear-end construction that carries 90% of the load—a combination that cannot be matched for either performance or low mileage cost. And all this for half the average cost of a standard one-ton truck.

$2,000,000 sold in last 30 days.

You cannot afford to be without a Smith Form-a-Truck another day. You owe it to yourself to investigate the proposition at once. Don't delay.

Gentlemen:

A few months ago we purchased a Form-a-Truck from your Mr. R. A. Rourke. Same has been in constant use ever since and it has given entire satisfaction in the delivery of steel and iron castings to various parts of the city. And while this Truck is only intended to carry one ton, we have carried as high as two tons under favorable conditions.

The cost of maintenance we have found to be exceedingly small.

Yours truly,

$40,000 Made by These 3 Salesmen in 1915

We Want 10 Men Like Them Quick

These three men did no more than can be done by other men to whom we offer exactly the same opportunity. The next ten men in our sales force made $50,000.00 last year. We have ninety salesmen, all of whom are making a good income. We invite you to examine our ledgers to prove this. No commission check is too big for us to write.

We now have openings for ten more salesmen. We want top-notchers. We do not have anything to sell you. We finance ourselves and refer you to Dun or Bradstreet, or any bank in Indianapolis. If you cannot come to us with as good reference as we give you, don't apply. We have no time to waste with any one who has not been a success. Come prepared to prove to us that you can fill the position we have to offer you. Our product is sold upon a liberal commission basis, commissions being paid promptly.

We manufacture the nationally known Butter-Kist Pop Corn machine, which is sold to established merchants in business. Thousands are now in operation, earning for their owners a constant, satisfactory profit the year 'round. You can show figures, proofs and letters from present users to your prospective buyers.

Butter-Kist Pop Corn and these machines are being advertised to millions in the leading national monthlies and weeklies and trade publications. Many inquiries and leads are received by us daily and these are promptly referred to the salesmen. We back up our salesmen with high-powered, intensive sales assistance.

Our large factory is one of the leading industries in Indianapolis, where we have been established for 20 years.

If You Make This Connection—You Make a Real One

I will arrive in Chicago Tuesday, March 7, prepared to give full details. You can then write or wire any of our salesmen to verify the facts. Telephone Tuesday for appointment, Randolph 2284, or address me at Room 1815, Mallers Building, Chicago.

DINNER TABLE VALOR.

"At the present time in this country," writes Capt. Reilly, "the chief criterion of patriotism seems to be ability to abuse those who do not agree with you on the European war."

This is probably not true of the mass of the American people, but it is true of a minority whose partisanship for one side of the European contest or another has obscured their perception even of American interests, to say nothing of considerations which present themselves to the unbiased mind on behalf of the side opposed to their own sympathies and convictions. The number of educated Americans who see the present war and all its issues in the pot black and pure white of melodrama is astounding. But that is not immediately so important as the effect of this rabid partisanism upon questions of our own national interest.

It is one of the most inexpensive forms of emotional exhilaration available to denounce our failure to protest against the invasion of Belgium by Germany, or to place an embargo against the allies as to war munitions, or to enter the war against Germany because of the Lusitania or against England because of its starvation measures against Germany.

But upon a little inquiry into this drawing room militancy it is almost invariably discovered that the militants are not at all in favor of getting into the trenches themselves or letting their sons or husbands undergo the agonies of war. "We ought to be in this war" means you, not me; your son or husband, not mine.

There is a very straight path to the proof of sincerity on this subject of our national duty. It leads not to talk but to acts.

If our dinner table militants (male) will enlist in the organized militia they will prove they are willing to back their convictions at their own expense and not at some one's else.

It is a commonplace of war that the rabid partisans are hot on the firing line, and you will hear more sound sense and justice to the enemy from many a Briton, Frenchman, or German than you will hear in many a Chicago drawing-room. Irresponsible war partisanism is an unnecessary nuisance, and so far as it enters politics it is not only a nuisance but a peril.

THE FIGHT ON PORK.

It is reported in Washington that Senators Ransdell and Newlands have persuaded the president to favor a measure establishing a national waterway commission to survey rivers and harbors improvements now existing and projects proposed and generally to supervise expenditure now constituting the rivers and harbors pork barrel.

This proposal was made by THE TRIBUNE and by Representative Frear independently at an earlier stage of the fight on pork, and Mr. Frear has embodied it in a bill which he has introduced at this session in the house, H. R. 6821. The president might well adopt it.

But this, at least, is worthy his note and that of every enemy of rivers and harbors waste. If a commission is created it should not be filled by politicians and small bore appointees and it should not be dominated by such men as Senator Ransdell, who favors or is committed to an enormous fixed expenditure—$100,000,000 annually, apparently, regardless of real needs—or Senator Newlands, who is a visionary with a $600,000,000 project.

The fight against pork is beginning to tell. The pork hunters are not now making frontal attacks, as in previous sessions, but are trying flank movements, as where the Muscle shoals appears in the military bill. What is now necessary is to prevent the indirect defeat of pork opposition by guerrilla tactics and to establish the budget system and, as to waterway expenditure, a commission of high character. A packed commission would defeat the whole fight against rivers and harbors waste and perpetuate an evil it was ostensibly created to abolish.

SUPPRESSING SYMPTOMS.

The cabaret as an institution has been receiving the agonized attention of Chicagoans for something over a month. Every morning our citizens have been reading the spicy accounts of investigators and every evening some of them have been going downtown to see for themselves. Gradually the respectable have mobilized and they are now on the point of making the council obliterate the cabaret.

There is not a great deal that can be said in favor of the cabaret. The entertainers are generally quite the reverse of entertaining. Unless you like noise you cannot really like the cabaret. But in spite of the showing which its enemies have offered against it we cannot see that prohibiting entertaining in places where food and drink are dispensed will do any particular good. Certain reformers will make a loud noise about a triumph for virtue, but virtue is not going to be triumphant in the world as easily as all this.

Chicago seems to demand some such scapegoat every year or so. Young girls from the country persist in coming here and drinking too much and getting into jams with strange men, while young men without sufficient stamina to work hard persist in indulging themselves on the proceeds of forgery or some other kind of confidence game. Each time we pick on some institution and smash it, but the characterless youths find temptation somewhere and succumb to it.

Not three months ago it was the poolroom which occupied the stage. If boys could be kept out of poolrooms, we were told by scores of observers, there would be no more baby bandits. Before that it was dancing in the restaurants which was the root of all our trouble. Mayor Harrison eradicated it at one time, but there was still immorality and drunkenness. At one time during that excitement we almost legislated against the tango and the bunny hug, and we did install chaperons at public dances, whose business it was to keep the dancers at least six inches apart. But there was no noticeable increase in moral tone.

Somehow the recollection of all these campaigns does not lend conviction to this one.

Our moral reformers refuse to see that they are all for treating symptoms and not for curing the disease. For weak and characterless girls even the innocent countryside was fraught with moral danger. The moon and the summer air have proved quite as intoxicating as the cocktail and the dancing.

The trouble arises from the fact that young people like to meet together and have a good time. When things go wrong it is because restraint has not been cultivated, not because temptation has not been removed. Children, of course, should be protected in some degree, but the American notion is to trust in protection alone. To remove the temptation is not a great moral act; it is simply an acknowledgment that we are raising children who have not enough character and discipline to live their own lives cleanly and well.

Instead of stressing the smashing of cabarets, we should stress the building of character.

Instead of attacking one symptom after another, let us attack the disease, which is our enfeebled national character.

HEADED FOR WAR.

The nation is now again on the straight path which leads to war, and nearer to that tragic event than it has been since our controversy over the German submarine operations began.

This is apparent on the face of the situation, and if there are reassuring factors they are not discernible either to the public eye or to men high in the government, who if they are not fully informed most certainly ought to be.

The president has taken a position. The nation will stand back of him. But it should require of him and of congress that action in conformity to our responsibilities be taken vigorously and without delay.

We are headed for war. We are unfitted and unprepared for war. The president and his government has proposed plans for naval and military increases which are trivial in their immediate results and will require years to bring to fruition.

The navy is short 28,000 men. It has no reliable reserve and no supply of officers to meet the wastage of war. Mr. Daniels has asked for 10,000 more men. We have no fast cruisers, our submarines are few, small, and unsuited for sea service. The Atlantic fleet is supposed to be composed of twenty-one battleships. Admiral Fletcher has reported that he has only twelve operating with the fleet. We have only eight dreadnaughts.

Our mobile regular army at home numbers about 35,000 men and our overseas garrisons are undermanned. The national guard is not ready for service.

Our reserve of ammunition is small, though our facilities for manufacturing are greatly enlarged.

In this case, happily for us, if war comes it will be with antagonists unable to strike us at once. Whether we shall deem it consistent with our self-respect that we shall fight the Germans with money and munitions merely, without hazard of our lives, must be determined when formal war has become inevitable. But even if we assume that our decision is in favor of this pacifist variety of war, we may be sure that the central powers will not confine themselves to similar methods when opportunity appears. To Americans who expect this war to end with the crushing of Prussian militarism and the reduction of Germany to a position of virtual impotence in world relations this will seem an academic consideration. We hope congress will look upon our situation and to the probabilities of the future with more respect for the lessons of the past. This is not the time to gamble with disaster but to put ourselves into a position, both as to diplomatic engagements and as to organized naval and military resources, to command reasonable security and respect whatever the outcome of the war and the subsequent relations of the powers may be.

THE DUTY OF DEFENSE SERVICE.

As a stop gap or temporary compromise, volunteer military training, such as Mr. Hyde described as successfully working in the Wyoming schools, is much better than nothing. Undoubtedly as the Wyoming superintendent of schools testifies, it has a beneficial effect upon the young.

But it is by no means an acceptable substitute for universal military service. Its defect is basic, for it assumes that the duty of defense is optional.

The duty of defense service is not optional in war under our laws or in any civilized country. The duty of preparation for defense should not be optional. Under our law we may require it of every one, if we so elect.

The principle is established. But we do not carry it out.

Yet there is no more reason why military service should be volunteered than the payment of taxes. Both are necessary to the preservation of the nation. If a man may shirk defense, he may shirk taxes. If one burden may be left to the conscientious to bear alone, the other with equal justice may be left for them.

Universal military training in peace, universal military service in war, are basic duties of citizenship which in sound policy and in equity should be compulsory.

There is no more reason to leave the paying of his debt to his nation to each man's conscience than there is in leaving the paying of his debt to his bank to each man's conscience.

The volunteer system is unsound both from the military and from the civic point of view. It is inevitably unjust and demoralizing. It is inefficient and when the need is greatest it is unworkable, as the failure of Lord Derby's moderate and conciliatory plan has just proved again in England and in the midst of a great war.

For the sake of American youth and for the sake of the nation, we ought to adopt universal compulsory military training and service now, while peace permits us to do it deliberately, consciously, not as a hasty, bitter necessity, but on principles of democratic service and unforced patriotic devotion.

Editorial of the Day.

MUNITIONS LOBBIES IRRELEVANT.

[From the New Republic.]

Opponents of military preparedness say it is supported by those who would profit from increased manufacture of munitions. Opponents of government owned armament plants say such plants are demanded by "pork barrel" interests. The fact that these charges balance each other so nicely should demonstrate that they are irrelevant to the main issue. So long as private profit exists the nation cannot arm in any way which will not be profitable to somebody—at the very least to the laborers employed. Shall the nation therefore go unarmed? The real way to neutralize these lobbies is not blindly to attempt the endless task of defeating their proposals in detail but to subject them to the control of a strong national purpose. A preparedness which includes a well knit national organization of administration, industries, and labor will help create the only kind of government which can be secure against the peculations of small groups and local interests.

MISS MIRIAM LARKING, who has arrived in New York, where she is staying at the Hotel Astor, to arrange for an entertainment for the benefit of the English mine sweepers, is the daughter of the late Col. Cuthbert and of Lady Adela Larking and granddaughter of Lady Adela's father, the second Earl of Listowell. After leaving New York she will go on to Ottawa to visit the governor general and the Duchess of Connaught at Ottawa.

They have both known her from her early childhood, for her parents belonged for years to the Connaught household, Col. Cuthbert Larking as equerry to the duke and Lady Adela as lady in waiting to the duchess.

Col. Larking was also a gentleman usher to King Edward and as such proved a friend at court in more senses than one to many of his American acquaintances.

Few people connected with the court had a larger circle of American acquaintances than Cuthbert Larking, to most of whom he was a useful mentor and guide.

He was a son of John W. Larking, one of the most notable figures in the Levant during the reigns of Khedive Ismail and of his predecessor, Said Pasha, wielding a considerable amount of influence both in Egypt and in Turkey as governor of the Imperial Ottoman bank at Constantinople.

Contrary to expectation, he did not leave a large fortune and Col. Cuthbert and Lady Adela Larking were not, therefore, well off.

Consequently their sons have had to rely upon themselves for a livelihood, and that is why one of them, Arthur Larking, a brother, therefore, of Miss Miriam Larking, has taken to the concert platform as a professional violinist of considerable talent under the name of Arturo Tibaldi, who has made several tours as such in the United States and Canada.

Lady Enid Williams-Drummond, who has instituted proceedings for the dissolution of her marriage with Sir James Williams-Drummond, a young Welsh baronet, who has also large estates in Scotland and to whom she was married less than eighteen months ago, is the sister of Lord Lisburne, who himself married about the same time as his sister Miss Julia Bittencourt, niece of the former president of the republic of Chile.

A good deal of sympathy is felt for Lady Enid, who was called upon to endure so much neglect and public indignity that she was compelled to demand freedom from her matrimonial bonds.

Her patronymic is Vaughan and she belongs to a family that stands in the first rank of the ancient Cymric houses—a family which is wellnigh unique in the undisturbed possession of its original country seat and estates for over a thousand years.

The manor and estate of Trawscoed, which the Anglo-Saxon corrupted into Crosswood, in Cardiganshire, was already owned by the Vaughans at the time of the Norman conquest and has never been alienated, nor has it ever ceased to be occupied by the ancestors of Lady Enid and of her brother, Lord Lisburne.

The founder of the family was Collyn Ap Tangno, chieftain of the five noble tribes of North Wales.

To come down to more recent times, Sir John Vaughan was lord chief justice in the reign of Charles II., and his tomb is familiar to transatlantic visitors to the Temple church in London. His son was lord of the admiralty and his grandson was raised to the peerage as Viscount and afterward Earl of Lisburne.

Ireland has a new representative peer in parliament at Westminster in the person of the young Earl of Kilmorey, who since the beginning of the war has been at the front in France as a major on the staff and who was formerly captain of the First Life guards.

While still unmarried, he enjoys the distinction of having been engaged a greater number of times than any other member of the British peerage. Among others to whom he has plighted his troth in vain have been Miss Enid Duff Assheton-Smith, one of the greatest heiresses of her day, and Miss Lula Pfizer, daughter of Charles Pfizer of New York and Newport.

He is a popular and amusing Irishman, with plenty of good looks, wit and humor, and a talent for dancing as well as for telling the drollest of Irish stories in a most inimitable manner—also a very gallant officer.

Lord Kilmorey remains unwedded because he has been until now far from rich, and because his father, who owns some 44,000 acres in Ireland and over 200,000 acres in England, was so unsuccessful in most of his mining ventures and unfortunate in nearly all of his investments. In fact, Lord Kilmorey's property is so heavily embarrassed as to yield him but a very scant income.

The family of which Lord Kilmorey is the chief bears the name of Needham and is one of ancient Cheshire origin.

Lord Kilmorey's mother, the now widowed Lady Kilmorey, was a Miss Helen Buldock. She was a famous beauty in her day, a good deal of a coquette.

The present Lord Kilmorey, like his father before him, is a Tory. Otherwise it is doubtful whether he would have been elected as a representative peer of Ireland, a dignity which he will hold for the remainder of his life, for whereas the selection rests exclusively with the peers of Ireland, the vast majority of whom belong to the Conservative party, they rarely ever elect a Liberal.

Elections take place only on a vacancy occurring in the list of representative peers of Ireland, who number twenty-eight. The peers do not meet for the purpose, but send their vote by mail to the clerk of the crown at Dublin.

BABY SUNDAY.

IN a well regulated city with a good health department a mother with ten children is expected to lose one in infancy. The mother herself thinks she has done fairly well if only one child has died in infancy. In that same city there are neighborhoods where mothers with ten children each lose three of the ten.

It is said that in certain parts of New Zealand the baby death rate is only a third as high as in well governed cities in this country. For example, three sisters each with ten children would expect to lose only one baby out of the combined brood. The official report of the registrar general shows that in 1912 only one death among twenty babies was the average in New Zealand.

A New Zealand baby had twice as good a chance to live to be 1 year old as a baby in New York, and the advantage was even greater as compared with Chicago.

The babies in the country are no better off than the city babies. Life ought to be as safe for a baby in the United States as anywhere in the world. But it is not. And you and I and all the balance of us are responsible.

This Sunday is the first day of Baby Week. There are two reasons for Baby Week. One is that babies are not as safe as they should be and that you are responsible.

Two years ago there were men who said that the United States could tie one hand behind its back and lick the world. Many said it and a few meant it. The experiences of the last eighteen months have stopped that kind of talk. We now sing a slender song. We have stopped the big words and we are getting ready for the big stick.

Oen reason for Baby Week is to jolt us out of our smugness and to set us to work. The other reason is to teach the art of caring for babies.

This nation-wide Baby Week is being promoted by the General Federation of Women's Clubs. The plan for the campaign in any given city or village is under the direction of the local woman's club. Health departments, infant welfare societies, milk committees, settlements, hospitals, dispensaries, and all other agencies working at baby saving all the year 'round will actively coöperate in work of Baby Week.

Many of the Baby Week campaigns will follow plans outlined in a special bulletin called Baby Week Campaigns. This bulletin was prepared by the children's bureau, of the department of labor, at the suggestion of the officers of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

This is Baby Week according to the program. Ministers have been asked to do their part at one of the Sunday services. On Baby Sunday last year the New York ministers read the following letter from Mayor Mitchel in the churches:

"To the Clergy of New York City—The week of June 20-26 has been set apart by a committee of citizens coöperating with the health department as a week for considering the needs of the infants of this city. It has been suggested that the clergy of the city call to the attention of their congregations the plans of the committee in charge of this excellent undertaking. Their purpose is to fix the attention, especially during this week, of the whole city on the proper care of babies, particularly during hot weather, in order to further reduce infant mortality. It is hardly necessary for me to say that this program seems particularly fitting for the churches' support. Much has been accomplished within the last few years in the saving and protecting of child life in New York. In order that we may progress still further in reducing infant mortality and promoting the welfare of the children of the city, we must have the active coöperation of all citizens and especially of the religious and civic organizations which have so much concern for the city's welfare. I ask, therefore, that you bring this matter to the attention of your congregations, asking their coöperation with the committee in charge.

"JOHN PURROY MITCHEL, Mayor."

The children's bureau suggests that a letter from the mayor or governor be read by the pastor and announcements of the baby welfare meetings of the week be made. And then, that the pastor make such reference to the welfare of babies in his sermon and prayers as he sees fit.

The church will not feel itself in an unaccustomed work when it helps a campaign for babies. Nothing ever done by the Chicago health department went straighter to the heart of things than when it assisted Bishop Rhode in having given a series of lectures on caring for babies in the lecture halls of the Polish, Lithuanian, Bohemian, and Italian Catholic churches of Chicago. These lectures began with an introductory talk by the pastor of the parish. This was followed by talks in the language spoken by the people of the parish given by physicians of their own people.

In 1912 Cutting wrote a book on "The Church and Society," from which the following instances of the activity of the church in behalf of children are taken. A 1916 edition of Cutting could multiply these instances manyfold. St. George's Episcopal church in New York City maintains a tuberculosis class. "It is coöperating with the board of health in the care of 263 families." A Congregational church in Waterville, Me., has made the matter of milk inspection its specific duty and has secured a fairly effective enforcement of present laws. All herds supplying milk to the city have been tested each year with fairly good results and an improving public sentiment. In 1897 the New York Federation of Churches made a population study in a certain part of New York City. They found that the New York laws permitted of horribly insanitary conditions and great overcrowding, and that conditions actually existing were far worse than even the bad law allowed. It was found that the law allowed 975 people to live on an acre of ground.

Out of the facts disclosed by this study grew the movement which eventuated in the New York light shaft law and the New York tenement house department. Out of the New York tenement house department grew the New York housing commission and later the national housing commission.

The Brooklyn Heights Church and Civic league coöperated with the tenement house commission to provide legal air and light in 1,383 rooms previously totally dark. The Rev. L. W. Sprague says that in the district for which the Church of the Pilgrims had responsibility the clergy and lay assistants inspected and found 169 dark rooms in use in violation of the tenement house law. These men, after inspecting the tenements assigned to them, interviewed the landlords whenever possible, in many instances persuading them to make the necessary changes. "After about three months' work one-half of the dark rooms of our district had light."

The social service commission of San Francisco helped secure a special milk inspection ordinance for that city and two meat inspection ordinances for Oakland.

In 1907 St. George's church in New York City organized a tuberculosis class. The First Parish church of Cambridge has a boys' club which scouts for insanitary streets and alleys. These are reported to the proper authorities. The social service commission of Milwaukee supported a bill passed by the legislature reporting on occupational diseases.

St. George's church in New York City has maintained a baby nurse for its district for years. The nurse works under the direction of the health department. The Morningside Presbyterian church ran a milk depot which was under the general supervision of the health department and the Infants' Milk Station association.

Dr. Cutting says that the Roman Catholic priests, and particularly the Polish priests, are helpful in the baby saving campaigns distributing literature among their congregations, directing mothers to milk stations, noting the progress of the work in their sermons. No charities do any better work for the preservation of the lives and health of babies than those which are fostered by Jewish congregations.

Under Dean Sumner, now Bishop Sumner of Portland, the Episcopal cathedral of Chicago inaugurated classes for mothers which have been most successful in reducing the infant mortality in the ward in which the cathedral is located.

Ex-Mayor Seidel reports that through coöperation with one Polish priest the death rate in one Milwaukee ward was reduced 60 per cent. Mr. Kruesi reported that the churches of Boston have rendered great help to the Milk and Baby Hygiene association.

The Massachusetts social service commission made a study of infant mortality in Fall River, Lowell, Lawrence, and New Bedford, calling attention to conditions which needed improvement.

This catalogue of achievements in the contest for better health conditions by the churches could be almost indefinitely prolonged. The citations do not exhaust the list given by Cutting, and that list was only partial for the years before 1912.

Cutting states that Christianity's rescue work, the hospital, has been one of her noblest contributions to civilization. The same claim could be made for asylums, homes, and dispensaries. "In this ministry to the human body the church has added to the hospital the institution of organized nursing."

Verily, the church will find no inconsistency in lending its help to Baby Sunday.

Probably the Sunday schools will find a place for instruction in some phase of baby care in their program for Baby Sunday. In some schools the superintendent will make a talk on what children can do to help care for babies. In others the teachers will question the children about what is good and what is bad for a baby, supplementing the quiz with practical, homely advice. In still others students to whom the task has previously been allotted will read essays on the baby in the home.

CHICKEN POX AND SMALLPOX.

M. J. T. writes: "Our town has had a siege of smallpox. The appended questions are what I would like to know the answers to. They are the opinions of doctors and patients. Our cases were quarantined (two), but a neighboring town had smallpox and chickenpox and some were quarantined and the rest were not. Then when the doctor fumigated he used one pound sulphur candles; then our residents called next day at one of the houses, after fumigation, and he took sick in the required time with smallpox.

"1. Opinion is that a child under 14 has chickenpox and that a person over 14 can take smallpox from the germs of this chickenpox. Is this true? (I had both chicken and small pox before I was 10 years old.)

"2. Will one sulphur candle, or even two, in a room kill disease germs?

"3. How long will one live after the pelvic organs are removed?

"4. What causes lumbago and what can be done to cure it?

"5. A nurse has told me that after removing the appendix I could only live ten years. Is this true?

"6. Would you advise operation for an exophthalmic goiter where the person is suffering nerve prostration and has no vitality? The goiter keeps growing and I have gained very little strength since my health broke."

REPLY.

1, 5. No.

2. Yes, if the room is small, the cracks are properly stopped, and the fumigation is done properly.

3. Maybe ten years; maybe seventy.

4. Infection from the tonsils, teeth, nose, appendix, gall bladder or some other suppurating area.

6. I advise you to see a physician.

WALL PAPER POISON.

C. H. writes: "I work in the wall paper department of a large store in Chicago, and am troubled with sore throat and sometimes a weak, sick feeling since going to this work. [1] Do you think it is induced by the fine dust from the wall paper? [2] Do some wall paper colors contain arsenic or other poisons?"

REPLY.

1. It is possible but not probable. The trouble is probably in your throat, and you should see your physician. It may be a matter for the physicians at the state factory department. At least, you might see them.

2. Yes.

BEST BEDTIME.

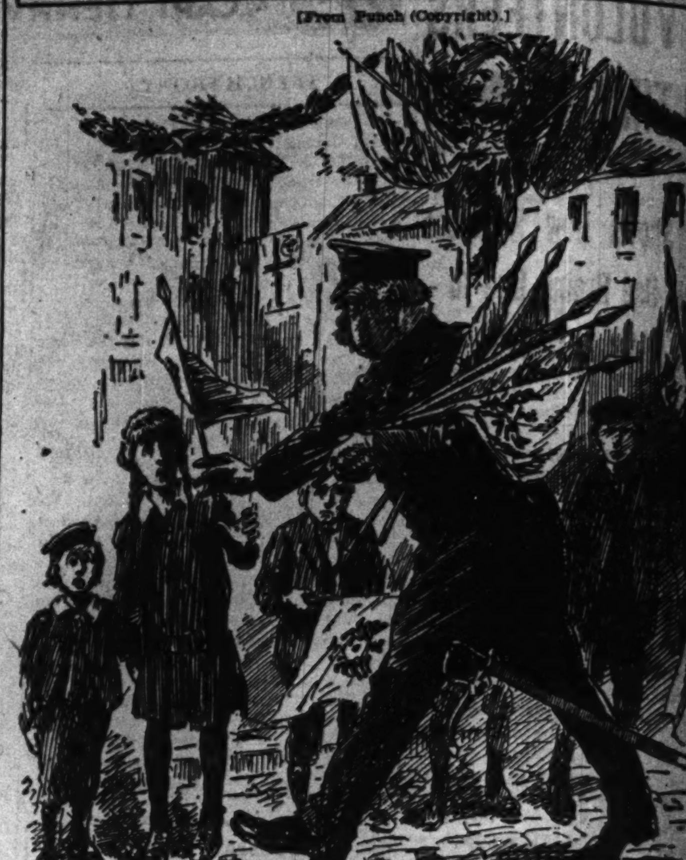
C. W. writes: "Would greatly appreciate an answer in regard to this matter. Is it healthy to go to bed every evening as early as 7 or 8 o'clock and also whether the sleep before midnight is better than after?"

REPLY.

If you must get up at 3 or 4 it is proper to go to bed at 7 or 8. Otherwise not. Sleep before midnight is no better than that after. The first hour or two of sleep is much deeper and more restful than that which follows. This is true regardless of the hour of day.

A GERMAN HOLIDAY

[From Punch (Copyright).]



Child—Please, sir, what is this holiday for?
Official—Because our Zeppelins have conquered England.
Child—Have they brought us back any bread?
Official—Don't ask silly questions. Wave your flag.

NO ORDINANCE COVERING MATTER.

Chicago, Feb. 29.—[To the Friend of the People.]—I wish to inquire if there is any ordinance governing the manner of removing dust and dirt from our sidewalks in the loop. The obnoxious cloud of dust laden with disease germs that accompanies the sweeping of sidewalks in every portion of the loop I should think would be a matter sufficiently serious to warrant the consideration of our aldermen and board of health.

CONSTANT READER.

I am not able to discover any requirement applicable to this matter, except that section 2,329 of the municipal code prohibits the washing of windows over the sidewalk between May 1 and Oct. 1, and between the hours of 7 a. m. and 7 p. m. at all periods of the year.

Commissioner of Health.

PAVING STRONG STREET.

Chicago, Feb. 27.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Kindly advise me if the intention is to pave Strong, Argyle and Ainslee streets, between Fiftieth and Fifty-first avenues, this summer?

F. G. WESTPFAHL, 5047 Strong street.

We are ready to pave the system of streets, including Argyle and Ainslie streets, between Norwood Park and Lavergne avenues, and Strong street, between Lockwood and Lavergne avenues, as soon as we can dispose of the objections filed by some of the property owners. The case is now on a calendar and we expect to be in a position to pave the street during the summer.

E. J. GLACKIN,
Secretary.

WILL HAVE NUMBER CORRECTED.

Chicago, Feb. 28.—[To the Friend of the People.]—There appears to be a great dispute over our house numbers. My number is 5002 Wabansia avenue. My neighbor next door west is 5000. Some one is wrong. Please have this corrected.

E. R. SEM.

The number 5000 referred to is correct. The building numbered 5002 is incorrectly numbered; it should be 4948 Wabansia avenue. A notice will be served by this bureau requiring the correction of this number.

ILLINOIS LAW ON REMARRIAGE.

Naperville, Ill., Feb. 25.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—A lady friend of mine obtained a divorce from her husband last month and was informed by her lawyer that as the case was not contested she was at liberty to marry again at once if she so desired. He informed her that the law had been amended to that effect. Kindly advise me if he is correct.

The law of Illinois prohibiting remarriage within one year after divorce to any [illegible] the original husband or wife from which the divorce was obtained has not been repealed. On the contrary, the last legislature passed a law, known as the "Uniform Marriage Evasion Act," which provides:

"That if any person residing and intending to continue to reside in this state and who is disabled or prohibited from contracting marriage under the laws of this state shall go into another state or country and there contract a marriage prohibited and declared void by the laws of this state, such marriage shall be null and void for all purposes in this state, with the same effect as though such prohibited marriage had been entered into in this state."

SECOND MARRIAGE NOT LEGAL.

Chicago, Feb. 28.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I lived in Illinois for thirty-five years and got married [illegible] years ago. I got a divorce four years ago, and went to Indiana two weeks after my divorce and got married again and came back to live in Illinois. Is my marriage legal or not?

MRS. J. W. I.

Your second marriage is not legal in Illinois and you must be married again in order to make such marriage legal.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

WITNESSES TO WILL.

Chicago, Feb. 26.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Kindly inform me if a will is legal without being sworn to before a notary public. How many witnesses should there be?

[illegible]

In Illinois a will is legal without being sworn to by a notary public. There must be at least two disinterested witnesses. We would strongly advise you to secure the services of a competent attorney in this matter.

IDEALS STILL LIVE.

Chicago, March 1.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Sir: That "the pen is mightier than the sword" becomes vindicated again in the two masterful articles of today's SUNDAY TRIBUNE by Edward Goldbeck and Robert Herrick, respectively. These essays contain the real stuff and sufficient gastric juice to disintegrate and to completely digest all the nonsensical stuff hitherto written on pacifism and preparedness.

We need more such articles to shake off our lethargy and to ascend to the world position we should occupy; the wrongs of suffering humanity rightfully make this demand. Our isolation does not exonerate us, nor does diplomacy discharge us from the debts we owe to all those who gave up their lives for our cause, the cause of liberty.

Let it not go unchallenged that humanity is dead, that it possesses no heart, that the war is devouring all the ideals which were gotten at so much sacrifice, and for which there is no equivalent in money. Let us forever secure these ideals for all humanity if it takes billions to do it, or the greatest army and navy the world has ever known—they are cheap at any price.

MORAL PREPAREDNESS FIRST.

Madison, Wis., Feb. 29.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Edward Goldbeck's "Preparedness a Moral Revolution" is the very best article that has appeared in the Chicago papers since the cry began. Military preparedness alone means in the end military despotism. True preparedness for a war of defense or for any struggle is always in the moral efficiency as well as the physical of a whole people. A government must make it possible for all its people to earn homes and protect these homes, and the people in their labors if all citizens are to rush to its protection in its time of need. A federal child labor law that gives protection to all children from birth to 14 years, a minimum wage law for the unskilled workers, men and women, will do more for true preparedness than billions for purely military necessities.

We can learn something from England's condition. Millions of her people did not know they had a country. Drink was their only friend, for it deadened their consciousness of wretchedness and failure. We can learn of France. The government had given its poorest people a chance to earn and possess homes and it protected them in their homes. All France volunteered the day war broke out. We can learn from Germany. The fatherland protects its humblest workers. In the United States we all believe in preparedness, but not that which adds fabulous wealth to the already rich and increases the burdens of the overburdened.

When men and mothers have to [illegible] and fight for decent living conditions the germ of patriotism is likely to be destroyed even if it has survived child labor and child hunger. A nation that cannot protect its humblest citizens, its [illegible] and growing children is not in a position to demand great devotion from them in time of need. THE TRIBUNE'S editorial should be for the making of a healthy, happy people, who will gladly, [illegible] prepare themselves for every need of the country. Physical, moral, and [illegible] preparedness must precede military preparedness if the latter is to be of [illegible] value.

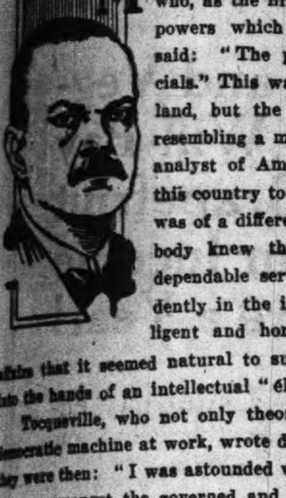
THE PRESIDENT

by Edward Goldbeck



MONTESQUIEU, the famous theorist of political science, who, as the first, formulated the doctrine of the division of powers which is realized in the American constitution, said: "The people are admirable in choosing their officials." This was an impression he brought home from England, but the England of that time was very far from resembling a modern democracy. Alexis de Tocqueville, the analyst of American and French democracy, who came to this country to study democratic institutions at their source, was of a different opinion. When Montesquieu wrote everybody knew that small coteries only choose reliable and dependable servants of their ambitions, while it is so evidently in the interest of a nation to intrust its most intelligent and honest members with the direction of public affairs that it seemed natural to surmise that democracy would put the power into the hands of an intellectual "élite."

Tocqueville, who not only theorized but used his opportunity of seeing the democratic machine at work, wrote down these words, which are as valid today as they were then: "I was astounded when I discovered to what a degree merit was common amongst the governed and how little it was so amongst the governing ones." Later on he explains this seeming anomaly. "You demand and expect from the part of the masses the aptitudes of a psychologist and a moralist which they cannot possibly have. What a long study, how many diverse notions are necessary to form an exact idea of the character of a single man! The greatest geniuses go astray in trying it, and the masses should be able to do it! They never can find the time and the means of devoting themselves to such a work. They always judge hastily and only notice the most evident features."

OF these sentences I was reminded by the contemplation of President Wilson's work. President Wilson seems a failure to me, and I shall try to say what elements in his life and character made him so.

He was a schoolmaster, and perhaps it is more adequate to say he is a schoolmaster. This seems a "character indelebilis." Once a schoolmaster, always a schoolmaster. There is no vocation which is less likely to prepare a man for the highest office of the United States, which is the most arduous office in the world. A schoolmaster is accustomed to speak, and while he speaks there is reverent silence. "I dare say," Mr. Wilson said in his recent speech before the Gridiron club in New York, "that it is difficult to think while so many people are talking in a way that obscures counsel and is entirely off the point." That is the schoolmaster's attitude; he thinks—nay, he knows—that the pupils are "off the point" and had better be silent, but the statesman, the statesman of genius, is endowed with the instinct of grasping the meaning of this bewildering polyphony.

The schoolmaster lays down the law; he does not expect any help from his class; he is an autocrat by right and duty. He educates and leads minors. Do you not recognize these traits in President Wilson's mental makeup? He assures us again and again that HE will try to keep us out of war; as if this country were an intellectual desert. If it is, he surely is its sphinx. His ways have at least this in common with those of Providence, that they are inscrutable and nobody is in his secret. The chairman of the committee on foreign affairs in the midst of a most dangerous crisis must ask him what he thinks and intends to do.

Mr. Wilson expects the nation to follow him through all his self-contradictions and inconsistencies. Why, of course, pupils must blindly rely upon the wisdom of the teacher. On Monday he is too proud to fight; on Tuesday he likes a fight and thinks that is in his blood; on Wednesday he refuses to turn this country into an armed camp; on Thursday he proclaims that we ought to have the incomparably greatest navy; on Friday he thinks the German standpoint "reasonable"; on Saturday he opposes it and threatens with war if the Germans should be unreasonable enough to stick to their reasonable argument. A schoolmaster is not accustomed to contradiction; he tolerates it only from himself.

"THE infinite difficulty of public affairs, gentlemen, is not to discover the signs of the heavens and the directions of the wind, but to square the things you do by the not simple but complicated standard of justice." I doubt very much that Washington, Lincoln, Cavour, or Bismarck would assent. Bismarck has spoken about the task of the statesman a word of wonderful poetical power and deepest insight. "Even the greatest statesman," he said, "can only try to hear the step of God in history and then rush out to grasp his fluttering mantle!" (Er kann nur den Schritt Gottes in der Weltgeschichte vernehmen und dann hervorspringen, um seinen flatternden Mantel zu fassen.) Which means that expediency, of course in the highest sense of the word, is the lodestar of the man who rules and guides a nation. What Wilson says is doctrinaire, and nobody who has the political instinct would contrast justice and expediency as he does. The real statesman knows that the issues are not so simple as to allow such an arrangement and he knows that without a strong dose of opportunism he would become a Don Quixote. But who would have to pay the expenses of his quixotism? The nation.

Secondly, Mr. Wilson is an orator. The pity is that in a democracy every public man has to be an orator; he has to possess this enchanting but dangerous gift. An Italian essayist has called eloquence "the pest of the Latin race." Very seldom an orator is a statesman; neither Cleon nor Gambetta was. But Mr. Wilson is more than that; he is a rhetorician. Listen to a few of his sentences: "Valor is self-respecting. Valor is circumspect. Valor strikes only when it is right to strike. Valor withholds itself from all small implications and entanglements and waits for the great opportunity when the sword will flash as if it carried the light of heaven upon its blade."

Of course you must always read "I" instead of "valor." But is this the moment for flowery language? One of the words the president cherishes is "sober"; he proclaims his predilection for soberness in the wildest language. (In the mouth of a president we call wild language what we might call sober in the man on the street.) The rhetorician wants to make an effect, and to attain this he must overstate, he must elaborate telling antitheses, he must use catch words, he must idealize his own nation—in short, he must renounce being a business man, and politics is business on the grandest scale.

Thirdly, Mr. Wilson has the literary mind. I shall go farther and say that he has the mind of a journalist. He would be excellent on the highbrow page. He sees a complex of things and understands immediately that in a short essay it is impossible to show his readers the whole panorama of the issue. So he takes a certain point of view and demonstrates its truth. He arranges the facts to suit him; he does it instinctively, not with the vicious idea to mislead the public. He wants to be as lucid, as brilliant, as stunning as possible. But that is not the task of the statesman. "Politik," Bismarck has said, "ist die Kunst des Möglichen." (Politics is the art of the possible.) One could also say, "Politics is the art of choosing the minor evil." The chase for the ideal is the characteristic of the man who was born for the study and not for the arena. The statesman has to handle facts, which means that he has to handle human beings. The old Thiers used to say, "Il n'y a pas de problèmes, il n'y a que des hommes." Political problems are the result of clashing human interests and can only be solved by the gentle art of compromise.

AT bottom, the schoolmaster, the orator, and the literary man is vain. These men are constantly convincing themselves of their noble motives, intellectual distinction, magnetic personality. Nothing makes it more difficult to be a good business man than inflated ideas about your own powers. We may say about Wilson what Bismarck said about Prince Gortschakoff: "Il se mire dans son encrier" (He mirrors himself in his inkstand). In his earlier days he wrote a book called "Mere Literature." What a prophetic mind! I think that all he has given us during the last year was "Mere Literature." But literature sometimes sets the world aflame.

What sort of a president do we need? We need a man who advocates moderate measures and backs them up steadfastly and energetically. A man who stands with both feet on this earth. Let him be humdrum! If he does not bewilder the country by the daily display of his dazzling faculties, so much the better! Let us have a business man, but a business man who has a business mind.

A ZEPPELIN RAID

By Sterling Heilig

PARIS, Feb. 14.—It began at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Mother and I were writing letters in the living room by the electric light—dull afternoon of fog and northern winter climate. Suddenly the light went out. Three minutes later it started up of itself. Twice again in the afternoon the electricity stopped and started. "Bless the secteur," I said, "they're bungling the machinery, all their best mechanics being in war factories!"

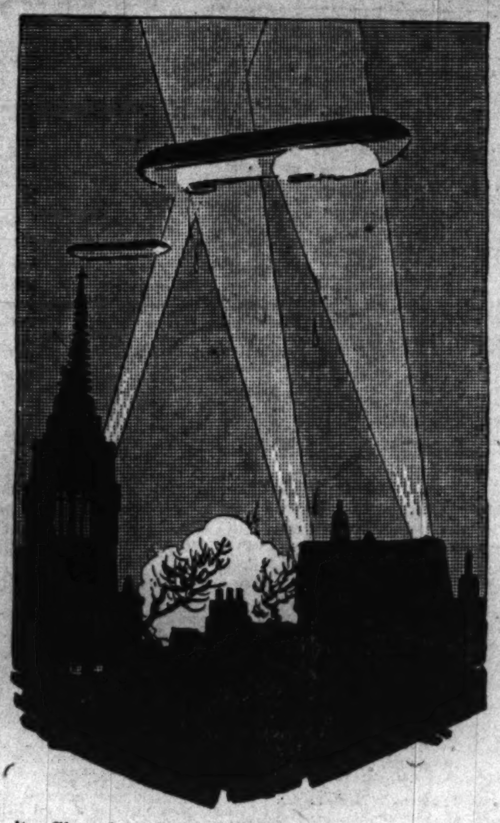
We live in a secteur on the edge of a suburb—I may not tell localities. The French, following the English system, ask us not to give any details capable of being used for reference. The Zeppelins navigate by dead reckoning, by compass, speed, marked maps, and references. The night is dark and the sky is big.

We are home people. We often eat at home, sleep at home, and sit around the lamp after dinner. Some time after 9 p. m. the light went out again. "Bless the secteur," we said, and waited for the light—which did not come. In the street a peremptory voice commanded some one to "put that out!" Vague confusion down there. Mother says, "The gas won't light in the kitchen!" At that moment, tr-ra-ra-ra-ta-ra! "The garde à vous!" murmured Dewey. Far off in the night came the old trumpet call, almost forgotten warning against Zeppelins!

We have a balcony. We have two balconies, one front, one back. This will help confuse a lot for reference. We ran to a balcony and looked—no one can guess in what direction, for we may have looked diagonally on either hand, or straight ahead, or some direction in between. On the edge of a suburb we can see the sky of Paris—and the sky outside beyond Paris, in three points of the compass. We saw a reassuring sight. We saw two great French dirigibles, maneuvering. The noise of their motors became louder and fainter.

Dring! Our doorbell. Beauty in distress, great fur ulster, Vosges embroidered lingerie, taffeta petticoat, snow boots, hand valise, and lighted candle in her hands and golden hair down her back in a braid, our young neighbor, Mme. D—— appeared, with Angèle, her maid, bearing blankets. They were en route for the cellar.

"Tut," we said, "it's only a rehearsal. Do you not remember how the lights went out this afternoon? The authorities were getting ready. There are no Zeppelins. It is practice, like the fire alarm at sea. Come to the balcony—and see how well we are guarded. There are two French dirigibles over there!"



We went to watch the great monsters.

OVER there in the distance they visibly maneuvered, swinging, rising, descending. The higher they went the better they were visible, seen in a long slant above the ground fog—which was thick and high.

"What if they were Zeppelins!" shivered Madame.

"Ha," we laughed, "there'd be some firing, cannons and searchlights, the whole business! Zeppelins would not dare come lighted! See them swinging by their head and tail lights!"

Madame was for the cellar all the same. Laughter on the stairs. Tenants were carrying down chairs, little tables, rugs, an alcohol stove, teapot, and little comforts. The cellar is warm and dry.

In the flat we dress by candles. It is cold. Mother asks for quinine.

Crash! Did you hear that? A far off muffled crash. Dewey comes from the balcony in overcoat and hat.

"The French dirigibles are gone," he says. "I saw a flight of aeroplanes like a bunch of rockets!"

Crash!

We went to the other balcony.

"What is that bag of light?" It looks like a luminous cloud. "Some new trick of the defense," we argued. At that moment a shaft of watery light swung from it, hit us weakly in the eyes, and disappeared. We understood. Low, thick little clouds like wads of cotton met and mingled with the fog, which was mounting. A searchlight had lit up one of them for a moment. Far away a falling red light. Swift darting stars. "Look at the aeroplanes!" How swift they are by night! It's cold out here. We'll get our death! Let's go inside to warm ourselves.

Silence. Waiting. We are sure it is a false alarm, a dress rehearsal. But what were those crashes? Cannons, pardie! We complain of the bother of it, but we are all proud of the defense of Paris. For ten months no Zeppelin has penetrated—in spite of continual efforts to sneak past in the dark. The automatic "listeners" are well nigh perfect. They are reversed megaphone horns constructed to receive sounds—and register their intensity on a dial. They are vast horns, facing north, south, east, and west. The imperceptible rumble of a Zeppelin motor fifteen miles distant is caught by their microphones in the still countryside. Which dial registers the strongest this time? The north and east dials are alike. A Zeppelin is coming from the northeast. Alarm the front aeroplanes! Notify the Paris squadrons, the forts, the searchlights, and the automobile batteries!

A man's voice comes from the street: ". . . two Zeppelins over Paris . . ." Nobody believes it. Shut that window! Don't go near that window with a candle! You might be accused of making signals!

Voices on the stairs. We peep out for news. Up come Mme. D—— and Angèle with the blankets. The fair creature's head nods.

"They all went to bed and left me in the cellar. I'm afraid down there alone. There might be mice!"

The eyes close, but the lips still speak: "Bed, dodo! Ring if anything happens!"

Alone in the dark flat we sit by the gutting candle. Snore. Mother sleeps. Really, I shall go to bed. Then suddenly the electric lights flash up, all bright and gay. The "dress rehearsal" is over . . .

NEXT morning we read the papers. Seventeen deaths and twenty wounded! "Those French dirigibles," I said, "were Zeppelins!" We look at each other in silence.

That silence is the note of Paris. Everybody knows that the fog was exceptional. It must have hid the night birds. Yet they were found and ignominiously chased—too late.

"The Zeppelins did not know where they were," we said. "It explains their queer maneuvers."

The German communique has since reached us via Geneva. It declares that they "attacked the fortress of Paris with apparently satisfactory results." This, after they had learned the news from Paris via Geneva. Evidently the Zeppelins dropped their bombs on one small area while rising rapidly and fled. Beneath them was the impenetrable fog. Were they even sure that they were over Paris for a moment?

Not one of three waiters or half a dozen friends we met had seen the Zeppelins. As the day progressed I could not meet a person who had seen the Zeppelins. But passengers on Ceinture railway trains (grand belt round Paris) had seen them; and letters have come to the newspapers from numerous citizens living round the outskirts. Probably no one could see them from Paris—if the fog screened them. If so they could only be seen on a long slant above the ground fog. But neither could the Zeppelins see beneath them!

No, the Zeppelins steered rapidly for Paris by compass and calculation above an exceptional fog. Their speed was probably sixty miles per hour. When they hoped and believed themselves to be near Paris they groped their way, rising, descending, peering, uncertain! Suddenly alarmed, they dropped their bombs and trusted for the best—that they might fall on houses full of sleeping women and children.

And the result turned out "satisfactory."

THAT afternoon we took a taxi ride. The photographers were busy. You ought to see those houses—and the bombs.

One bomb, which failed to explode, weighs 225 pounds and looks like an old fashioned cannon ball, nearly two feet in diameter and six feet round. It is a hollow sphere of steel, two inches thick, containing nearly 100 pounds of trinitroteloul—wickedest of high explosives.

Falling from the height of 9,000 to 11,000 feet, at which the Zeppelins rose to flee, its rate of speed on hitting the top of a house would be about 250 yards per second, which, according to the mechanical laws of falling bodies, represents a force of thirty tons for a steel ball weighing nearly 100 pounds. It probably smashes through roof and top floor by its acquired momentum alone, and possibly deeper. Its explosion by percussion is found to have been set for one second after striking—to make the diabolical explosion begin deep down in the house!

One of the new Zeppelin bombs. By some defect it failed to explode. It is of steel, 2 inches thick, weighs 225 pounds, and contains nearly 100 pounds of trinitrotoluol—the wickedest of high explosives. (Photograph copyright by Sterling Heilig.)

It results that the second, third, fourth, and fifth floors up of an ordinary five floor Paris apartment house are sure to be blown out when it is squarely hit; and there is no safety (as was formerly imagined) on the first floor up or ground floor either!

Nor is there safety in the cellar. These great bombs, falling in a courtyard, smash downward and outward, crushing in the foundation walls upon the cellar.

Some say there is greater safety in the open street because the mass of killed were killed in houses. It is a fallacy. Had bombs chanced to fall in crowded places—and streets were crowded—there would have been hecatombs to tell of! A policeman in an empty street at fifteen steps was blown to atoms.

You should see the Paris crowd.

No loud talk, no gesticulating, no criticism of the defense. Just hot indignation, held in, almost silent, against the Germans, with brief phrases, "day of reckoning" and "they" may "come again," but "we shall get them!"

I WENT home in the evening wondering. Was it a fluke? Will they "come again"? The megaphone "listeners" worked perfectly. Paris was warned from a distance. Why did not the cannons of the forts shoot? Have the best aviators been sent to the front? Where were the automobile batteries? Of course, the fog. Also, in the last ten months they have had much practice of locating and chasing back Zeppelins as they try to cross the "listening" front; but Paris proper has had no practice fighting Zeppelins on her very outskirts. Practice makes perfect. Danger makes readiness. They may come again; but there won't be a fog always.

"Will they come again, monsieur?" inquires Louise, our servant, clearing off the dinner table. Louise was not a servant before the war. She has her own home. She returns to it nightly. We tell her to go off early—later the streets might be darkened.

After dinner we sit round the lamp as usual.

Nine o'clock, 10 o'clock. Shall we go to bed? It is so annoying to jump up and dress! Let's wait a little. Half past 10. It is annoying, also, to sit waiting. "No, really, mother, I think you can go to bed now. I shall——"

Ta-ra-ra-ta-ra-ra!

Calls and rumors in the street again.

At the same moment the electric light goes out. In our secteur the warning is perfect. I must ring up Mme. D——, our fair neighbor on the same floor. She is for the cellar in spite of all arguments. Mother hates the cellar. After all it is a tossup. If the house is hit all floors are bad. If the house is not hit the home flat is comfortable.

I peer from a balcony. The black night and fog. No searchlights. Seemingly three blocks away a ruddy light at the height of a roof. Now it is lower. "There's a house on fire!" I called. But no, the flaming light descends more. Down, down. Now it is the ground floor that seems burning. And now, blackness. In the morning I look across there. I see the broad staircase windows of a new apartment house! Had some one signaled to the Germans with a colored fusee?

I peer from the other balcony.

Crash!

The sound is far away. In the distant blackness there are little, short flashes—evidently French aeroplanes firing their cannons; but we hear no sounds from them. It is like heat lightning, except that the flashes are small, each in its spot. Flash! Flash! Continual silent flickering. Flash! Flash! No searchlights. Silence.

In the flat we are tired of waiting. Where is mother? She has gone to lie down.

I try to read by candle light on my bed. It is a collection of German classics. I read from Gen. Hartmann: "When the national war breaks out terrorism becomes a militarily necessary principle." From Bismarck: "You must inflict on the inhabitants of cities . . . the maximum of suffering to disgust them with the struggle and cause them to press their government for peace. Leave the populations only their eyes to weep with!" Again from Bismarck: "Make the war so terrible for civilian populations that they themselves will cry for peace!" And from Clausewitz: "The side which uses force without any scruple whatsoever . . ."

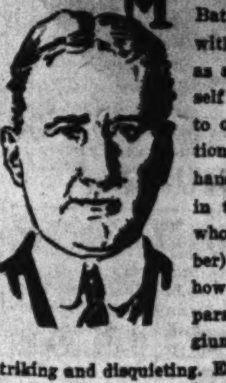
Click!

I must have slept.

The jolly electric light is burning brilliant in the flat. It is midnight. The alarm is over.

EXAMPLE AND WARNING

By Robert Herrick



MR. OLIVER'S instructive, impressive book, "Ordeal by Battle," seems unfortunately named; it is less concerned with England at war for her life than with England as a democracy trying to govern herself and protect herself against annihilation. As such it is quite as instructive to ourselves as to the English, although it scarcely mentions the United States. I should like to see it in the hands of every vague minded American pacifist, still more in the hands of every selfishly indifferent American (of whom even among our youth there are an appalling number) who thinks that his country will muddle along somehow without any disaster that will affect him. For the parallelism between England before Germany invaded Belgium and the United States at the present moment is both striking and disquieting. Englishmen in those days did not believe generally in the possibility of another great war, still less in the possibility of danger to themselves in their uninvaded island. The people could not be induced to take any interest in England's relations to neighboring powers. The ordinary Englishman thought that all the reports of Germany's extraordinary effort in military ways were nothing but talk, that the warnings emitted at times by more enlightened Englishmen who knew Germany and understood what was going on over there were the ravings of mere scaremongers or of professional agitators. And the Asquith government, although it had the best of reasons to know that Europe was sitting on a powder magazine—especially since the Agadir affair—not only neglected to take any precautions against a resort to arms but in a peculiarly cowardly fashion gave up Lord Roberts to popular derision and abuse because the shrewd old man went out on his own initiative to stir his country up to a realization of its dangers!

THE leading newspapers, such as the Manchester Guardian and the London Nation, scored Lord Roberts for trouble making, calling on the government to suppress him as an insulter of a friendly power, deriding him as an obsessed old man. All this scarcely two years before the little expeditionary army melted away on the retreat from Mons! If journalists ever eat their ill considered words surely the English press has had ample opportunity to consume theirs—now that it is too late. Lord Roberts, with all his prestige, his personal influence, could do little to arouse England to a sense of danger, as Mr. Oliver relates.

The Asquith government, true to the type of politician, not only let the country remain in its fatuous dream of perpetual peace but entered into international agreements with France and Russia which they must have known England could not properly fulfill with the forces that she had at her disposal. It was easier, as always in a democracy, to feed the people with platitudes than to tell them unpleasant truths. The Asquith set were afraid of the people, as the politicians always are—so afraid that they lost their one chance of preventing the whole dreadful business by telling Germany squarely at the outset in those fateful days of July, 1914, that England would fight if Germany precipitated a European conflict. Asquith and Grey and the rest were afraid lest the country might not "stand for" such a bold policy, and not until England rose in indignation at the invasion of Belgium did these timid politicians become convinced that Englishmen would stand now as before for keeping their engagements—and also for self-preservation.

If Englishmen ignored for many years the menace that threatened them, if they jeered at Lord Roberts when he warned them what Germany was about, if since the war began they have been slow in coming to a full realization of what it means to them, the fearful politicians have themselves to thank. Actuated by the politician's one passion, to retain power, they let Englishmen believe that there was no danger threatening when they must have known by what a frayed thread the peace of Europe was hanging; they let Englishmen believe that their small professional army, with a few militia, was sufficient for all necessary defense. And at the same time they went on the bond for France and Russia, who were perilously exposed to military disturbance.

THE parallels between the English situation then and our own today are almost too plain to need demonstration. Americans have hardly any more reason to believe themselves secure from aggression with the Atlantic ocean as a buffer than had the English before August, 1914, with the channel that had not been crossed by a hostile foe in many hundred years. Englishmen do not feel so secure today in their island behind their fleet as they did when Lord Roberts was warning them. Nor should we. Moreover we have engaged ourselves, as had England, to an indefinite foreign policy, thanks to President Wilson's reaffirmation of the Monroe doctrine, which at any time might take us deep into trouble without the means to fulfill our military obligation.

It has been impossible to get any serious consideration from congress on military and naval matters because congress has been convinced that the people of the country would not stand for any substantial increase in our military power. Even now when a Democratic administration has tardily waked to the necessity of having more shot in the locker than diplomatic phrases, when the president has gone to the pains of touring the country in behalf of a very modest program of national defense, good judges of congress' habits are skeptical that anything of real significance will result from the fearful example we have before us.

"A few more ships, something in the way of militia graft, that's all," is what Washington observers are predicting. In other words, the least possible that will enable the Democratic party to go before the country in the approaching election with an excuse of having "done something" for national defense. "The people don't want it," say the politicians, "they don't see the necessity." Gen. Wood, the best informed man in the country on the question, has, like Lord Roberts in England, done his best to inform Americans of their real situation, with about the same result.

President Wilson, even when bent on rousing public opinion to the necessity of national preparedness, was fearful lest he might unduly excite the country. He hinted mysteriously of possible dangers, even imminent ones, but he did not state them plainly. His words and, even more, his uncertain handling of the Lusitania negotiations, would seem to indicate that the administration has knowledge of facts which it does not deem wise to publish. Again, it is the case of politicians not trusting the people in a democracy, preferring to trust to luck that disagreeable possibilities may not come true. Yet, as England has learned, the people are never so timid as their leaders believe them. The one safe way to treat a democracy would seem to be with entire candor and trust.

CONGRESS doubtless has been much impressed by the activities of certain pacifists who have appeared before them and spoken at great length against national defense. The same brand of pacifists existed widely in England before the war. They denounced Lord Roberts' efforts as "shocking," also as "insulting to a friendly nation with whom England was at peace." They became very indignant that the purity of Germany's motives in her extraordinary preparations for war should be questioned. The English pacifists had their way; beyond keeping up the navy England did absolutely nothing to prepare for war, for national defense. All the world knows the result. The brave little army gave itself like heroes to stem the German onslaught. Untrained and inexperienced English boys stopped Germany's road to Calais with their dead bodies. For her unpreparedness England must face, even with victory, an enormous debt in lives and treasure. After the example of England, how is it that the old fallacy of armament leading to war continues to raise its head? Would England have been in war any sooner if she had raised and trained a competent army of a million men to throw into Belgium when Germany crossed the frontier? The likelihood is there would have been no war if England had had that army ready in August, 1914; at any rate not this war. Now England is preparing to maintain an army of four or five millions, with losses to date that run over half a million.

Can democracy learn anything from example or must dire experience always be the teacher?

VAST AREA IN ALASKA SUITED TO SMALL FARMS

64,000,000 Acres of Tillable Land—U. S. Experiment Stations Improve Seed.

BY FRANK G. CARPENTER.

[Copyright: 1916: By Frank G. Carpenter.]

SITKA, Alaska.—I have just had my first view of the practical possibilities of Alaskan farming. Our agricultural department has one of its experimental stations at Sitka, and here also is the headquarters from which the three other experiment stations are managed.

One of these is at Rampart, on the Yukon river, near the arctic circle. Another is near Fairbanks, in the rich valley of the Tanana, in the heart of Alaska, and a third is on the island of Kodiak, situated within a short distance of Seward, the ocean terminus of the new railroad.

Kodiak is bigger than Porto Rico. Its speciality is stock rearing and dairying. The Fairbanks station is in the center of a great agricultural region. It is devoted to all around farming. Rampart is so far north that it forms the best place for the breeding of oats, barley, and wheat for the cold lands.

The experiments at Sitka are devoted to vegetable gardening and the raising of berries and other small fruit. This part of the territory is mountainous and is largely made up of islands. It has no great farming areas, and the crops come from patches of land about the bays or in the valleys. Nevertheless there are many small farms, and the mining communities and towns are getting some of their supplies from them.

Station Has Greenhouse.

The experiment farm at Sitka lies under the shadow of Mount Verstovia, within a quarter of a mile of the town. The farm has a great greenhouse or fruit forcing plant, and the fields about this are devoted to vegetables and grain and to gardens and orchards.

There are acres of strawberries and raspberries and orchards of apples, cherries, and apricots. The strawberries are finer than I have seen in any part of the United States or Europe. I saw some berries almost as big as hen's eggs and many over an inch in diameter.

The berries have been produced by cross breeding the wild native plants with other strawberries brought here from all parts of the world. There are now several thousand different kinds of strawberries growing at the station, and nearly all of them have more or less Alaskan blood in their veins. The plants have a hardihood not known to our strawberries. They keep on bearing for about two months during the summer, and are still yielding fruit as late as September.

Giant Flowers Are Grown.

Among the other experiments going on at this station is the crossing of the red and yellow salmonberries with the raspberry. The salmonberry is as big as the largest blackberry, but it is red or pale yellow in color. It is delicious, and is used in great quantities all over Alaska. Raspberries also will grow well almost anywhere, and the crossing is successful, although the new fruit partakes more of the flavor of the salmonberry.

Alaska Berries Almost as Big As Hen's Eggs

Several thousand kinds of strawberries, grown at the Sitka station. This photograph shows the actual size of some. "I saw berries almost as large as hen's eggs," said Frank G. Carpenter.

The station is also breeding apple trees that will grow in many parts of the territory, and it is making experiments with cherries, with filberts, and with other nuts of the hardier varieties.

The most surprising feature of the gardening is in pansies, poppies, roses, and other beautiful flowers. Among the pansies now growing are many as big around as the bottom of a tumbler, and some are as black as ink and as soft as plush. There are also roses of exquisite perfume and poppies of the most brilliant red and as big around as a tea plate.

100,000 Square Miles Tillable.

I went over the experiment farm with Prof. C. C. Georgeson, who directs Uncle Sam's agricultural work in Alaska. For eighteen years Prof. Georgeson has been in charge of Uncle Sam's farming interests in Alaska. He has traveled all over the territory, studying its soil, climate, plant life, and farming possibilities.

We were looking at some alfalfa grown from seed imported last year from Siberia, when I asked Prof. Georgeson to give me his idea of the future of Alaskan farming. He replied:

"There is no doubt but that Alaska will some day support a large farming population. I see no reason why the territory should not eventually have a stable population of three millions or more. We are discovering new plants and grains every season. This alfalfa will grow all along the Yukon, and we have made successful experiments with it north of that river.

"I estimate Alaska has about 100,000 square miles that can be used for agricultural purposes. That means that it has 64,000,000 acres, or an area two and a half times that of Ohio or Virginia, that can be turned into farms and ranches.

Big Opportunity for Dairies.

"Of this territory about 57,000,000 acres lie in the interior beyond the coast range of mountains. The other 6,000,000 or 7,000,000 acres are in the coast region and on the islands nearby. Each section will have its own crop based on its soil and climate. Some of the islands will be devoted to grazing and dairying, while southeastern Alaska, where we are now, will have gardens from where vegetables will be shipped to Seattle, commanding a higher price than the Puget sound products on account of their superior quality."

"Do you think Alaska will ever raise dairy products for the United States market?" I asked.

"There is no reason," he replied, "why it should not. The climate of the Aleutian islands is mild and hardy cattle and sheep can in many seasons run out all winter or be kept over with a small amount of hay and fodder. We are now wintering our cattle on the island of Kodiak on the equivalent of two tons of hay per head. We do not use hay, but put green grass in the silos.

Cattle Lost in Grass.

"In the interior of Alaska the grass grows almost everywhere to the height of one's head. I have seen many patches as tall as a man upon horseback. A few years ago I visited the Holy Cross mission on the lower Yukon. The mission station owned a small herd of cattle, which it had in a pasture. Adjoining this was about ninety acres of wild grass that had been reserved for hay. I asked permission to turn the cattle into this tract that I might photograph them. They were driven in, but I could not make the picture. The animals were lost in the grass, which towered two or three feet above their heads.

"At Fairbanks such hay now brings $50 and upward a ton, while imported alfalfa sells for $125 a ton. I remember that I got as much as $240 a ton for grain hay when we had an experiment station on the Copper river near Cordova, and that we often sold hay there for as high as 5 cents a pound. This was before the people had started farming.

After that they sent in objections to the agricultural department at Washington, saying that the experiment station ought not to compete in the markets. The matter was brought before Secretary Wilson. He replied that $240 a ton was too high for hay and ordered us to keep on raising it and selling it until the price went down to $75 a ton. He said that he thought $75 a ton was enough for hay anywhere."

As to Alfalfa.

"How about your experiments with alfalfa?" I asked.

"The Alaska stations have been working for several years on that problem," he replied, "the most of our experiments having been made at Rampart, far north on the Yukon. We have brought in seed from many parts of the earth, but so far have found only one species that is absolutely hardy. This is a yellow flowered alfalfa indigenous to Siberia, from where the seed came through our department of agriculture."

"Tell me something about the soil of Alaska. How does it compare with that of the best parts of the United States?" I requested.

"The best soil of our middle west," replied Prof. Georgeson, "can be duplicated in few places on earth. I doubt whether Alaska has any agricultural area equal to that. The country has no prairie lands, and there are no extensive bodies of uniform quality. Still some parts of the country are excellent for farming.

"We have been growing wheat upon it at the rate of fifty bushels to the acre, and we have had average yields of sixty bushels of oats. There are good lands in the Matanuska and Susitna valleys, and, in fact, there are tens of millions of acres that can be made into farms."

Improve Hardy Grains.

The conversation here turned to the grains of Alaska, and I asked Prof. Georgeson what grains could be successfully raised during the short summer season. He replied:

"We are now ripening all of the leading grains at our interior experiment stations. During 1915 we matured and harvested on our farm at Fairbanks 1,200 bushels of grain, comprising wheat, rye, barley, and oats. It is true that these were made up of the earliest and hardiest varieties, but the development of varieties suitable to the country is one of the tasks of the experiment stations.

"We are now making many experiments as to winter rye and are succeeding. We are also experimenting with winter wheat, and I think we shall eventually produce all the grains for both flour and feed that will be needed by the people who inhabit the territory, and that as freight rates fall it may even pay to export grain to the states."

OFFICIAL WEATHER FORECAST.

Chicago, March 4.—Following is the forecast issued by the Chicago forecast district:

Illinois and Missouri—Fair Sunday, Monday partly cloudy, moderate temperature.

Wisconsin—Fair Sunday and probably Monday, slightly colder Sunday.

Minnesota and Iowa—Fair Sunday, Monday probably unsettled, no decided change in temperature.

North and South Dakota and Nebraska—Partly cloudy and probably unsettled Sunday and Monday, no decided change in temperature.

Kansas—Generally fair Sunday and probably Monday with moderate temperature.

Washington, D. C., March 4.—Forecast:

Ohio—Fair and warmer Sunday; Monday fair.

Indiana—Fair Sunday and probably Monday; not much change in temperature.

Lower Michigan—Fair Sunday; Monday overcast.

Upper Michigan—Fair Sunday; Monday increasing cloudiness, probably followed by snow.

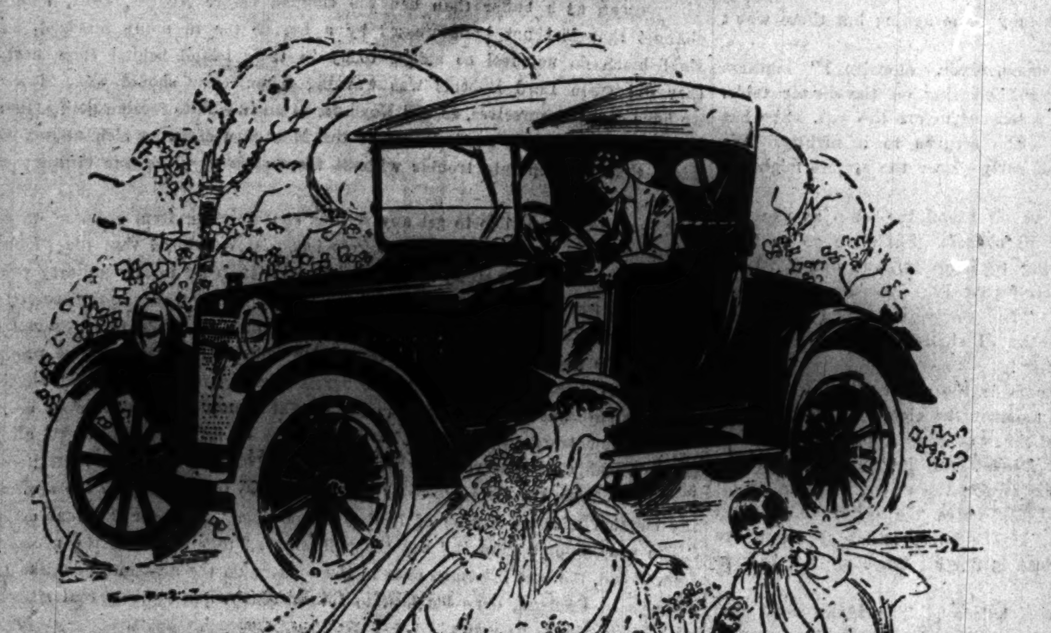
Buy a Saxon Automobile on Installments



6 Cylinder $785

Are you in the above picture? If not, you ought to be. In the first place, if you have a child it is your absolute duty to exert every effort to develop that child both physically and mentally. A Saxon supplies the means of doing this; gives the body the fresh air it needs and the mind the broadening influence that comes with continuous change of picture.

Can't you see how much happier your wife will be if she can be a part of this picture? And as for yourself, if you are engaged in confining employment, an automobile will build up your tissue faster than work will tear it down; and you owe this to yourself as well as to your family. If you are employed outside as a salesman or collector the Saxon will enable you to see three times as many people in a day as without it, thereby tripling your efficiency.

In every way you will find the Saxon a producer of wealth instead of an expense. No man who is ambitious to rise above mediocrity can afford to be without a Saxon.

In view of the anticipated shortage, you ought to provide for future delivery by making a small payment now. Saxons are sold on installments according to the table below:

OUR repeated statement that Goodyear users far outnumber the users of any other single brand is confirmed by the overwhelming Goodyear preference revealed in the tire census of seventy-one leading cities.

These figures show more than twenty-one per cent of the tires used in these cities to be Goodyear; and they may be accepted as indicative of the Goodyear standing in the country at large.

The basis for this emphatic public preference cannot be price; for dozens of tires sell for less than Goodyear.

It is found in Goodyear quality and in Goodyear features of construction, which make Goodyear Tires last longer, go farther and so cost less in the end.

ONE YEAR AGO, comparatively few car owners could get Quaker Tires. Even now, despite increased facilities, the supply is limited, for Quakers are built by hand and slowly with all materials and every stage of the work rigidly inspected.

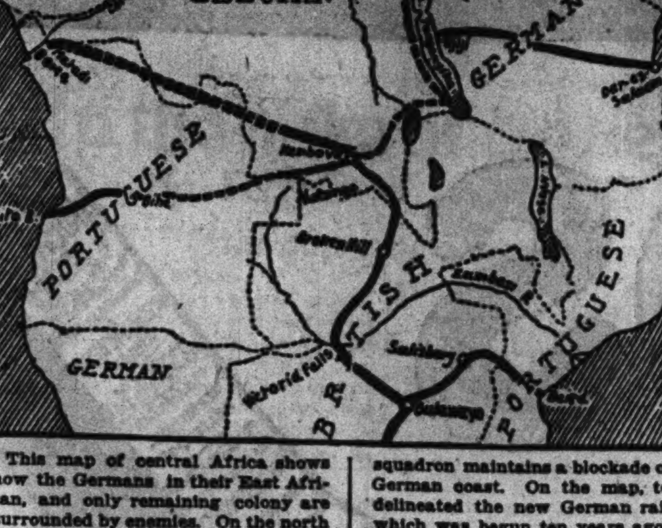
CAN SMUTS SAVE EAST AFRICA FOR WHITE DOMINION?

Sketch of Former Boer Leader Called Upon by England in Her Hour of Need.

The African War Zone.



This map of central Africa shows how the Germans in their East African, and only remaining colony are surrounded by enemies. On the north lies British East Africa, on the west the Belgian Congo, on the south Rhodesia and Portuguese East Africa, while in the Indian ocean a British squadron maintains a blockade of the German coast. On the map, too, is delineated the new German railway which was begun ten years ago and, when the war began, had been completed from Dar-es-Salaam, on the Indian ocean, to Ujiji, on Lake Tanganyika, a distance of 777 miles.

BY EX-ATTACHE.

[Copyright: 1916: By the Brentwood Co.]

What with the controversies in connection with submarine warfare and armed merchantmen, the holocaust of slaughter around Verdun, the victories of Grand Duke Nicholas and of his Russian armies in Asia Minor, the fighting between the British and the Turks along the banks of the Tigris and the Euphrates, in Mesopotamia, and the crisis in the Balkans, people here have had but little time to accord any attention to the war now in progress in East Africa.

It started eighteen months or more ago, on a relatively small scale, but has by degrees developed into a big war, the fortunes of which are likely to affect the whole dark continent for at least a century to come.

This is due to the arming of the blacks. What I mean by the "blacks" are not those oft admirably disciplined native troops commanded by white officers, but various Negro and Negroid tribes, who, entirely barbarous and with no instruction whatsoever, are left free to use arms and ammunition wholly without control.

Long Regarded as Peril.

The blacks outnumber the whites in all parts of Africa in such overwhelming fashion that the danger of their rising against the Europeans has always been regarded as a growing peril, full of menace to the cause of civilization. To avert it all sorts of treaties have been made, prohibiting the importation of arms and of ammunition into Africa for sale to the natives, and careful watch has been maintained by all those powers possessed of colonies in the dark continent. In the South African fighting of sixteen years ago, as in all previous campaigns in that part of the world between the Afrikanders and the British, the Boers, as well as the English, invariably rejected the offers of the Basutos, of the Zulus, of the Matabeles, and of other warlike tribes to give them armed assistance, no matter how badly it was sometimes needed. They appreciated full well the danger of any such policy to the white man's cause in the dark continent, for ages to come.

Believe in German Success.

Unfortunately for the allies, and also for the white man's supremacy, the blacks have seen that German raids into British East African territory have almost invariably been successful, and this has given them the impression that Germany is going to win in the long run. That is why even the blacks in British East Africa are proving not merely disloyal, but also rebellious. The blacks are the greatest opportunists in the world. They will always prefer to join the winning side, and it will require a number of crushing defeats of the Germans to induce them to abandon the kaiser's flag for those of the allies.

That the British should have met with many reverses in East Africa until now is not surprising when one glances at the map and sees what a long line of frontier they are called upon to defend. Until December last they were mainly dependent upon a handful of Indian troops, some unseasoned territorials, some unreliable native levies, and above all, upon an armed force composed of the white settlers, in which even missionaries were called upon to bear arms.

Send Out British General.

These forces were divided up into sort of flying columns. But so great were the distances to be covered, that it was impossible in most cases to forestall a German-African raid across the boundary line to cut and destroy the Uganda railroad at several points far distant from one another, sometimes on the same night. Every successful raid of this kind encouraged others, and at length the situation in British East Africa became so serious that the English government sent out from London Gen Sir Horace Smith-Dorrien, with all artillery, the ammunition, and the supplies needed for a big campaign, being, however, unable to spare many men in the way of reinforcements.

Sir Horace, when he arrived upon the scene, quickly realized that it was hopeless to look for any satisfactory results, with the relatively insignificant military forces at his command, and insisted upon a full fledged army corps being sent out. The war department in London declared that it could not spare the officers or the men, and thereupon appealed to Gen. Botha, premier of the South African union.

How Smuts Was Appointed.

Botha at once expressed the readiness of the union government to assist the imperial government in the matter and to place at its disposal for service in British East Africa that army of veteran troops which served under his orders in the conquest of German West Africa. They are all seasoned men and gladly volunteered for the enterprise, only stipulating that they should be commanded by one of their own generals, either by Botha or by Jan Smuts, who had been the former's principal lieutenant in the campaign that culminated in the transformation of German West Africa into a British possession. The imperial government, recognizing the value of these men in the difficult art of African warfare, acceded to their conditions, and accordingly directed Smith-Dorrien to return home and to surrender his chief command in British East Africa to Jan Smuts.

Admired by Britons.

That a veteran such as Sir Horace, one of Kitchener's best men, should have been superseded by a man twenty years his junior, such as Jan Smuts, who has nothing of the professional soldier about him, and that other English generals and high staff officers should be not only willing but delighted to serve under his orders, is sufficient in itself to show that the new commander in chief in British East Africa is a remarkable man. He is by profession a journalist and a lawyer, and was for several years first of all reporter, and then editorial writer, on the South African Telegraph, then owned by Sir John B. Robinson.

Born in the Cape Colony, Smuts was educated at the Cape of Good Hope, and after taking a "double first" at the Cape university, proceeded to England, and won similar honors at the University of Cambridge, where he made his home at Christ's college.

Entered Journalism.

On his return to Africa he embarked in journalism and also commenced to practice at the bar, with moderate success; then, transferred the scene of his operations to Johannesberg, where he did much better, associated himself with Dr. Leyds, the Boer secretary of state, and in this way attracted the attention and good will of President Kruger, who in 1898 appointed him to the post of attorney general of the Transvaal republic.

After the war broke out he joined the staff of Gen. Joubert, and was then on that of Ken. "Koos" de la Rey, where he so distinguished himself that he was given the command of the burger and rebel forces in the Cape Colony.

Appointed to Cabinet.

After the restoration of peace Jan Smuts resumed his practice at the bar in South Africa, became a king's counsel and a power in politics; so much so that when Gen. Botha was appointed premier of the South African union he invited Smuts to join his cabinet as minister for defense. When the present war broke out Smuts took a leading part in the suppression of the armed revolt, and after that acted as second in command to Premier and Gen. Botha in the later's conquest of German East Africa.

RECTOR DENIES AFFAIR OF GIRL MADE HIM ILL

Gairdner, Who Aided Anna Stearns, Nails Report Criticism Brought Collapse.

The Rev. R. H. Fortesque Gairdner, rector of St. Martin's Episcopal church, who was reported to be battling for his life at the West Suburban hospital and on the verge of nervous prostration, propped himself up with a couple of pillows last night and asked to be told about the Anna Stearns affair, in which he was implicated.

"That I am suffering from a breakdown due to the criticism of my parishioners because I befriended Anna Stearns is an absolute falsehood," he said. "I am here at the hospital because of an ailment which no doctor would attribute to nerves. I shall be up and around in a short time."

Got Anonymous Letters.

"Did you receive any letters with referscribed my befriending of Miss Stearns as he was asked.

"Yes. They were anonymous, and described my befriending of Miss Stearns as indiscreet. But there has been no talk that was detrimental at all. By the way, where is Anna Stearns now?"

When told that she was still in the county jail he asked when her trial came up.

About a month ago Anna Stearns, who is attractive, was arrested and charged with larceny. Rector Gairdner supplied bail. Then he took the "mystery girl," as she was later called, to dinner at a café, properly escorted, and expressed his desire to find a home for her.

Took Her to His Home.

That same evening Miss Steerns had no place to go and so the pastor took his protégé out to the rectory, where she spent the night. This incident started tongues to wagging, for Dr. Gairdner is a widower.

Dr. W. G. Windell, who has had charge of the Rev. Gairdner's case, said, "Nervous prostration has nothing to do with the Rev. Mr. Gairdner's condition. I am on the vestry, and I can say for one that the Anna Stearns episode has been out of his mind. I thought at the time of his befriending her his action was a little indiscreet, but that is all."

Organist Defends Him.

The choirmaster and organist of St. Martin's church, and a close friend of the rector, Mrs H. L. Geddes, was indignant.

"Of course his action was a little indiscreet," she said, "but still he wanted to help the girl.

"There is some malicious person in the parish that keeps bringing up this Stearns affair. I have my suspicions, and others have, but of course I wouldn't mention any names.

"But as for the Rev. Gairdner—well, you know his wife died about a year ago and he has never quite got over it. He has never been the same since."

Excerpt from a Sermon.

In the current number of St. Martin's Kalendar, published by St. Martin's church, is the following under the caption, "Fragments From the Rector's Sermons":

"When that woman with decrepit step came to Jesus and touched with her thin hands the blue fringe that bordered His garment, don't you remember how Jesus turned and said, 'Who touched Me?' He perceived that strength had gone out of Him; but that is always so—you help somebody and it will cost you something. Strength is sure to go out of a man or woman who is helping other lives. It costs to help people.

"Have you never prayed or helped somebody—some man, some woman, some child, or some family, until strength had gone out of you? Then you haven't been imitating Jesus."

MORE MILWAUKEE TYPHOID: U. S. VACCINATES EMPLOYES.

Eleven New Cases Develop, Making Total of 232—Guard Health of School Children.

Milwaukee, Wis., March 4.—The United States government has become alarmed over Milwaukee's typhoid fever situation.

Dr. A. F. Banks, direct from the federal health bureau, is in Milwaukee to vaccinate every employé of the government.

Eleven new typhoid cases were reported today, making a total of 232.

Secretary Frank Harbach of the school board has bought 500,000 paper cups for drinking purposes by school children. All drinking water in the schools is thoroughly boiled and supplied to each class room in gallon containers.

BURNS FATAL TO WOMAN; RESCUER'S INJURIES VAIN.

Mrs. Susan Davidson, 1835 North Karlov avenue, was fatally burned yesterday when her clothing caught fire from the gas stove while she was cooking.

Her screams and those of her 3 year old daughter, Elizabeth, attracted the attention of Mrs. Agnes Wichmann, living in the flat upstairs, who ran down, and finding the rear door locked and the kitchen window also locked, smashed the glass with her hands. She unlocked the window, crawled in, and extinguished the blaze. Her hands were cut and burned.

Mrs. Davidson died later at St. Anne's hospital. The child escaped injury.

THE FINEST LAND IN FLORIDA!

SEE the land I am offering for $10 AN ACRE. SEE that it's all high and dry. SEE that it's rich and well drained—the VERY BEST FARM LAND IN FLORIDA.
SEE the famous gushing wells of finest drinking water.
FEEL the soil—analyze it—dig into it—note what it grows.
FEEL the climate—the BEST IN THE SOUTH. BREATHE the salt Gulf breezes, winy with pine balsam.
Try to find some one down there who ever had a cold, or catarrh, or consumption, or pneumonia, or the grippe—YOU CAN'T FIND ANY SUCH THING THERE—ABSOLUTELY UNKNOWN—BUT TRY.

Come With Me to Newhome, Florida
Six Days—Round Trip—Only $60—Including All Expenses, Railroad Fare, Berth, Meals, Etc.

I want a few more families to come to Florida with me THIS SPRING so as to get as much land as possible under cultivation around Newhome, where I am preparing to place five thousand families in self-supporting homes. Those who will come to Newhome with me can have forty acres of the finest farm land for $10 per acre, and I will help them get it under cultivation. Land not so good nor so accessible is selling right in this same country for $20 to $30 per acre, and it is worth $50. But, I want more settlers now, so that I can show next fall, to the crowds that will come then, not merely what I have done on my demonstration farms, but what actual settlers have done on their own land. That is why I am offering you, on easy terms, land at one-half the price it will bring in the fall—one-fifth of what it is really worth.
If you are willing to work I will show you how to make more money out of land than you have ever made at anything you have done before—and you will never be out of a job.

Special Train Leaves March 7th!

Come with me on this special train and see Florida for yourself. It is a delightful trip and you will have a good time. Come and see what wonderful opportunities there are in the great State of Florida for thrifty men and women, who are willing to settle and work in a new country, to become independent.
Don't take my word for it. Come to Newhome, and see the land for yourself. Talk with people who live there and who know all about the country.

This $10-an-Acre Land Raises Two Crops Each Year

I have just come from Florida and shall be glad to answer any questions you wish to ask. Let me give you full information about Newhome. Then think it over and come with me to Florida on March 7th and SEE for yourself. Ask for circulars that will tell you all about it.

I Will Be Here Every Day and Evening Until March 7

If you cannot come and see me, send Coupon for literature that tells all about Newhome, and read it carefully. This is the best opportunity that you will ever have to buy fertile virgin lands in Florida at such a low price.
After March 21st the price will be increased to $15 an acre!
Don't put it off. Come in today or mail the coupon for circulars and full information.

For LIGHT DELIVERY
The Speed, Capacity and Endurance Offered by the New PACKARD Light Service Trucks Solve All Problems

TRAFFIC'S Gordian knot has been the difficulty of joining speed, carrying capacity and endurance in effectual combination.
It has long bound light hauling to dissatisfaction and money-loss.
Summary attempts to cut through it at a stroke met with indifferent success. Mounting a delivery body on a touring car chassis gave the user a delivery car, not a light service truck.
The need for the patient unraveler was great.
Then Packard engineers took up the problem. They knew hauling conditions and hauling needs. They had at their command the resources of a mile-long factory employing 18,000 men and producing the highest class of motor vehicles in the world—51 acres of industrial activity representing the heaviest investment in the industry, $25,000,000.
They produced the PACKARD LIGHT SERVICE TRUCK—to meet the growing, insistent demand for a swift light carrier of Packard quality.
They were the unravelers.
The truck they built is strong, a long-time investment. It has the stamina to withstand continuous high-speed travel over any roads, the activity to perform just as effectively in traffic, with speed enough for a wide radius of action. A wide range of body styles adapts it to any service.
Built in two sizes, rated respectively at 1 to $1\frac{1}{4}$ tons and $1\frac{1}{2}$ to $1\frac{3}{4}$ tons, it is the profitable solution to any light hauling problem. A telephoned request will bring one of our salesmen to discuss with you the motorizing of your traffic.

KOLYNOS

The Dental Cream of Dentists

THE preponderance of evidence is in favor of Kolynos. Of the 44,000 dentists in the United States, over 30,000—OR NEARLY THREE-QUARTERS OF THE ENTIRE PROFESSION—are using and recommending it.

Here is a preparation that has got into the drug stores throughout this country, and all through England, Australia, France, Germany, South America, South Africa and India—in fact all over the civilized world.

It is being put up in English, German, French, Spanish and Portuguese packages, in order that its purchasers may properly read the labels.

It is today a "leading seller" in a great majority of the drug stores of America—and yet this is the first time you ever saw its name in a Chicago newspaper.

It is being used in every one of the great armies engaged in the European conflict, literally by the tens of thousands, and in the hospitals to which the wounded soldiers are being taken.

It is Kolynos.

Kolynos is a dental cream—THE DENTAL CREAM OF DENTISTS—and in that one phrase lies the whole secret of its wonderful success.

More than six million tubes of Kolynos are being consumed annually by the most careful and the most observant people in the world.

Even the druggists who sell it have asked innumerable times how such a large sale was developed. All they know is that people come in and ask for it, and with singular regularity come back and ask for it again.

Once a Kolynos user, always a Kolynos user.

Druggists carry Kolynos because a great majority of the dentists of the country recommend it to their patients, AND SHOW THEIR SINCERITY BY USING IT THEMSELVES. There never has been such professional unanimity on any one article before.

In the past eight years, these dentists have recommended Kolynos Dental Cream to hundreds of thousands of patients, and these hundreds of thousands of patients have recommended it to hundreds of thousands of friends, who in turn have gone to the drug stores and asked for Kolynos.

It has been, truly, a MOUTH TO MOUTH campaign.

The druggists have been supplying it by the millions of tubes, hardly realizing what a tremendous force Kolynos has come to be.

THIS IS ALL BECAUSE KOLYNOS IS A PRINCIPLE, RATHER THAN A PRODUCT. It is the principle of mouth cleanliness, expressed in a formula WHICH HAS BEEN PUBLISHED TO THE DENTISTS, and which has appealed to them as being of genuine scientific value.

Every dentist knows the ingredients of Kolynos, and consequently knows WHY Kolynos accomplishes what it does, and WHY it is not only the most efficient, but also the most healthful and harmless of dentifrices.

No other dental preparation was ever presented with an idea of accomplishing the same things—for which reason Kolynos has not been looked upon as a competitor of any other dental cream or dental preparation. It has been regarded as a thing by itself—not a toilet requisite, but a hygienic necessity.

That the principle of Kolynos is applied through a dental cream is simply a matter of convenience. In this form greater concentration and efficiency are secured.

To merely cleanse the teeth is a superficial operation—momentarily satisfactory, but unquestionably incomplete. It may be done with soap alone, or with chalk and soap—with many preparations, so long as grit is kept out.

In originating Kolynos, PREVENTION OF DISEASES OF THE TEETH AND MOUTH meant a much more important work than remedying the ravages already worked by decay.

The ideal dental cream, first of all, must be one which would minimise the many injurious germs which find a rich breeding place in the mouth, AND IN THE TOOTH BRUSH.

The mouth has been termed the "prize bacterial garden" of the human system. The dangerous disease germs which find a breeding place there include not only those which encompass the destruction of the enamel and tooth tissue, but also germs of many infectious and destructive diseases.

These germs, if undisturbed, thrive and multiply upon the teeth and upon the mucous membrane of the mouth, and in the soft and soggy tooth-brush. By the ordinary dental preparation the mouth and the tooth-brush—WHICH ARE THE BREEDING PLACES OF THESE GERMS—are permitted to keep up a CONSTANT PROCESS OF MUTUAL RE-INOCULATION.

Kolynos came into the world to deal with this situation. There is no secret about its formula, which has been published frequently and discussed in dental journals.

First, it is harmless. It is mild and soothing in its effect on the most delicate membrane as the mildest of lotions.

Second, it cleanses and polishes the teeth without injurious abrasion, proved by competent authorities and scientific test.

Third, it is an agency recognized by the dental profession to prevent decay, because it neutralizes acid and MINIMIZES THE GROWTH OF INJURIOUS MOUTH BACTERIA.

Fourth, IT CLEANSES THE TOOTH-BRUSH AN PREVENTS THE REPRODUCTION THERE OF THESE UNWHOLESOME BACTERIA.

It is this DISINFECTANT property of Kolynos which is of so much importance. Yet there is not a more elegant or more inviting preparation known, for toilet use—nothing that is cleaner, or that looks better, or tastes better.

It leaves an appealing sense of cleanliness—a genuinely refreshing taste in the mouth, due to the clean environment which it has produced.

There is no question but that the users of Kolynos are less liable to suffer from decay of the teeth, and from the other diseases which breed in the mouth, than the users of dentifrices which lack antiseptic and germicidal properties.

That the tooth-brush of the Kolynos user ALSO IS IN A MORE SANITARY CONDITION is a logical deduction.

In short, Kolynos SQUARES UP with what the dentist thinks a dental cream should be. This advertisement is in recognition of the loyalty of dentists to Kolynos, and of the men and women who have become habitual users and recommenders of it—to give them every assistance in spreading its use—in forwarding a KOLYNOS CRUSADE which will furnish complete knowledge to everyone concerning scientific mouth cleanliness.

The price is the same as other dental creams—twenty-five cents a tube. Ask your dentist about it—or ask your druggist for it.

BY SAM WELLER.

Although Chicago's gallant White Sox are going into their spring training camp about three weeks later than has been their custom for several years, there is a strong suspicion among Chicago's fans that Charles Comiskey will have the best ball team and the greatest success this year that he has experienced since the time Fielder Jones led the south siders to the world's championship back in 1906.

The White Sox special, with the usual frills and excitement, will leave Chicago one week from today and unload its cargo of athletes and camp followers at Mineral Wells, Tex., ready to begin active and strenuous practice two days later. Because of the late start, Manager Rowland sent a quartet of pitchers and one catcher on ahead, so that he would have slabmen prepared to work in the first exhibition games, which will occur four days after the regular squad reaches the camp.

Desert California Camp.

For the last three years the Sox have trained in California, going out to the coast and starting work the latter part of February. Each year exhibition games galore were scheduled, so that the boys had played what seemed like half a season before the opening game for the pennant was contested.

Each one of those years the Sox got away in fine style, perhaps because they were in better trim than their rivals, but each year they seemed to drop back after about half the pennant schedule had been played. This led to the talk that Comiskey had made a mistake in booking such long and hard training schedules. It was said by many, even by some of his players, that the team was worked too hard and naturally slumped in midseason, just when the other teams were going at their best.

Only Four Weeks' Drill.

Comiskey, possibly because of this talk, decided this year to have a training trip of just the opposite kind. His White Sox will be about the last of the major league teams to begin work. If they fall behind this season, neither players nor fans can say it was because of the strenuous training trip. It will be only four weeks from the time the Sox begin work until they will face the Detroit Tigers for the opening game of the season on the south side.

The greater part of the four weeks will be spent in Texas, with headquarters at Mineral Wells, the spot where the Sox trained in 1911. It is the intention of Manager Rowland to lead his men through two ordeals a day on the camp grounds from Monday morning till Friday night. On Saturdays and Sundays exhibition games will be played at Dallas, Fort Worth, Houston, and one or two other Texas cities.

About ten days before time for the opening of the season the athletes will be started northward, playing exhibition games on the way, but the squad will have only about one-fourth as many exhibitions as were booked on the California trips.

Third Base Only Weak Spot.

With the exception of the third base problem, the White Sox are all set and ready to go. The big task for Manager Rowland while drilling the boys in the south will be to pick a man for third. If he succeeds in filling that hole, there is every reason to believe that the White Sox will be pennant contenders. In fact, if Rowland had such a man as Frank Baker to put at the third corner, it is likely that a majority of the experts of the country would pick his team to win the pennant.

Rowland doesn't need to fuss about second base with Eddie Collins on hand. Eddie is worth as much to a team as a couple of other stars, for he excels all others as an infielder and is almost the equal of Ty Cobb as a batter and base runner. Rowland expects to build his champions around Eddie Collins.

Recruits Seek Infield Jobs.

If Buck Weaver plays shortstop there will be no worry over that position either, but there is a possibility that Buck will find himself located at third. Rowland has two live youngsters in McMullin and Terry, both out for jobs on the left side of the infield. Terry is strong as a shortstop, while McMullen excels as a third baseman. The real fight to settle the third base problem will be the battle between these two recruits for a regular job.

If Terry is much better than McMullin he will play shortstop and Weaver will be moved over to third base. If McMullin gains the honors, he will be at third and Weaver will stay at short. If both the kids fall down the veteran George Moriarty, formerly of the Tigers, will undoubtedly be on third.

Fournier at First Sack.

There is something of a problem also at first base, but it practically is certain that Jack Fournier, the hard hitting French boy, will be at that corner when the season opens. A recruit, Jack Ness, is after the place, and comes from the Pacific coast well recommended. He will be given a chance, but no one expects him to hit as well as Fournier, even if he proves a better fielder. At the close of last season John Collins was dragged in from the outfield to play first base, but it is almost a certainty that he will be back in the outfield.

John will have strong men with him in the outfield and be compelled to hustle to keep a regular job. Of course, Joe Jackson will be in one garden, and it looks as if Happy Felsch can't be kept out of one of the jobs. Two other high class outfielders still remain in Eddie Murphy and Nemo Leibold, so it is possible Rowland will do considerable shifting of men in the outer garden during the season to put the strongest batting team in the field each day.

Lapp Will Help Ray Schalk.

The Sox have the greatest catcher in the business in Ray Schalk, and it need not be surprising if he works in just as many games this year as he did last. However, the catching department has been greatly strengthened by the addition of Jack Lapp, formerly of Connie Mack's great team. Last year there was no capable man to take Schalk's place when he was injured or sick. While the team still will be greatly handicapped any time Schalkie is out, it will be stronger than previously, because Lapp will be there to handle things in major league style. Walter Mayer still is with the Sox, and a new man in Lynn has been added.

If Rowland does succeed in winning a pennant the main reason, besides the presence of Eddie Collins, undoubtedly will be the strength of his pitching staff. It needs no comment, for Jim Scott, Red Faber, Eddie Cicotte, Joe Benz, and Reb Russell still are there ready to take turns.

Indications are Russell and Benz will be better than last year. The others need be only as good. Mel Wolfgang still will be there to help, and so will Ed Walsh, and four youngsters, Danforth, Williams, Eller, and Stellars, are trying to break in.

In the Wake of the News

By RING W. LARDNER

THE DIARY OF A SIREN.

FEB. 29.

WELL diary we may as well make up our mind that we are not going on the special train to Fla. and I thought Mr. Weeghman was a man with a heart but it seems not and he is so rapped up in business that he had no thought for the feelings of his employés.

When he came down this A. M. I summoned up all my courage and asked him was he going to take a secretary along on the trip.

"Sure," he replied and I was so excited I could hardly frame the next question.

"Who was you thinking of takeing?" I asked breathlessly.

"Why Charley Williams," he said. "Did you know of a better."

"I did not refer to a man secretary," I said. "I thought you would require the service of a stenographer."

"Oh no," he said. "The whole town's going with us so there won't be nobody to write to."

And he went into his private office without another word. It was a bitter disappointment to me and I guess I was about on the vurge of tears when Bob and some of the other reporters came in. They all started right for Mr. Weeghmans office but I called to Bob to come back a moment. I told him the bad news and he tried to smile tho his heart must of been heavy within him.

"Well," he said. "Maybe there will be an early spring up here."

"I care nothing for the weather," I replied.

"What do you care about?" he said.

"Oh Bob," I said and was about to bear my heart but he was again overwhelmed by his diffidents and went on into the office. Well diary we will show them that they can't break our hearts with a few disapointments and I will smile and make the best of it and not give Miss Graham the stenographer the satisfaction of gloating over my greif. Any way if I am not going south neither is she going south so the shoe is on both feet.

MARCH 2.

Diary maybe we will fool them yet, and go on the trip to Fla. and not as a secretary but as a passenger with my way paid for. We will not know till tomorrow A. M. diary and I am so excited I cannot hardly wait for another day to dawn and I could phone and maybe fix things up tonight but phones is so unsatisfactory where affairs of the heart are concerned.

Bob called up instead of comeing to the office today and said he was to busy to get here and would I connect him on Mr. Weeghman's wire so he could find out the news. I tried to have a few words with him but he says he was in a big hurry.

Well this P. M. one of the other reporters came in and stopped at my desk and asked me was I going south with the team. "No," I said. "No one has gave me an invitation." "You ought to land easy," he replied. "Wait till some of those young ball players blow in here and then give them one of those smiles of yours and the first thing you know one of them will propose and take you south for the honeymoon." "Thanks for the suggestion," I replied coldly. "But I am not the kind that throw themselves away for a trip to Fla." "You don't have to throw yourself away," replied he. "You can take your pick. Don't you know this is Leap Year?" So he went on into Mr. Weeghman's office and for a moment or two I thought no more about it and then the idea suddenly come to me that Bob is crazy to have me and all that prevents him proposeing is diffidents so why should not I take advantage of Leap Year and we can have a secret wedding and go south on our honeymoon at Bob's papers expence because several of the reporters are takeing their wives.

Oh diary I cannot hardly wait for tomorrow and if Bob does not come at his usual time I will phone for him.

Two of the new base ball players just came in to report to Mr. Weeghman and Mr. Tinker. They was both great big nice looking dark fellows and they both gave me a smile but I would not encourage them because it would not be fair to Bob.

MARCH 4.

It is all over diary. I will never speak to Bob Collins again as long as I live and I am certainly glad that I found out his true character in time and did not throw myself away on him.

Instead of comeing to the office yesterday A. M. he called up and says he could not come. "Please come," I said. "There's something I got to tell you." "I can't," he said. "You can tell me over the phone." So I coaxed him to come but he insisted he could not and asked me what did I want.

"All right, Bob," I said. "I will say it over the phone. I just wanted to say that some of the newspaper men are takeing their wives south with them."

"It's all right with me," he said. "I won't stop them."

"Aren't you sorry you have no wife to take?" I said.

"Yes," was his reply.

"Well," I said. "You could easy get one."

"Could I?" he said.

"Yes Bob," I said. "I know what is in your heart and I know why you don't speak. But this is Leap Year Bob."

"So I heard," said he.

"Well Bob," said I. "Must I say anything further?"

"I guess not," said he. "It looks like it was all settled." And he hung up.

I thought of course he would come over but I waited him in vain and when I called him back they said he was not in, and today I called him up and got the same reply and he has not showed up here at all and it's nearly time to go home. And tomorrow the special pulls out for the south. Oh Bob I am glad I found you out before it was to late. And diary I wish I had not been so cold to those two big dark ball players.

MAROONS BEAT BUCKEYE TEAM IN TRACK MEET

BY MAROON.

Chicago defeated Ohio State, 55½ points to 30½, in a dual track meet at Bartlett gymnasium last night. The Maroons took seven of ten first places. Agar and Pershing opened with first and second in the 50 yard dash and Guerin and Pershing added eight more points by beating Pittenger to the tape in the hurdles. Then Ohio threatened with first and second in the mile and shotput, in which the Maroons are weak.

Chicago scored a slam in the quarter with three places, Dismond tieing his own track record at :54 3-5. Clark won the half in 2:06 2-5, taking the lead from Todd of Ohio on the last stretch. The Maroons scored sixteen points in the high jump and pole vault and concluded the evening by lapping the Ohio quartet in the relay in the fast time of 3:19 3-5.

Leroy Campbell, 1915, Maroon captain, ran an exhibition half mile against four freshmen runners and broke the track record, set by Ira Davenport in 1912. He ran the distance in 2:03 2-5, clipping one-fifth of a second from the old mark. Summaries:

50 yard dash—Won by Agar, Chicago; Pershing, Chicago, second; Pittinger, Ohio, third. Time, :05 3-5.

50 yard high hurdles—Won by Guering, Chicago; Pershing, Chicago, second; Pittinger, Ohio, third. Time, :06 4-5.

Mile run—Won by Ferguson, Ohio; Carroll, Ohio, second; Angier, Chicago, third. Time, 4:42 4-5.

Shotput—Won by Poe, Ohio; Rankin, Ohio, second; Sparks, Chicago, third. Distance, 41 feet 4¾ inches.

440 yard dash—Won by Dismond, Chicago; Cornwell, Chicago, second; Standish, Chicago, third. Time, :54 3-5.

High jump—Whiting and Fisher, Chicago, tied for first; Pittinger, Ohio, third. Height, 5 feet 10 inches.

Half mile—Won by Clark, Chicago; Todd, Ohio, second; Merrill, Chicago, third. Time, 2:06 2-5.

Pole vault—Won by Fisher, Chicago; Wagner, Chicago, second; Moore, Chicago, and Gross, Ohio, tied for third. Height, 11 feet.

Two mile run—Won by Nevin, Ohio; Ferguson, Ohio, second; Mather, Chicago, third. Time, 10:16 3-5.

Relay—Won by Chicago [Guerin, Clark, Cornwell, Dismond]. Time, 3:19 3-5.

REGISTER DAILY J. P. GOLF PLANS; BOOK OPEN WEEK

Registration for the Saturdays, Sundays, and holidays proved so successful in relieving congestion at the Jackson park course last year that the south park officials have decided to give daily registration a trial this season.

Manager George Weitzel has figured out a plan. Players can register daily one week ahead. Ten minute intervals will be allotted on the book and a person can register on Monday to play at a certain hour the following Monday.

Intervening spaces will be taken by unregistered players in the order of their numbers. If the registry spaces are filled on the first day the sheet will be closed; otherwise the vacant places can be taken through the week up to the day of play, and so on.

Book for Each Day.

Manager Weitzel will have a seven sheeted book, one for each day of the week. With the passing of each day the used sheet will be discarded and a new one put in. A record of players who register and fail to appear will be kept and anyone committing this offense three times will be liable to suspension from the course unless a satisfactory explanation is forthcoming.

With the election of A. Alonzo Stagg as president, permanent officers for other positions, and a first payment on the land the new Olympia Fields Country club is now an established organization with a membership of 165. The other officers are: Vice president, F. H. Ralsten; treasurer, M. S. Dean; secretary, M. S. Dean.

The club now has approximately 650 acres located immediately south of the Homewood Country club. Work on two courses will be started as soon as the weather will permit, and from these two it will be possible to have eighteen holes ready for play by July 1. Temporary sand greens will be installed until the regular greens are ready.

Campaign for 500 Members

The officials have started an active campaign to secure 500 members on a basis of $60 initiation fee and yearly dues of $75. The Olympia Fields Auxiliary association, which holds the title to the land, is issuing land certificates.

The board of governors consists of W. A. Lockwood, Dr. C. L. Frame, J. W. Stevenson, Charles A. Newton, John W. Fulton, Capt. Robert W. Hunt, G. C. Nimmons, J. M. Daly, E. G. Ryan, F. W. Souerbry, H. R. Newlean, Frank T. Brown, Charles M. Hayes, Harry P. Weber, A. P. Titus, Warren Nichols, and J. P. McGoorty.

A number of Chicago golfers are planning to attend the first annual tournament of the French Lick Spring Golf club, which will be held March 22 to 25 at French Lick. Finals for the flights will be held on March 25 in the morning and a handicap of eighteen holes in the afternoon. President Thomas Taggart has donated a championship cup and E. P. Cockrell a cup for low gross in the qualifying round. Entries can be sent to T. D. Taggart, French Lick Springs, Ind.

SEA OF JACKSON PARK LEADS INDOOR GOLFERS.

F. W. Sea of Jackson park had low score in a classy field of golfers in the qualifying round for the Chicago indoor golf championship yesterday at Rothmoor. Sea had a card of 21—16—37. Ned Sawyer and Chick Evans were among the first five. Eighty-seven competed, the highest score being 53. Leading scores:

F. W. Sea, Jackson park, 37; Runcie Martin, Hammond, 38; Ned Sawyer, Wheaton, and T. H. Crickett, Garfield park, 42; Chick Evans, 42.

Semi-finals will be played in the next two weeks and the final on March 18, Evans, western champion, and Walter Crowdus, Cook county champion, beat Clyde Caldwell, Flossmoor, and Arthur Boswell, Grand Beach, Mich., 4 to 3, in a best ball match, thirty-six holes.

ANOTHER TRIBUNE CONTEST FOR AMATEUR BASEBALL PLAYERS

Who will prove the best amateur baseball players in Chicago for the season of 1916?

What boys will earn "The Tribune" trips as members of the White Sox and Cubs at some time during the coming season?

In this climate it is yet a little early to talk about "scouts" and "tryouts" and all the details which made "The Tribune" event of last year the greatest contest ever held in this city for the youngsters of the prairie diamonds. But so many inquiries and requests already have been received that "The Tribune" takes pleasure in announcing that another competition will be held this year.

WATCH FOR THE DETAILED ANNOUNCEMENT OF CONDITIONS WHICH WILL APPEAR SOON.

You remember that several of "The Tribune" amateurs secured professional berths after the tryouts last year. Charley Pechous is now a member of the Cubs, Joe Weiss is with the Minneapolis American association team, and John L. McKittrick has signed with the Terre Haute Central league team. All owe their engagements to the prominence they attained in the amateur tournament.

BADGERS UPSET GOPHERS, 32-14; DEFENSE STRONG

Minneapolis, Minn., March 4.—Playing in championship form that completely outclassed Minnesota, the University of Wisconsin basketball team tonight defeated the Gophers, 32 to 14.

Wisconsin owes its victory to its wonderful defensive work by an all star team, from whom no individual stars could be picked. Of the three field goals made by Minnesota, only one was made by a forward. That fact demonstrated the wonderful defensive work of the visitors.

Badgers Lead at Start.

Levis and Chandler each grabbed off three field goals. It was in the first half that both teams did their hottest fighting. The half ended Wisconsin 13, Minnesota 5, with the laurels for fast and heady work all on the side of the visitors.

In the second half the visitors had everything their own way. One hundred and fifty Wisconsin alumni cheered their alma mater to victory. The details:

Minnesota [32].		Wisconsin [14].
Lewis	R. F.	Haas
Connell, Redfield	L. F.	Lewis
Wyman, Drew	C.	Chandler, Carlson
Douglas	R. G.	Olson
Partridge	L. G.	Smith, Meyer

Baskets—Lewis [4], Chandler [3], Smith [3], Haas, Carlson, Olson, Douglas [2], Redfield, Partridge. Free throws—Smith [4], Lewis [6].

Illinois, 29; Purdue, 19.

Lafayette, Ind., March 4.—[Special.]—Purdue lost to Illinois tonight in the Boilermakers' last home game, the score being 29 to 19. Purdue outplayed the visitors in the first half, but in the second half Illinois had all the ginger. Both teams were crippled, Mosiman being absent from the Purdue lineup and Ralph Woods on the Illinois five. Lineup:

Purdue [19].		Illinois [29].
Brock'ough, Walter	R. F.	Otto
Koenig, Hake	L. F.	Flemey
Williamson	C.	Alwood
Stinchfield	R. G.	Ray Woods
Hart	L. G.	Applegram

Baskets—Brockenbrough [3], Koenig, Williamson [2], Flemey [4], Alwood [5], Ray Woods. Free throws—Brockenbrough [6], Koenig, Otto [8], Flemey.

GOPHERS GET MEANWELL?

Madison, Wis., March 4.—It was reported at Madison tonight that Coach Meanwell of the basketball team has signed with Minnesota for next year. Meanwell now is in Minneapolis.

HARVARD GETS TRACK MEET.

New York, March 4.—The annual track and field championships of the intercollegiate association of amateur athletes of America, were awarded to Harvard today. The meet will be held in the Cambridge stadium on May 26 and 27.

CUB HOLDOUTS ACCEPT TERMS

The two Cub holdouts, Max Flack and Tom Seaton, ceased to be holdouts any longer when Flack signed a contract yesterday to play with the north siders and Seaton wired acceptance of terms from New York.

So far as is known, all the Cubs are in line for the season. Flack called at the Cub office yesterday and had a personal talk with President Weeghman. He had been dissatisfied with the terms offered him, but reported for the training trip just the same. After a half hour's talk with the boss, the speedy little outfielder left the office smiling and Weeghman announced he had signed.

Seaton's complaint was that the Cubs refused to carry the contract Tom had with the Brooklyn Federals. When Seaton jumped organized ball, he signed with the Chicago club for $7,500 a year. When he was transferred, he made Brooklyn raise the salary, as well as agree to pay the traveling expenses of Mrs. Seaton.

After Weeghman bought the Cubs he purchased Seaton from Harry Sinclair, who had taken over Seaton's contract, but Weeghman bought the player on condition that he agree to play for the original terms made with the Chicago club. Seaton's wire yesterday was an acceptance of those terms, with the statement that he would join the club at Tampa.

AT LAST WE HAVE A SCORE!

Dallas, Tex., March 4.—John McGraw's freshman class did a very un-Giantlike thing in their 1916 debut this afternoon. They won. The home talent was leading until the seventh when Larry Doyle, batting for Palmero, sent home two runs with a long single and started a rally which won for the New Yorks, 5 to 2. Score:

Giants ....0 0 0 0 0 0 5 0 0—5 8 0
Dallas ....0 1 0 0 0 1 0 0 0—2 11 2

Batteries—Palmero, Kramer, and Kocher; Shipe, Conley, Hagen, and Mackey.

INJURY IN BASKET FATAL.

Pittsburgh, Pa., March 4.—As the result of an injury sustained in a basketball game two weeks ago Charles McLaughlin, 20 years old, a member of one of the local high school teams, died last night. McLaughlin severely bruised his ankle, from which blood poisoning developed.

ROGER SETTLES WITH CUB BOSS FOR $10,000 SUM

Roger Bresnahan, former manager of the Cubs, and Charles Weeghman, the new president, settled their differences yesterday and Roger is now a free agent. The settlement was made last night over the long distance telephone between Toledo and Chicago, and it is understood that Bresnahan will be the owner of the Toledo franchise of the American association by tomorrow night.

Although President Weeghman declined to state the amount of money he had to pay Roger for the cancellation of the latter's Cub contract, it was wired from Toledo that the amount of cash was $10,000. The contract called for a salary of $10,000 per year, and had two more years to run.

Refuses Offer at First.

Bresnahan was in Chicago with his attorney from Toledo early last week and had an interview with Weeghman. It was said at that time that Weeghman made an offer of $10,000 in cash, but that Roger turned it down. In a few days he and the lawyer returned to Toledo and for a time it looked as if a settlement was not to be made.

However, indications now are that Roger returned to make sure the conditions for the purchase of the Toledo club were all right, after which he decided to accept Weeghman's offer. The Cub president was anxious to get the matter settled before leaving today with the team for Tampa on the training trip and all day yesterday was constantly on watch for a message from Bresnahan. In the evening Weeghmn received the long distance call while at the Chicago Athletic association and inside of five minutes the whole affair was settled.

Deposits Check in Advance.

"I had deposited the check for the amount," said Weeghman, "and was only waiting for Roger to accept it. I am glad it is settled and that Roger is to have the Toledo club. He will be a great man for the American association, and I predict that he will make a lot of money for himself in Toledo."

It was the second experience of the sort Bresnahan had in the major leagues, and each time he came out with a bunch of money. After the close of the 1912 season he was deposed as manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, but he held a contract which extended for four more years.

He finally effected a settlement with Mrs. Britton, owner of the club, and the amount received at that time was said to be about $12,000, while his contract was taken over by the Chicago club. After Hank O'Day was deposed as leader of the west side team at the close of the 1914 season Bresnahan was appointed manager, and made sure that he possessed another iron bound contract.

Roger Is Sure Unlucky.

Roger served as leader for only one of the three years of the contract, when the Cubs were sold to Charles Weeghman, who desired to retain his former Federal league manager, Joe Tinker, so Bresnahan found himself in another mess which again brought him a large sum of soft money.

It is understood that he is to have a controlling interest in the Toledo club, and it is supposed he has a secret backer, as the amount asked for the franchise was more than $100,000. Reports recently were that Charles W. Murphy, former owner of the Cubs, is the secret backer.

EDDIE COLLINS A MAGNATE: HELPS BUY ORIOLE CLUB.

Baltimore, Md., March 4.—Eddie Collins, second baseman of the Chicago White Sox, has become a magnate. Incorporation papers of the Baltimore baseball club, filed at Annapolis today, disclose that Collins is associated with Jack Dunn in the ownership of the Orioles.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

With the departure this morning of the Cubs' special train for the Tampa training camp, Chicago's 1916 season of baseball will be started. Not since the game became the national sport have Chicago's prospects been brighter. Chicago fans already are talking of the chance to win two pennants and have the entire world's series here in October, all to themselves.

For the first time in history the Cubs will leave on their annual spring tour amid a display of pomp and color. Charles Weeghman and his associates who purchased the club believe in display advertising and the de luxe train which will depart from the Twelfth street station at 10:30 today is said to be the finest and best equipped special that ever pulled out of Chicago.

Sixty-four on Cub Train.

Secretary Williams of the Cubs announced last night that sixty-four persons were booked for passage on the special, and that there was a possibility of a few more being added at the last minute. Of that number only twenty were ball players, the rest consisting of Weeghman and his friends, a few wives of players, and the squad of war scribes.

President Weeghman, with Mrs. Weeghman; his mother, his daughter, Dorothy Jane, and nurse, and sister, Mrs. Simmons, will be present and Weeghman's chief partner, William Walker, with his wife and two children, will also be aboard. Mrs. Walker's mother, Mrs. Dietrich, also will be present.

Friends of Weeghman who have taken passage are Al Plamondon and wife, C. Knisely and wife, A. E. Miller and sister, Dr. Jay Pitts and wife, Mr. Gallagher, A. Spellman, C. Meyers and wife, J. A. Rose, P. J. O'Malley, J. O. Potts, and F. J. Chasler.

See 'Em in the Movies.

Moving picture men will be aboard and take pictures of the party both inside and outside the train so the fans of Chicago may see for themselves that it is a live and active party.

The special will arrive in Tampa on Tuesday morning and Manager Tinker expects to get his athletes into action that very afternoon, though the real heavy grind of training will not begin until the next morning. From then on for three weeks the rule will be morning and afternoon practice, with a half dozen exhibition games against the Phillies, National league champions, added as features.

Games on Way North.

At the end of the three weeks' work in Tampa Manager Tinker thinks his men will be in fit condition to fight, but to put on the finishing touches and develop team work in real contests there will be nearly a dozen exhibition games played on the return trip northward.

It is the opinion of nearly all the prominent baseball men that Joe Tinker will have a pennant contender on the north side this summer. By combining the Cubs and Whales it has been possible to assemble a squad of stars to represent Chicago in the National league, and if Joe Tinker is able to inject fighting spirit into the men and develop team work and harmony on the club there is every reason to think the Cubs will be stronger than they have been since the pennant days of 1906, 1907, and 1908, when Frank Chance and his famous Cub machine won three flags in a row.

No Weak Spot on Club?

However, as compared to that famous team one must admit that there is not the speed and youth in the present bunch that there was in the Chance machine. It may never be possible to produce another combination as active as were the Cubs when Tinker, Evers, Chance, Kling, Sheckard, Hofman, Schulte, Brown, Overall, Reulbach, and Pfiester were in their prime and playing together. But it looks today as if Tinker hasn't a weak spot on the team, and he should be in the National league pennant fight from the start.

There is some doubt as to the strength of the new Cub pitching staff, even though it includes men who are stars. It is possible that the manager will be able to inspire some of those stars with a new spirit which will bring them back to the front. There will be eleven or twelve hurlers in the training camp, and about eight of them will be carried throughout the season.

Slab Staff a Question.

With Jim Vaughn, Jim Lavender, Claude Hendrix, Mordecai Brown, Tom Seaton, and Gene Packard on the same staff, it would seem as if the manager should have little over which to worry. But Manager Joe is a bit worried because some of those stars are on the wane and some of them in the last two years have shown inclinations to take things easy. Besides these men who have reputations, there are Bill Bailey, George Pierce, George McConnell, Mike Prendergast, George Zabel, and Phil Douglas, some of whom are sure to make good.

With Jimmy Archer to head the catching staff, Tinker is sure of being strong in that department. Archer has a capable helper in Bill Fischer, the heavy hitting backstop who made good with the Whales last year. Clemons and Russell will be present to assist in wearing the mask and protector.

Perhaps the greatest strength of the Cubs, at least defensively, will be in the infield, for there is a great man for every position, and three or four good ones left over to sit on the bench. It looks as if the regular set will consist of Saier at first, Yerkes on second, Doolan at short, and Zimmerman at third. All four are great fielders and all except Doolan are strong with the stick and good base runners. Tinker himself will be on hand for utility service, along with Rollie Zeider, Alex McCarthy, and two recruits, Ed Mulligan and Charley Pechous, who looked so sprightly last fall.

The Cub outfielders, six in all, represent much speed on the bases and much batting ability. Max Flack, Frank Schulte, Ed Zwilling, Fred Williams, Leslie Mann, and Pete Allison all will be striving for the reguar jobs, and indications are that five of them will be carried throughout the season. Allison, a youngster, is likely to go back to Memphis for more experience.

Tinker Qualifies as Manager.

Joe Tinker's system of training and building a team may make a championship bunch of the present Cub squad. If he can induce or drive about three members of his pitching staff into physical condition, he will have as strong a set as any of them. Indications are he will get them into shape or make them spend the season without a job. In his three years of experience as a manager Joe has shown ability to handle men, and no one ever doubted his ability to conduct a game of ball.

BALTFED CASE GOES OVER: SETTLEMENT IS EXPECTED.

Cincinnati, O., March 4.—Owing to a letter received during its session today the national baseball commission laid over any action regarding the differences between organized baseball and the Baltimore Federal league club. The letter contained the information that these differences had practically been settled by those most interested and that further data regarding the case was on its way here.

Likewise no decision was reached in regard to the claim of the Brooklyn club against the Newark club of the International league. Previous to the forfeiture of the Newark franchise and its transfer to Harrisburg, President Ebbets and other Brooklyn club stockholders who were likewise stockholders in the Newark club claimed they advanced a considerable sum of money to the Newark club. Now that Newark is back into the International league they are bringing up the question of territorial rights, and likewise the rights of a lien in consideration for this money that was advanced.

The commission adopted a form for the release of players that will protect the club and the player and at the same time comply with the rules of the game. It was stated it will also coincide with the Players' fraternity agreement.

FORMER WIFE SUES CHASE: DEMANDS BACK ALIMONY.

San José, Cal., March 4.—A warrant charging failure to provide was issued here today against Hal Chase, star of the Federal league and former manager of the New York Americans, on complaint of his first wife, Nellie Chase of Newark, N. J. The couple were divorced in 1912 in New York and he agreed to pay $50 monthly alimony. Chase is in San José with his second wife, playing baseball with independent teams.

REDLEGS GO SOUTH TODAY.

Cincinnati, O., March 4.—Buck Herzog's Reds mobilized here today to get a running start for Dixie tomorrow morning. Seventeen Red hopes will leave for their new training camp at Shreveport, La. The other nine will report direct to Shreveport. Manager Herzog has reinforced his last year's seventh placers with Esmond, Moseley, Huhn, Schultz, and Louden of the Federal league and a bunch of likely looking recruits. Esmond will not report until after the training season. He is sick at Jacksonville, Fla.

REST FOR TIGER MEN TODAY.

Waxahachie, Tex., March 4.—After ten strenuous workouts in five days, Tiger athletes will be given a rest tomorrow. Jennings announced that the proposed Sunday practice had been called off. Despite freezing temperature today, a few pitchers were permitted to put a little stuff on the ball, for the first time.

ZABEL LEAVES FOR CHICAGO.

Baldwin, Kas., March 4.—George Zabel, pitcher for the Chicago Cubs, who has been a student in Baker university, left here today for Chicago to join his team. He will continue to Tampa, Fla., where the Cubs will train. Zabel will be graduated from Baker this year. Before he left the students presented him with a gold watch fob.

TRIS SPEAKER A HOLDOUT?

Dallas, Tex., March 4.—Tris Speaker denied today he has signed a Red Sox contract for the season. Larry Doyle, Giant infielder, said that Speaker, who was in the city for a few hours this morning, told him this. Both President Lannin and Speaker recently stated that Tris was signed up and that everything was lovely.

CARD HURLERS SHOW SPEED.

San Antonio, Tex., March 4.—With the sun burning 'em up at about 85 degrees, Miller Huggins permitted his Cardinal pitchers to turn loose their whips today. Monday the regulars will start dropping in the camp and then real work will begin.

Alex and Dugey Ready.

Shreveport, La., March 4.—Grover C. Alexander and Oscar Dugey of the Philadelphia Nationals will leave here Monday for the Phillies' training camp in St. Petersburg, Fla. Alexander and Dugey are visiting friends here after a preliminary conditioning at Hot Springs, Ark.

Rariden to Join Giants.

BY J. G. DAVIS.

After three straight defeats, Champion Bennie Allen of Kansas City broke into the winning column of the world's pocket billiard tournament by defeating Charles Cowboy Weston, 100 to 61, in the first game yesterday afternoon at the old Inter Ocean building.

Allen showed a return to the form which won him the title. In the twenty-second inning, by a great display of position play, he ran forty, coming within five points of the high run, held by Blankenship of Detroit. With two balls left on the table Allen misses a hard drive for the right top pocket, trying to get good position on the remaining ball. Each time before the respot he got good position and broke the bunch. Score:

Greenleaf Wins Long Game.

In the longest battle of the tournament to date young Ralph Greenleaf defeated Joe Concannon of New Jersey, 100 to 74, in fifty-four innings. Neither player was able to get away for a big run. Score:

Blankenship Beats Petrie.

Piling up a count of 43 on his second venture, Emmett Blankenship paved the way to 100 to 68 victory over Mike Petrie. It was the first reverse for the local man. The Detroit star, when within two balls of the tournament high run, had to play safe. He followed his big contribution with runs of 6, 23, and 14, and then led, 86 to 12, at the end of the fifth inning. It looked like early curtains for Petrie, but he was as cool as the outside atmosphere. In the seventh session he twice cleared the board and, after making 28, ran into a lower pocket on a safety play. Score:

GARDNER BEATS APPLEBY IN CUE CONTEST, 400-271.

New York, March 4.—E. W. Gardner, New York, defeated Edgar T. Appleby, New York, in the afternoon match of the national amateur billiard championship tournament today. The score was 400 to 271. Gardner, a former holder of the title, finished his string with an average of ten. The victory placed Gardner in the lead for the championship. He always was safely ahead, making good use of the short rails for many runs in double figures. Score:

Gardner—400; average, 10; high runs, 60, 49, 44.

Appleby—271; average, 6 31-40; high runs, 53, 38, 26.

Former Chicago Girl Does Trick Stunts as Swimmer

Miss Josephine Murphy

JOSEPHINE MURPHY, the 12 year old girl who has been creating a sensation in Little Rock, Ark., with her swimming stunts, was a former Chicagoan. She learned to swim less than two years ago, but during that time has carried off many prizes in contests against both men and women.

Beside winning most of the competitive events in which she has been entered, Josephine does several trick stunts. She has demonstrated what to do in case a boat capsizes. She gets into a tub, paddles a while, then sinks it.

Another of her features is to disrobe under water without touching bottom. She always uses a boy's swimming suit. Josephine also has taken several prizes for high diving, her greatest dive being thirty-five feet.

WELSH TO SCRAP HAMMER AFTER GO WITH AD WOLGAST

BY KNOCKOUT.

Harry Pollok, manager of Champion Freddie Welsh, lightweight champion of the world, who meets Ad Wolgast in a ten round bout at Milwaukee tomorrow night, has signed articles to meet Ever Hammer, who defeated Joe Welling at Kenosha last Thursday night. Pollok will sign with the club that offers the best in inducements.

Pollok prefers Kenosha if the Wisconsin promoters can assure him that they can get the Coliseum. Frank Mulkern, who is staging the Welsh-Wolgast bout, is also after a Welsh-Hammer contest for his club in Milwaukee the latter part of March.

Pollok Asks $500 Forfeit.

The weight agreed upon between Welsh and Hammer is 135 pounds at 3 o'clock, and Pollok has insisted that Hammer post a forfeit of $500 to make that poundage.

A champion and a used-to-be champion will battle when Freddie Welsh and Wolgast clash. Ad lost that title to Willie Ritchie, only to see Willie drop it to Welsh. After watching Welsh step through two ten round affairs, with Charley White as his partner on each occasion, Milwaukee fans seem to have lost all interest in the champion. Promoters there refused anything like a suitable purse for the go tomorrow, but Ad was so anxious he himself guaranteed the Briton the sum the latter demanded.

Ad's Chance Lies in K. O.

There can be only one excuse for the bout, and that is the remote possibility that Wolgast may land a knockout. That appears to be what Wolgast is resting his hopes on, but with Ad's brittle mitts and the clever dancing defense of the champion, the odds are all against such a finish. Still Wolgast always has been popular with ring followers, especially in Milwaukee, and the chances are he will gain financially, if not otherwise, by tomorrow night's work.

West side boxing fans will have an opportunity to see Freddy Welsh in action this afternoon. He will shift his training camp over to the West Side A. C., Ogden avenue and Van Buren street, where he will box three rounds each with Tommy O'Neill, Jimmy McGovern, and Joe Burger. Women have been invited and the balcony will be reserved for them and their escorts.

Will Look Over Amateurs.

Welsh will look over amateur boxers, Harry Forbes having carded tryouts to select a team to take to Detroit. The champion will start training at 2 o'clock and will leave for Milwaukee in the evening for tomorrow's bout with Wolgast.

AD WOLGAST IN TRIM FOR BOUT WITH WELSH.

Milwaukee, Wis., March 4.—Ad Wolgast was ready tonight for what may be his last chance to regain the lightweight crown, when he meets Freddie Welsh in the Arcadia ring here Monday night.

After three weeks of training the Michigan wildcat declared tonight that he was ready to meet the champion. Wolgast has been doing road work each morning and sparring each afternoon. The Wisconsin boxing commission gave Ad the "once over" and pronounced that he was in fit condition. His hands appear to be as strong as ever and he looks like the Ad of old.

The champion has been tapering off at Chicago and is expected to show up here tomorrow night. Welsh will be 30 years old on Sunday, and it will close his twelfth year in the boxing game.

SENATOR SCOTT JOINS BENZ AT WHITE SOX CAMP

Jim Reports in Shape and Pair Will Work Together Till Mates Arrive.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Mineral Wells, Tex., March 4.—[Special.]—Senator Jim Scott of Wyoming breezed into camp on the last train tonight and doubled the Texas representation of the White Sox. He was met at the train by Joe Benz, who has worn out all the local baseball aspirants in his four days of training here and who welcomed Scott as warmly as the sailor marooned on a desert island greets his rescuer.

Scott admitted being detained by the Mardi Gras delights of New Orleans, but affirmed he had lost no time in starting training, because the whole Cleveland bunch was in the Crescent City at the time and he was allowed to work with them during his stay there.

No Sox Catcher in Sight.

Benz and Scott threaten to make each sorry the other is here when they get their togs on tomorrow and start dual training, for each claims to be in better condition than the other. They just dare any White Sox catcher to show up and try to handle their stuff right now. As yet there has been no indication that a backstop is on the way to warm them up, consequently they plan to organize themselves into a reversible battery temporarily.

Benz was compelled to surrender his accustomed stamping ground at the ball park today to the combatants in a championship basketball game between Mineral Wells and Fort Worth, two unbeaten fives, which fought so strenuously that one of the visiting players nearly bit his tongue in two before the local team emerged victor.

Benz Works All Alone.

During this bloody combat Benz trained out in the corner of center field all by his lonesome, as his helpers all deserted him as soon as the basket game commenced. This compelled Joe to play high low with the fence. Four days of the broiling sunshine have burned Benz until his face is beginning to peel, but he declares he has got by without any soreness of muscles or joints on account of the copious baths he has taken in mineral water.

CLIFFORD WINS IN SHOOT AT LINCOLN PARK TRAPS.

Breaking eighty-seven out of 100 targets from the sixteen yard rise, W. R. Clifford won the feature event of the weekly shoot of the Sportsmen's Gun club at the Lincoln park traps yesterday. In the second event, at twenty-five birds from sixteen yards, C. B. Pike was the winner with a perfect score. In the team shoot the squad captained by W. R. FOR PLAYERS OF WHIST

by A. R. Metcalfe

Safety first is a poor rule for acution bridge. A strong attack is the best defense and safety should be considered only when an attack is hopeless. The deal following illustrates this point:

THE HANDS.

North had the opening lead.

West secured ten tricks.

The no trump bid by west was perfectly sound, as it was unlikely that game could be secured at clubs. The second bid of no trump was sporty, but not reckless.

At trick one west decided to risk the whole hand on the club finesse and sacrificed a trick in the heart suit to secure the opportunity. The rest of his play was easy. Had west played timidly at trick one he would have lost not only the game but the odd trick

The real play of the deal, however, lay with north. While there was little danger that the declarant could run away with the heart suit, there was also little hope that north could achieve much against an adverse declaration. North, in this case, should have opened with the king of diamonds and continued that suit if his partner played a come on card to the first trick.

It seems difficult for players to learn the difference between a free double and one which may cost the game. A free double occurs when an adversary has bid enough to give him game without a double.

The first principle of doubling should be: Do not double an adversary out. Here is an example from a Northwestern train:

Rubber game; north dealt and bid one no trump, his holding being as follows: Spades, 9, 2; hearts, A, K, 6; clubs, K, 10, 9, 7; diamonds, A, Q, J, 10. West bid two hearts, south passed, east bid three diamonds, north doubled, west bid four clubs, south and east passed, north doubled and lost the rubber, it being impossible for north and south to secure more than three tricks. The possible gain which might accrue from such a double is by no means worth the risk of losing a rubber.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES.

Chicago.—[To the Editor.]—A three handed game, north deals, and with ace, king, queen, and two small clubs; ace and king of hearts; ace, queen and six of spades, and six and seven of diamonds, passes, hoping to make a no trump, but when east made it clubs she knew she could set me. Several of the ladies claim it is unfair not to bid your hand. Is it? M. F.

Answer: It is not in the least unfair to refrain from bidding at any time.

Buxton, Ia.—[To The Editor.]—In a game of duplicate auction my left hand adversary bid a spade, my partner bid two diamonds, my right adversary 2 spades, I bid 3 diamonds, my left hand adversary 3 spades; as 4 diamonds would not give us the 125 bonus I felt we could make more by doubling the bid, as my hand contained the following cards: Hearts: A, K, 10; diamonds: 5, 3; clubs: A, 10, 7, 4, 3; spades: 10, 9, 6; and on a bid of 2 diamonds I played my partner for two tricks, at least.

Was my bid poor or not? Or should I have not doubled? My partner had diamonds: Q, J, 9, 8, 6, 4, 2; hearts: Q, 9, 8; spades: 5; clubs: 5, 2. Was this a two bid? Or even a one bid, as in case partner went to no trump it seems a very poor show for bringing in the diamond suit on account of lack of re-entry cards.

In another hand I am the original bidder. I have hearts: J, 10, 9, 8, 6, 5, 4; diamonds: K, Q; clubs: A, 6; spades: J, 3. What should you do with such a hand? I had six tricks in my hand, bid a heart, was raised to three, and got away with it, which seemed more good luck than sense. Tell me the proper way to bid such a hand. L. M. D.

Answer: 1. You should not have doubled on account of the risk of giving game to your adversaries. Your partner's bid was all right. 2. You should have passed and bid hearts on the second round. This advises your partner that your suit has length without high card strength.

SKATING BOSSES PASS UP HOCKEY

Say A. H. L. Should Control Sport—Chicago Men Are Elected to Offices.

New York, March 4.—The International Skating Union of America, at its annual meeting today, declined to exercise any jurisdiction over hockey, asserting it was formed solely to govern ice and roller skating. The Amateur Hockey league, an announcement of the I. S. U. A. said, should have complete jurisdiction over hockey.

Pittsburgh, heretofore in the territory of the Eastern Skating association, now will come under the direction of the Western association, according to a request of the W. S. A. and with the sanction of the E. S. A.

Officers elected by the I. S. U. A. were: Cornelius Fellowes, New York, president; James A. Taylor, Montreal A. A. A., first vice president; William T. Richardson, Boston, second vice president; Julian T. Fitzgerald, Chicago, third vice president; John Harding, secretary and treasurer.

A. W. Moeller of New York, secretary of the Eastern Skating association, was chosen as the I. S. U. A. representative on the board of governers of the Amateur Athletic union.

The board of control elected by the I. S. U. A. was: Louis Rubenstein, acting mayor of Montreal, chairman; D. H. Slayback, Verona, N. J.; B. J. Woods, Boston; O. J. Krejci, Chicago, and Harry Wells, Newburg, N. Y.

Delegates to the meeting of the I. S. U. A. met later and organized the American National Hockey association, with Roy D. Schooley of Pittsburgh as president and Julius T. Fitzgerald of Chicago as secretary. It was explained that the new association planned to conduct a league along the lines of organized baseball leagues, with teams in New York, Chicago, St. Paul, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Detroit, and Milwaukee, the winner of the championship to play the winner of the Canadian championship for all American honors. A meeting of the new association will be held in Pittsburgh March 17.

PRESIDENT TO OPEN TOURNEY

Washington, D. C., March 4.—President Wilson today promised to open the Atlantic coast bowling tournament here on April 3. The opening night will be designated as Woodrow Wilson night, and the president will open the tournament by rolling an engraved ball down the alleys.

The second night of the tournament will be named in honor of Clark Griffith of the Washington Senators. Both Griffith and Walter Johnson will compete.

The Quality Goes Clear Through DORT

Every single part of the Dort is a feature. The quality goes clear through—and this is known quality.

$650
F.O.B. Flint, Mich.
Complete with Westinghouse Electric Starting and Lighting.

The Dort sells for $650.00 completely equipped with the very latest type of Westinghouse Starting and Lighting—the same system you will find on cars that sell for $5,000.00 and up.

From the very first the Dort has scored a success. Now it is dominating its price class. Engineering experts have been surprised to find the price so low. Motorists have been quick to recognize in the Dort an unprecedented value.

Why the Dort Has Made Good

No car at anywhere near its price has the horse-power, sturdiness, class, dependability and all round thorough going quality of the Dort. No car in its class is so well equipped.

Westinghouse Two Unit Starting and Lighting; Connecticut Ignition; Detroit Demountable Rims; Jacox Irreversible Steering; the Dort Dual Exhaust, which adds 12% increased horse-power to the long stroke, high speed Dort motor; 50⅝x2 inch full cantilever rear springs; hand painted body, with deep upholstery; Stewart-Warner Speedomoter, gasoline gauge and all control buttons on instrument board directly in front of the driver. These are examples of Dort thoroughness of detail.

Inspect this "all-feature" car at our showrooms. Don't miss the Dort. Go over the specifications carefully. Note every feature. Your own eyes will convince you of the extra quality that is everywhere in the Dort.

A. B. C. TOURNEY OPENS IN TOLEDO WITH HOME FIVES

Greatest Meeting Attracts Rollers from Many States and Canada.

Toledo, O., March 4.—Toledo's bowling tournament, the sixteenth annual renewal of the American Bowling congress, got under way shortly after 8 o'clock tonight in the Terminal building. Sixteen Overland clubs, representing the home town's contingent, were the first to face the pins, but the combination of unfamiliar surroundings and new drives protected the maples from being scored against heavily by the vanguard.

Opening ceremonies were brief. President Edward F. Ryan of Detroit, Vice President William Agnew of Cleveland, former President Judge Howard of Chicago, and Secretary Abe Langtry of Milwaukee were the leading A. B. C. officials in attendance, receiving the alleys after the local officials had made a speech welcoming the bowlers to this city and tendering the drives for their use. Two shifts of five man teams were billed for the initial night.

Biggest Tourney Ever.

The tourney opening tonight eclipsed in size and importance all former meetings of the national winter game. Players from over half of the United States entered the big affair, while many of the provinces of Canada also contributed. Connecticut and Colorado are the extremes of latitude covered, while the Mason and Dixon line practically forms the southern barrier and the Hudson bay territory furnishes those farthest north, Cobalt's team holding the arctic honors.

Secretary Langtry's list shows totals of 756, 1,466, and 3,178 entered in the five man, doubles, and singles, respectively, with a total cash prize list of $33,000, based on a two-thirds slice from a $49,000 entry fund paid by the bowlers. Langtry figures their expenses at $100,000 more.

Add Three Days to Meet.

Originally billed to finish on March [illegible] the meet has been extended three days, making the closing day March 28. The additional time allowed was forced to take care of something like 150 more teams than had been anticipated by the officials. The entry means almost continuous rolling every day from 8 a. m. until after 1 a. m. It is estimated that over [illegible] strangers will be in Toledo continuously for over three weeks.

The Chicago Overland front axles set high on the opening shift of five man teams with the score of 2,574, an indication that the drives are the fastest ever arranged for a national meet. Former tournaments have rarely produced as high as 2,300 on the first round, while eight of the sixteen clubs beat that mark tonight.

WILLARD'S COLD GIVES TIME FOR ADEQUATE WORK

Champion, Opposed to Early Date, Gains Postponement by Plea of Illness.

BY RAY C. PEARSON.

Big Jess Willard, heavyweight champion of the world, isn't foolish at all. When he recently allowed himself to be matched with Frank Moran, the Pittsburgh redhead, at the same time cinching $47,500 for his end, this huge amount of "jack" being guaranteed by Tex Rickard, the South American cattleman, Jess agreed to make the battle on March 8. But there will be no fight on March 8, for the promoter was forced to postpone the contest until March 25.

The reason for this postponement, according to a man close to Willard, but a person who prefers that his name be kept in the dark, showed that the champion is a pretty wise bird. This man, who seems to know a few things, remarked a couple of days ago that there never was a chance for the scrap to take place on March 8. He thought that it was possible for Rickard to pull off the contest on March 25.

Object to March 17 Date.

It will be remembered that when Rickard and other eastern promoters, including Jack Curley, Jimmy Johnston, and numerous others, some of whom were looking for a little free advertising, started out to make the match between Willard and Moran, they found an obstacle quickly placed in their path by the champion. They planned to hold the bout in Gotham on March 17, more familiarly known as St. Patrick's day. That date was all right as far as Moran was concerned, but not so with Willard. The champion and his manager immediately came out with a statement that there would be no battle on March 17.

Willard's manager, Tom Jones, in explaining the refusal of the champion to fight on St. Patrick's day, said the champion would not be ready for a ring engagement until the first part of April. But the promoters were insistent and declined to allow themselves to be governed by the edict from the Willard camp. They went right ahead to make the match for March 17. All the time Willard and Manager Tom Jones were waiting for the bids for the bout to grow larger. This is just the thing that happened, for with the assistance of Jack Curley there developed keen competition in the bidding.

Must Pick Another Date.

It was only a few days after Rickard had landed the bout that something happened. It didn't come from the Willard end, as was expected by those in close touch with the affairs of the champion. Rickard discovered that he was biting off a chunk that he couldn't chew (O, no, not financially), for he had planned to hold the bout in Madison Square Garden in New York. He failed to go through the formality of finding out whether the big exposition building would be available on March 17. Somebody else more interested in the Garden on that date enlightened him, however, that the building already had been leased for that date.

The result of this discovery had Rickard up a tree for a couple of days, and put it up to him to figure out some scheme whereby he would not have to change the date. He tried to find some other building, but the only ones that would hold enough people to make the bout a paying proposition were the state armories. But there was nothing doing as far as the soldier buildings were concerned, for the state boxing commission only a short time before had crabbed that game by issuing a statement that no boxing bouts could be held in the armories.

The only thing open for Rickard was to find another date, and consulting the Garden people, he was informed that there was an open date on March 8. So Rickard got busy and notified both Willard and Moran that the battle date had been changed and that it would take place on March 8. There came no word of dissent from either of the scrappers or their managers, and it looked like a pretty sure thing that Rickard was going through with what he had started.

"Serious Cold," His Excuse.

But then something happened. Willard contracted a cold. It was a stubborn cold, but not a serious one, but it was enough to cause him to pass up his training at the C. A. A. He spent most of his time at home, although he occasionally managed to leave the house and indulge in a little road work. He quickly informed his manager in New York of his condition, but did not ask for a postponement, according to the best information at hand. Instead he left that for his manager. And Jones, wise to the fact that the champion would not be ready for a bout before April, picked up the card he needed and played it.

He demanded a postponement because of Willard's illness, which was preventing Jess from training. It was a dandy excuse and came just in the nick of time, but it answered the purpose. Jones swung on the promoter, and there wasn't anything left for Rickard to do but grant the postponement. Anybody who saw Willard before his departure for New York must admit that the champion had a cold, but Jess can thank that cold for the postponement of the mill which will give him the time to train that he demanded in the first place.

FULTON TO MEET JIM FLYNN.

Milwaukee, Wis., March 4.—Fred Fulton of Minnesota and Jim Flynn of Pueblo, Colo., were matched today for a ten round heavyweight bout before the National A. C. here on March 17. If Fulton wins he will go to New York and challenge the winner of the Willard-Moran fight for a twenty round bout in New Orleans.

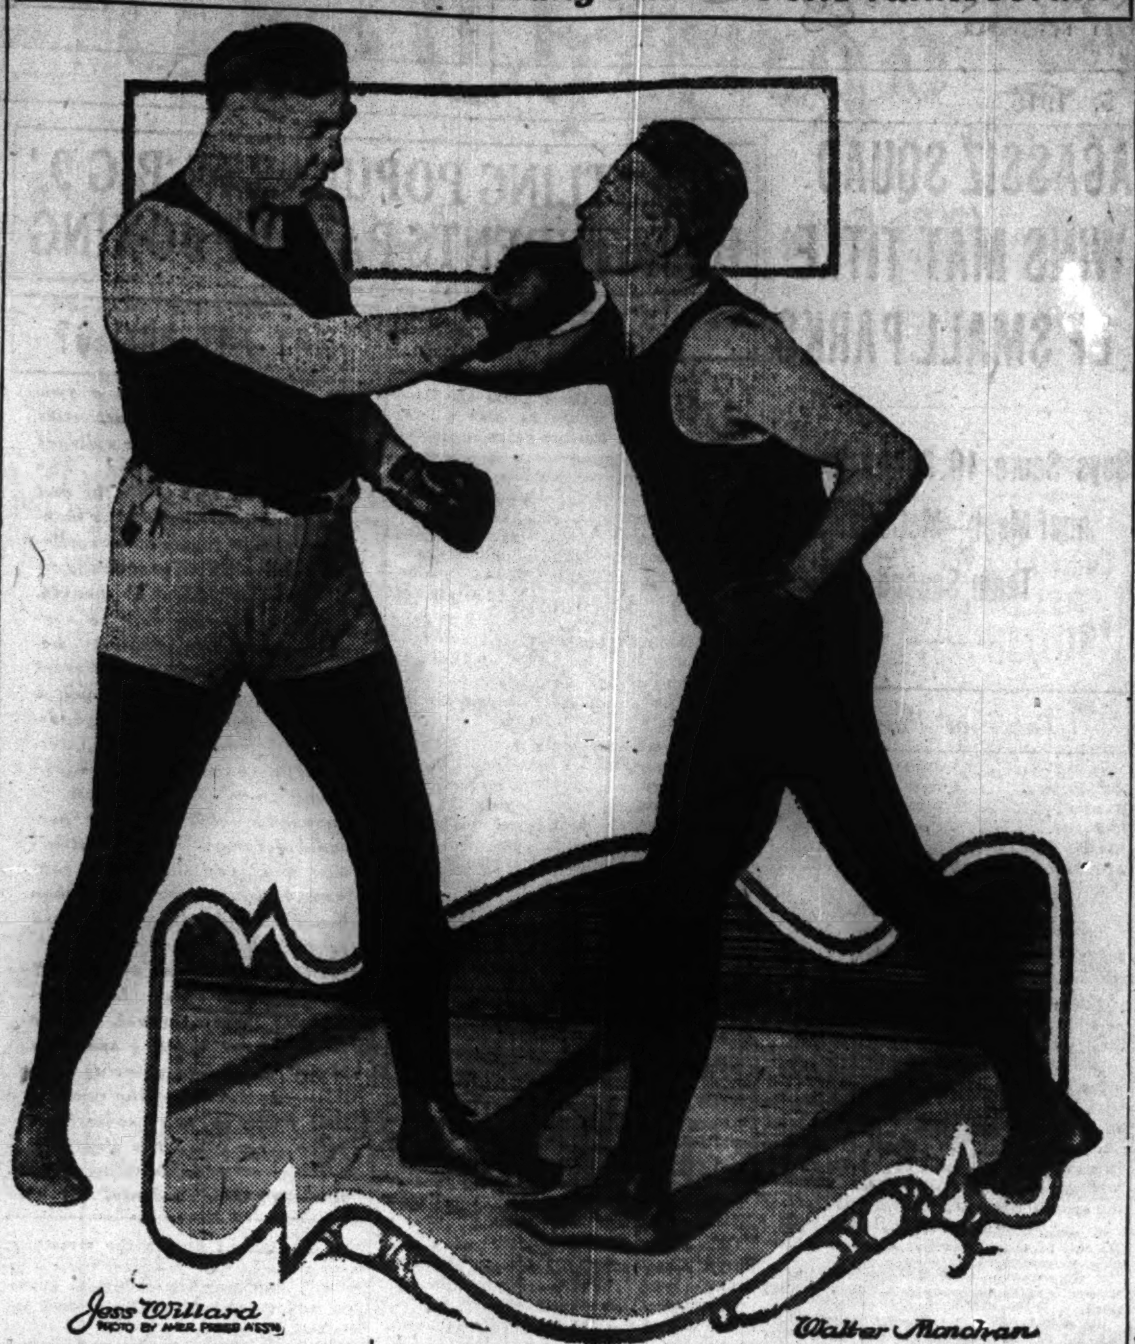
Will Champion Willard Hang This One on Frank Moran?



JESS WILLARD'S right hand is the one which is his best card, as Jack Johnson is willing to admit. When the champion fights Frank Moran at New York on March 25 it is expected that he will try to hang that mitt on the Pittsburgher's chin to score a knockout. Willard is shown practicing his punch on his sparring partner, Walter Monohan, at New York.

MORAN IN NEW YORK TO FINISH TRAINING FOR WILLARD BOUT

New York, March 4.—[Special.]—Railbirds of the fighting game in these parts will be busier than a mangy hound dog the next three weeks. Frank Moran, challenger for the world's heavyweight title, arrived late tonight from Saratoga. Monday morning at Dal Hawkins' roadhouse the big blond will start heavy training, specializing in boxing, a part of the game he has absolutely disregarded since his last fight with Jim Coffey.

Champion Jess Willard will continue his well known schedule of conditioning road work through Central park and along Riverside drive in the morning, with gymnastic work and boxing at the Pioneer Sporting club in the afternoon.

Jess Resents Criticism.

"Criticism from some quarters has been directed against me for apparently taking things so easy so far," said the champion this afternoon. "Henceforth I do not think there will be such objection. Anybody who thinks I am not in pretty fair shape right now should just try to follow me through the bending exercises I do each afternoon. That would convince him.

"I have not trained as hard as I would if I had not come east slightly indisposed. But I have known all along just what I was doing. I have three weeks ahead before I face Moran and that time, properly utilized, will bring me to the scratch as fit as I was when I faced Jack Johnson."

Al Reich has been secured as one of Willard's sparring partners. Willard's workout today set a new attendance figure. The doors were closed after several hundred standees had clogged every possible vantage point.

Moran in Fine Shape.

Moran appears in excellent physical condition and fine spirit. He has spent the last six weeks building up. He weighs approximately 205 pounds stripped, and hopes to go into the ring the night of March 25 at almost that figure.

"Though heavier than I usually scale in the ring, I am hard as iron and do not believe after the rugged outdoor life of the last two months that gym work will pull me down a great deal," said Moran on his arrival. "Certainly the extra weight gives me far better hitting power, and apparently it has in no manner impaired my speed."

"TRIBUNE" DECISIONS.

At Philadelphia—Frankie Fleming beat Frankie White (6); Eddie Wallace beat Frankie White (6); Leo Roux beat Young Rector (6); Johnny Britt beat Bobby McLeod (6); Eddie McAndrews beat Vic Moran (6).

At Pittsburgh—Johnny Ray beat Johnny Kilbane (6).

KILBANE STALLS; BEATEN BY J. RAY IN PITTSBURGH.

Pittsburgh, Pa., March 4.—[Special.]—Johnny Kilbane, featherweight champion, by his stalling methods lost a six round bout here tonight with Johnny Ray. Ray did all the fighting. Kilbane pushed his glove in the referee's face twice during the fifth round when warned for using his head.

The referee threatened to stop the fight during this round because of the stalling by the champion. Kilbane laughed and danced his way throughout the six rounds. In the last round he was angry and decided to fight. Ray stood up with the champion and fought him toe to toe.

A hard right caught Ray on the jaw in the last round while he was backing away. He slipped to his knees, but was up in an instant and fighting the champion back hard. In the first round two hard left jabs delivered by Ray cut Kilbane's mouth and he bled freely throughout the bout.

TWO TANK TITLES TO M'GILLIVRAY IN DETROIT MEET

Detroit, Mich., March 4.—[Special.]—Perry McGillivray of the Illinois Athletic club is still the king of Central A. A. U. swimmers. He took first in the 100 yard and the 220 yard championships in the Detroit Athletic club natatorium tonight.

A new champion was crowned in the fancy diving contest, all judges agreeing that Arthur W. Hartung of the Illinois A. C. was the best of the five entrants. Billy Heyn of the Chicago A. A., champion last year, lost his honors because of a slip on leaving the board. Clement Browne of the Hamilton club of Chicago finished a close second to McGillivray in the dash events. Summaries:

220 yard Central A. A. U. championship—Won by Perry McGillivray, Illinois A. C.; Clement Browne, Hamilton club, Chicago, second; W. L. Wallen Jr., Hamilton club, third. Time, 2:27 3-5.

Fancy diving championships—Won by Arthur Hartung, I. A. C.; William Heyn, Chicago A. A., second; Stephen de Orlow, Detroit "Y," third.

100 yard Central A. A. U. championship—Won by McGillivray, I. A. C.; Browne, Hamilton club, second; Kenneth Vosburgh, Chicago A. A., third. Time, :56 4-5.

Crocodile race—Won by Goldie, McGough, De Orlow, Reiter, and Van Sicklen; Richardson, Heyn, Palmer, Butcher, and Anderson, second. Time, :24 2-5.

50 yard towing race for Detroit Athletic club members—Won by Goldie and McGough; Van Sicklen and Heddon, second; Reiter and Richardson, third. Time, 1:12 2-5.

Navy Loses Close Contests.

Annapolis, Md., March 4.—The Naval academy lost three of four athletic contests this afternoon, each by a single point. In the triangular gymnastic match Princeton won by 21 to 20 for Navy and 18 for University of Pennsylvania. It was the first defeat for a naval academy gym team in seven years. The swimming match went to Princeton by 26 to 25, and the New York fencing club won the match with foils by 5 to 4. Navy wrestlers took every bout from Princeton, winning three on clean falls.

DISBROW, AUTO RACER, MARRIES CHICAGO GIRL.

Louis Disbrow, veteran automobile race pilot and holder of many track records, and Miss Harriet May Henry of Chicago were married in the English room of the Blackstone hotel last night by the Rev. George W. Thomas, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal church.

The bride came to Chicago from Albany, N. Y., some time ago, and has resided with her sister, Mrs. Brazil Evans, 1013 Winona avenue. The only bridal attendants were the brother and the sister of the bridegroom, J. P. Disbrow and Miss L. Grace Disbrow, both of New York.

Among thirty relatives and friends present were Dan R. Hanna Jr. and Mark Hanna II., grandsons of the late Mark Hanna; W. K. Morrison of Minneapolis, and Mrs. Brazil Evans, Chicago, and Mrs. W. E. Hanna, Chicago, the matron of honor.

After their honeymoon the couple will live in Cleveland, O., where Disbrow will be associated with Dan and Mark Hanna II. in designing and building a roadster to bear the name "Disbrow." The firm will also erect and operate a garage with a capacity for 400 touring cars.

Louis Disbrow has been a racing pilot for over ten years. "I simply had to get married to become a regular business man," he told friends last night. He met his bride at the Vanderbilt cup race in San Francisco last year.

ANDERSON BREAKS HAND; FIGHTS IT OUT TO DRAW.

New York, March 4.—[Special.]—Andre Anderson and Jack Keating boxed ten rounds to a draw tonight at the Clermont Athletic club. In the third round Anderson broke his right hand, but he refused to quit. Up to the time of the accident he had the better of the fight.

BAKER PULLS NEW STUNT TO ADVERTISE A FIGHT.

Snowy Baker of Australia fathered a smart advertising stunt in connection with the recent Darcy-Brown match. He sent out postcards for a guessing competition, the fans wrote on the card in what round the fight would end, what the men would weigh, and what the result would be; and the first correct card taken out of a ballot box gained a prize of $100. Over 15,000 cards were sent in for this competition, and the same novelty will be used in big matches in the other cities besides Sydney.

CRANE BOYS TOP QUALIFYING LIST FOR TRACK TITLE

Harrison Leads Juniors—Lane and Hyde Park Tie in Swim Events.

BY PREP.

The well balanced Crane track team led all other Chicago schools with nineteen boys for the finals to be held at Bartlett gymnasium on March 18. Hyde Park was second, nosing out Lane. All three of the schools should put up a hard fight for the championship. The time in the events was not especially fast, because the star men were scattered through the heats and only were forced to place to assure themselves qualification for the finals.

Harrison juniors won the secondary division preliminary by qualifying fifteen men. Austin, Lake View, Crane, Hyde Park, and Senn were all well bunched, and it is possible for any of these schools to win the banner.

Lane and Hyde Park qualified eight men in the senior swimming events, and Lane and Senn had things their own way in the junior tank meet. Summaries:

CUNEO, THE PLUNGER.

BY SAM SUMMERFIELD.

Cuneo's restaurant in New Orleans had its beginning many years ago. It was not a gilded lobster palace, like those that make Broadway habitable, and cabaret and tango were then unknown. Nevertheless it did a good business, for the waiters were tolerably clean, the food excellent, the service good, and the prices reasonable.

When the Crescent City experienced its metamorphosis, from a provincial to a metropolitan racing center, an influx of the followers of the thoroughbred came with it. While the bookmakers, the big betters, and the star jockeys wined and dined at the St. Charles and the Grunewald, it did not take the rank and file long to discover that Cuneo's was good enough for them. And so the army of bookmakers' clerks, small betters, touts, etc., increased its business twofold.

Up to this time Cuneo had never set foot on a racetrack and could not have distinguished a racehorse from a water cart plug. However, the crowd of dispensers of advance information that flocked to his place knew that he had money, was making more, and therefore labored industriously to educate him along those lines.

Consequently it was not at all surprising to see him appear at the track one day, tethered, metaphorically speaking, to "Scotty, king of the touts."

This gentleman had started life as a barber, but, finding the rôle of turf adviser less enervating and more remunerative than that of a tonsorial artist, had made the change.

The prices were just being posted for the first race, and Scotty deemed the 2 to 1 favorite worthy of a bet. Stolidly the "angel" dragged a plethoric roll of bills from his pocket, and, stripping off a two dollar note, placed it on the horse.

The ex-barber was rather disappointed at the insignificance of the wager, but, with the perseverance of his class, hung on, trusting that his customer would warm up and plunge more liberally later.

The horse was beaten, and its defeat explained satisfactorily.

In the next race a 4 to 1 shot was the selection and this time Cuneo risked $4. They also failed to cash on this nag and a poor start, purely imaginary, received the blame.

The third race held an 8 to 1 shot, which could not lose and the restaurateur handed a bookmaker eight simoleons on it. The steed finished in the ruck and Scotty wove a fanciful tale about how the horse would have walked in only he was caught in the barrier.

In the following race one at the juicy odds of 15 to 1 was the choice of the turf oracle and the man with the roll rather sulkily handed up three $5 bills in return for the usual pasteboard in such cases provided.

By this time Scotty thought he saw a light. It must be that this party would bet more on a long shot than on a short priced one and forthwith he made up his mind in case that this bet did not win he would take a dying chance in the next race and get his man to bet on the longest shot on the board.

Well, the bet lost all right and our worthy purveyor of reliable turf lore strove diligently to show his client the stirrup the jockey had lost, thus causing the defeat of a horse which otherwise would simply have had to canter to reach the wire first. The restaurant man solemnly accepted the explanation and they started back for the betting ring, where the prices for the succeeding event were just going up.

Scotty eagerly scanned the slates and finally his eye lit on one on which the bookmaker had posted 80 to 1 on one of the outsiders.

With a rush he grabbed his man by the arm and pushed him forward.

"Quick," he whispered, "here's where we make a killing. I've been waiting for this one all the meeting. He's as good as in. Honest, it's a shame to take the money. That one there, Luminus, 80 to 1. He ought to be the favorite. Hurry, hurry now, and put a good bet down before they rub him."

But the good thing jerked his arm free and balked furiously.

"No, no," he shouted; "no, no, no," he reiterated still more loudly.

"I no do! I no bet no more! First you say 2 to 1. Den 4, den 8, den 15, now 80. Nex' time you say 'tousand for one and I mus' bet one tousand dollars. No, I vill not. I go home."

And with a bound Cuneo broke loose and started on a dead run for the gate, there to catch a car to take him back to his garlic scented emporium.

A PIOUS WISH.

A number of years back Billy Loeffler, then a prominent politician, took a party of us to the west side on a visit to the habitat of his constituency.

Among other places where, through the medium of his presence among us, a warm welcome greeted us, was a saloon, as near as I can remember, on Jefferson street.

After a short sojourn at the bar we pushed through to a rear room, where a poker game was in progress. The players were elderly Hebrews with long, flowing beards, evidently better acquainted with our national game than with our language.

A pot had just been played to its conclusion as we entered.

"I call you," the one player said, "vat do you see?"

"See?" retorted the other, deliberately, "I see tree aces!"

With a snort the loser threw away his cards. "Dat's good," he hissed, grimly, "and I shust vish you vould haf vent stone blind before you seen dem," he added piously.

BRIGHTON'S 'HAPPY NEW YEAR'

About three decades ago No. 91 Clark street was a very well known gambling house, at one time owned by Riley & Vanderburgh, and afterwards by Nels Dunham.

For the latter worked a "wheel man" called Brighton. This chap was an inveterate gambler against his own game, when off watch, and in consequence was usually broke. After a particularly long and uninterrupted run of bad luck the oncoming winter found him unprepared with an overcoat.

He strove desperately to make a winning large enough to enable him to purchase one, and finally succeeding, turned up on the last day of the year with a nice brand new peajacket, a style of coat then much in vogue.

After everybody had admired it he took it off and hung it up, preparatory to standing his trick at the wheel.

His watch ended at 11:30, and having been relieved, he made ready to celebrate New Year's eve at a few of the cafés and incidentally show off his new regalia.

On looking for his coat it was nowhere to be found. Thinking that his fellow employés were playing a joke on him, he strenuously demanded that they turn it up and allow him to go. They soon convinced him, however, that they were innocent of playing any prank and he was forced to accept the conclusion that some ornery sneak thief had pilfered it and succeded in making his getaway with it. Just then the clock struck 12 and the usual din of shrieking whistles, tooting horns and clanging bells that ever ushers in the New Year ensued.

When this had finally subsided Brighton in his shirt sleeves still stood disconsolately in the center of the room.

Gazing in turn from one to the other of the sympathetic faces around him, he spoke slowly and bitterly: "I just want some son of a sea-cock to say Happy New Year to ME!"

ANSWER TO QUERY.

Chicago.—[To the Editor.]—In a game of jackpots, deuces wild, A opened the pot for the limit; B stays and raises for the limit; C also stays. Cards are drawn. A checks, B also checks and C checks, forcing a showdown. A without previously declaring, the splitting of openers, has a pair of nines, including a deuce. B has a pair of fives and C even a lower hand. Who wins the pot? A. C.

Answer.—According to Hoyle, the man with the best hand wins, but must replace the original pot. Under club rules the opener forfeits the opening bet and the others take their money out. If the opener splits and fails to announce and show openers he forfeits the same as if he had no openers. The club rules are used in Chicago.

RACQUETS MATCH WON BY BOAKES

BY WALTER H. ECKERSALL.

Harry Boakes Jr., son of the veteran wielder of the bat, climbed another notch closer to the professional title yesterday when he defeated William Newman of the New York Racquets and Tennis club in three of four games at the University club courts.

The local player won the first game, 15 to 8, but was defeated by a similar margin in the second. Boakes won the third game after an interesting match, 15 to 11, and he won the fourth and deciding contest in easy fashion, 15 to 6.

Boakes was the aggressor throughout. He outgeneraled his opponent. That the winner was the better player is shown by the fact that Boakes made twelve aces on service and Newman eight.

The same players will meet on a neutral court in the near future to determine who shall play Jack Soutar of Philadelphia for the world's professional title. In all probability the elimination contest will be held in Boston and the championship match in New York. Following is the summary of yesterday's games:

FIRST GAME.

Boakes	1	0	2	2	0	4	0	3	3	—15
Newman	0	2	0	0	4	0	2	0	0	—8

SECOND GAME.

Boakes	1	0	1	2	1	2	1	—8
Newman	2	2	1	0	3	3	4	—15

THIRD GAME.

Boakes	2	0	2	1	2	2	3	0	1	2	—15

FOURTH GAME.

Newman	0	0	1	0	0	0	0	5	0	—6

KELLEY WINS OVER HALPIN IN 300 YARD BOSTON RUN.

Boston, Mass., March 4.—Sectional athletic championships were decided by unusually close competition at the meet under the auspices of the New England Amateur Athletic union tonight. The games served as elimination trials for competitors to represent New England at the national indoor meet to be held in New York.

In the 300 yards run the pace was so swift that Andrew B. Kelley of Holy Cross and Thomas J. Halpin of Boston, the latter a national champion, ran into each other on the homestretch. Although Halpin finished first, the prize was awarded to Kelley on the ground that Halpin had fouled him. Kelley said, however, that he would turn the prize over to Halpin. The time was :36 3-5.

Another stirring finish came in the two mile run, won by A. Colby of the Boston A. A. James Power of this city, former Australian mile champion, collapsed, and Emery F. Mahoney of the Boston A. A., the New England outdoor titleholder, led almost to the finish, faltered at the tape, and slipped back into third place, behind George Goodwin, a Wakefield High school student.

DAM OF SYSONBY IS DEAD.

Lexington, Ky., March 4.—Optima, dam of the great Sysonby, is dead here. She was afflicted with rheumatism for several years, and at the request of her owners, Corrigan and McKinney, a Cleveland veterinarian put her to death.

St. Viator's in Conference.

Bloomington, Ill., March 4.—St. Viator's college of Bourbonnais, Ill., today was voted into membership in the Illinois Intercollegiate Athletic association, commonly known as the Little Eighteen. This makes nineteen members of the association.

WRESTLING POPULAR IN 'BIG 9,' BUT STUDENTS PASS UP BOXING

WHY NOT BOXING?

Herewith is a symposium of the activities of the Big Nine colleges in boxing and wrestling. The reports show that while the mat game is encouraged and is making progress through intercollegiate competition, practically no attention is given to boxing. While it possibly may be conceded that title contests between boxers from different colleges might lead to such a vigorous rivalry as to engender feeling, many persons interested in sports feel that every young man should have a knowledge of the art of personal defense. Surely instruction and even intramural contests could not be other than healthful and helpful. Harvard recently has given increased attention to its boxing classes and many noted men have expressed their approval. There is no keener sporting spectacle than a scientific sparring contest—one devoid of the mauling and tricks of the professional prize ring. Are the Big Nine athletic councils fulfilling their duties to their students?*

CHICAGO.

Coach Ross Netherton came to Chicago three years ago from Indiana, where he was a star wrestler. For two years he labored to build up interest in the mat game, but found the students slow to respond, because of the popularity of the two major indoor sports, basketball and track. For the last two years Chicago has had about a dozen candidates, and has been no match for Indiana, Purdue, and Illinois, where a squad of 100 is below the average turnout.

The Chicago team members are awarded minor letters for their work, but any wrestler who wins the conference championship in his class is eligible for the major "C."

Coach Netherton is not optimistic over the coming season. A squad of thirty-five has reported, about half of whom are ineligibles and freshmen taking the mat game to secure the required number of hours in the gymnasium. The conference championship will be held at Minneapolis. The student body takes little interest in the sport.

No instructor in boxing is provided at Chicago, and the art of self-defense never has been given serious consideration.

NORTHWESTERN

Boxing is not practiced at Northwestern university excepting by a few devotees of the sport, who sometimes engage in informal bouts in the gymnasium. The sport is not listed on the athletic schedule, nor is it likely to be, as to promote boxing under regulation would involve problems which Director Omer feels would be difficult to overcome.

Wrestling until last year was also a sport practiced only informally and by a few. With the advent of Elmer E. Jones, who came to Northwestern as professor in the department of education, wrestling took a boom. Prof. Jones, while a student at Columbia, won an intercollegiate championship, and is a warm exponent of wrestling as a sport and as a form of exercise.

At Indiana university, whence he came to Northwestern, Jones coached a championship team and made wrestling popular at the Hoosier institution. Director Omer asked him to try his system among the Purple students, with the result that last year twenty men took part. Tryouts already have been held this season and a team selected which will engage in intercollegiate matches. Forty men are candidates to represent the Purple. There has never been even a minor accident.

INDIANA.

Bloomington, Ind., March 4.—[Special.]—Indiana university students go in strong for wrestling, which probably accounts for the fact that two western conference championship teams have been turned out in the last five years. Indiana and Iowa tied for the "Big Nine" championship in 1915.

Wrestling is one of the major sports here and receives as much attention from the athletic committee as basketball. "Big Ed" Davis, western conference heavyweight champion for two years, is coaching the Indiana squad and is employed by the athletic association the same as any other coach.

Boxing is not practiced by the students as a regular sport, although many take it up voluntarily in gymnasium classes.

IOWA.

Iowa City, Ia., March 4.—[Special.]—Second only to the gridiron in the field of "hero making" at Iowa university is the mat. Wrestling has been a feature of Hawkeye athletic endeavor during the last three years and the stars of the gridiron have been its chief exponents. About fifty men appear annually in an effort to make the team and about ten of these succeed.

The experience of the mat performers in other fields of athletics is an element in their freedom from accidents. Not a single injury of note has been recorded at Iowa in three years.

While interest in boxing, fencing, and kindred sports has been sporadic at Iowa, the student body has developed increasing enthusiasm each successive year over the wrestling contests. As a result the board in control of athletics gave formal recognition to the sport this year and engaged Professional Jess Reimer [Westergaard] to coach the mat men. Hereafter a professional will be secured annually to aid Prof. E. G. Schroeder, director of the department of physical training.

WISCONSIN.

Madison, Wis., March 4.—[Special.]—Boxing and wrestling are taking prominent places on the indoor sport calendar here. Enrollment this year has been the heaviest in their history, with 75 in the boxing classes and 100 entered for wrestling competition.

For boxing there is no regular competition. It is given as a gymnasium course for general gymnasium credit. For the last three years George H. Lovequist has had direction of the boxing classes. In wrestling, however, there is regular competition, with elimination matches to pick the varsity wrestling team to represent Wisconsin in intercollegiate competition. Arthur W. Knott, former Navy student and 1914 Big Nine lightweight champion, directs the Badger wrestlers.

An encouraging feature concerning these two sports at Wisconsin is the fact that no serious accidents have occurred since they were placed on the Cardinal athletic program.

MINNESOTA.

Minneapolis, Minn., March 4.—[Special.]—Interest in boxing and wrestling as regular university sports has for several years weathered an adverse attitude on the part of the athletic board which supports only such sports as support themselves.

About a dozen students are keeping the boxing game alive by banding together and hiring a professional to teach them the art of self-defense. The athletic board makes no contributions.

Wrestling enjoys a little wider participation. W. K. Foster of the physical culture department directs the wrestling, doing what he can to arouse student interest. Madigan, intercollegiate champion and captain of the team, does the coaching.

Minnesota always sends a wrestling team to the conference gymnastic meet and has been highly successful. All-university wrestling meets are held to choose the Minnesota representatives in the conference meet. The meet will be held here April 7 and 8 and there will be Gopher grapplers in five different weights.

Only one accident has occurred. Three years ago a student wrestler, appearing in an amateur exhibition in a Minneapolis gymnasium, died from a broken neck, resulting from a full nelson. The fatality was accepted as an accident that might have visited any sport or avocation.

The legalization of professional prizefights in Minnesota has led to much discussion of the boxing game on the campus and there is a growing sentiment to give that pastime at least the ranking of a minor sport. But as in the case of wrestling, though student interest in both seems to warrant encouragement, the athletic board, controlled in fact by the faculty, is not expected to lend any encouragement.

ILLINOIS.

Urbana, Ill., March 4.—[Special.]—The University of Illinois Athletic association employs an instructor for wrestling and boxing. He spends all his time at this work. Both sports are popular.

As wrestling is an intercollegiate competitive sport, there is naturally more interest in it. The wrestling team competes with other universities, and Capt. Cope was awarded an "I" for his work in the last conference meet.

Boxing is not an intercollegiate or even an intramural sport. No boxing matches, as the term goes, are held. All the boxing is done in a small room without even the usual gymnasium hangers on as spectators. There never have been any serious accidents from boxing or wrestling.

"It is my belief that spectators at a boxing match mean that one or the other of the boxers is going in for blood and is likely to hurt the other," says Director Huff. "Our boxing is without a gallery, therefore. Away back I remember when a boxing match was put on as a feature of a track meet, but that was when we were just entering athletics."

PURDUE.

Lafayette, Ind., March 4.—[Special.]—Wrestling as an intercollegiate sport is being established on a firm basis at Purdue, and the Boilermakers expect to have a team that will furnish strong opposition in the grappling game. In Theodore Paulson the old Gold and Black feels that it has one the best coaches in the middle west.

This is Paulson's second year at Purdue, and great interest is being shown. Over 200 men registered at the beginning of the season and from fifty to seventy men are out every afternoon. All stars of last year's team are back, with the exception of Johnson in the 115 and 125 pound class.

Boxing is not encouraged here, although quite an interest was shown a few years ago.

OHIO STATE.

Columbus, O., March 4.—[Special.]—Boxing and wrestling are neglected sports at Ohio State university and the student body has shown little interest. Each year a number of students apply for instruction, but up to the present the percentage has been far too small to warrant the services of a professional instructor.

During the last four years private classes have been conducted by instructors in the department of physical education. A nominal fee is charged. These classes, with an enrollment of from twenty-five to thirty, meet for one hour twice a week.

ST. PAUL GETS JUNIOR MEET.

St. Paul, Minn., March 4.—The junior indoor championship track and field meet of the Central A. A. U. will be held here Saturday, April 1. The meet will be held at the Auditorium, which has a seating capacity of 10,000.

It's Cold at Tigers' Camp.

Waxahachie, Tex., March 4.—Cold weather today continued to handicap the training activities of the Tigers. Manager Jennings insisted upon two sessions of work, but weather conditions were so unfavorable that little or nothing was accomplished.

MAROONS FIX UP LONG TANK TRIP; BACK EAST AGAIN

Coach White Arranging to Meet Six or Seven Teams During Vacation.

BY MAROON.

The University of Chicago swimming team has been home from an eastern trip only ten days and now it is planning to go back again to meet Yale, Columbia, Rutgers, Pennsylvania, Princeton, and a couple of athletic clubs during the Easter vacation, which comes during the first week in April. Yale has accepted a return meet for April 22 with Chicago, and the event is a certainty if the [illegible] swimmers can get away from their studies. Yale also will meet Northwestern while on its western tour.

Coach White has signed for meets with Yale and Columbia for early April, and has written to the other schools for [illegible] to make the trip a financial success. He hopes to enter his men in a half a dozen dual meets, and can do so without exhausting his swimmers with too much traveling, because the spring vacation lasts from the end of the winter quarter on March 29 until April 10. The chances that school will be closed next week because of a scarlet fever epidemic is not remote, but Coach White [illegible] plan his tour on that possibility.

Maroons Bid for Title.

The Maroons are looking forward to the conference championship when the Big Nine schools meet at Evanston on March 16 and 17, although a hot scrap with Northwestern is expected. The Purple defeated the Maroons a month ago, but that was when O'Conner and Pavlicek were not in competition. Last week with their full strength intact Coach White's men won a great match, which resulted in a slashing of the conference records in almost every event.

Redmon set a world's record in the plunge and Earle broke the conference record in the 40 and 220 yard swims. Pavlicek smashed his own back stroke mark and Scoles of Coach [illegible] squad bettered his breast stroke record. The Maroons also hung up a new [illegible] intercollegiate relay time.

Chicago vs. Northwestern.

Illinois and Wisconsin also will be represented, but neither is expected to cut much figure in the score column. Illinois has two good divers, McDonald, who specializes in distance, plunges and [illegible] the conference fancy diving [illegible]. Wisconsin has not shown strength that entitles it to consideration. In fact, the swimming fans can hardly see where the Badgers will count over half a dozen points.

SINAI SWIMMERS BEAT HYDE PARK "Y" IN MEET

Sinai Social center swimmers defeated the Hyde Park Y. M. C. A. team last night in the losers' natatorium, 47½ points to 24½. The visitors won every first except the 100 yard swim and also took both places in the fancy diving event. The contest was won by Davis, who rejoined the squad after spraining an ankle six weeks ago. Summaries:

40 yard swim—Won by Moss, Sinai. Time, :21 1-5.

Plunge for distance—Won by Lowy, [illegible] Time, :31 4-5.

100 yard swim—Won by Sears, Hyde Park. Time, 1:04 3-5.

40 yard back stroke—Won by Green, [illegible] Time, :29 1-5.

220 yard swim—Won by Fitzgerald, [illegible] 3:02 2-5.

Fancy diving—Won by Davis, Sinai.

Relay—Won by Sinai [Chadkin, [illegible] Fitzgerald, Moss]. Time, 1:29 3-5.

NORTHWEST CLUB DOWNS DENTISTS AT HOCKEY, 1-0

In a close and interesting game the Northwestern Skating club defeated Northwestern university dental school squad at [illegible] hockey team representing the Northwest park yesterday, 1 to 0. The only point of the game was scored in the first half, when McLeod, rover for the skating team, shot the puck into the net after evading a bunch of dentists. Lineup:

N. W. Skating club.		N. U. D
McKain	Goal
Wallace	Point
Hamilton	Cover point
Bosgette	Right wing
McLeod	Rover
Paine	Center
Taylor	Left wing

Goal—McLeod. Refree—Lefler.

NOTES OF THE SOCCER PLAYERS

The soccer match in the [illegible] championship series between Pullman and the [illegible] of Detroit carded for this afternoon at [illegible] man has been postponed one week on account of the snow.

The Paramount soccer team will play the Mohawks at Tigers' park, Oak Park, this afternoon.

The International Harvester soccer team will meet the Slavias this afternoon at the [illegible] grounds.

LOCAL BIKE PROMOTERS PLAN TO INVADE NEWARK

Promoters of the Twentieth Century Cycling association are not discouraged by the weak showing on their [illegible] venture. They plan to run another six day race late this month. They will invade Newark, the stronghold of the National Cycling association, the rival combine which is fighting for control of the sport in this country. Another of the six day stuff will be attempted, a four hour a day grind, starting at [illegible] and ending at midnight. The race will be held in the Newark armory. [illegible] McNamara, Spears, Verri, [illegible] all the other stars are said to be lined up for the race.

CHICAGOAN SUED BY JOCKEY

New Orleans, La., March 4.—[Special.]—Suit for $300 alleged due as salary was filed by Jockey Frank Murphy in New Orleans against Edward B. [illegible], Chicago racehorse owner, in the [illegible] court today. Murphy charges he contracted with Elkins to ride [illegible] at $100 a mount, but that the owner fired him, owing him [illegible]

King Cophetua and the Beggar Maid

by BURNE-JONES

Every week The Sunday Tribune will reproduce in four colors on this page one of the world's most famously beautiful paintings. There will be a brief biography of the painter and a story of the painting. Herewith is reproduced another in the series.

By ANNE ELLIS.

WE HAVE all heard, long since, of "Cophetua and the Beggar Maid." It is numbered among the things that we feel we should know about, the things that we have put on the dusty and classic shelf of the days of our schooling. We buy a season ticket to a Shakespearean repertory, and hearing Cophetua mentioned we say to John on the way home, "I didn't know Cophetua lived before Shakespeare."

"Before Shakespeare? Why, he never lived at all—he's a myth."

Then ensues a refreshing argument, and we go back to the sources of things with the aid of every one at the library, and we find that nobody knows just whether he ever lived at all or not. Some say he's legendary and some say he's not; but one thing they all agree upon is that he married a beggar maid. At any rate, if those who say he did live are right they acknowledge it was very long ago.

His history, such as it is, is preserved in Percy's Reliques, and he is supposed to have been an African king. There, too, is given the name of the queen, who was the beggar maid, which the poets and the painters, for their over developed dramatic sense, have withheld. It is rather a pretty name with a classic sound, "Penelophon." For my part I had much rather Cophetua remain a legend and stay in the group with Santa Claus and the fairy godmother and "art for art's sake," and all the rest of the beautiful myths.

As the legend goes, the king held court afield, for it was summer and fair weather. He sat upon his dais in robe and crown and his knights about him, and they held a council. And the beggar maid, straying about, in a world where she had nothing, passed under his eyes.

"In robe and crown the king stepped down
To meet and greet her on her way."

He put her on his horse and walked beside her to the palace; and there he seated her upon his throne.

The court was all agog; from princess to scullery maid the rumor ran, an electrifying wave to make the eyes stare and the lips exclaim. The dowagers gathered in knots in the palace halls; they buzzed and buzzed like a swarm out of Pandora's box. The maidens mostly were reduced to tears, for which of them had been free from the spell of dreams and who among them had not been visited by furtive hope. The men, as men always have and men always will, while men are men, stood hats off and swords bare in the presence of new loveliness.

"It is no wonder," said the lords; "she is more beautiful than day."

* * * * * * * * * * *

"As shines the moon in clouded skies
She in her poor attire is seen;
One praised her ankle, one her eyes,
One her dark hair and lovesome mien.
So sweet a face, such angel grace
In all that land had never been.
Cophetua swear a royal oath:
'This beggar maid shall be my queen.'"

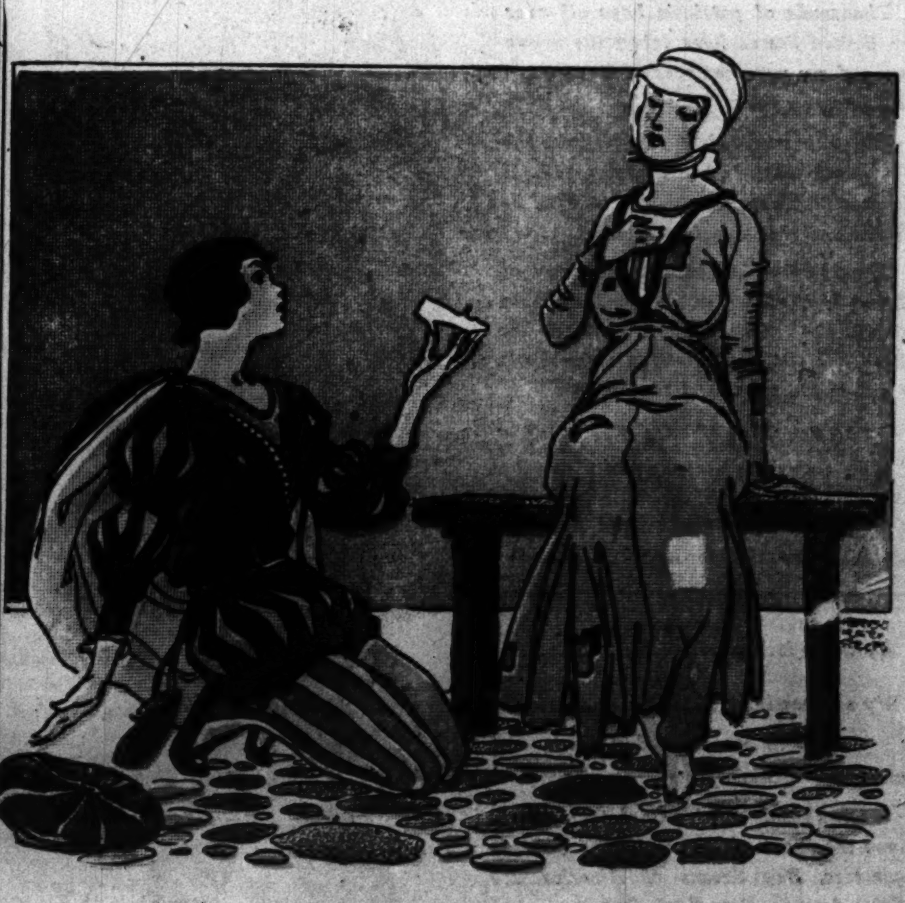
And who shall tell the emotions of a beggar maid, ragged upon a throne? The sudden shrinking from the eyes of the glittering throng; the spur to pride; the desire to acquit herself before them; the misty visions of ease and power; the new consciousness of beauty, and the sudden heart shattering terror that all this might be a dream.

Sir Edward Copely Burne-Jones has caught the complexities of emotion in the heart of the beggar maid and painted them into her face. It was his sympathy with romance—colorful, half mythical, medieval romance—joined to his chivalrous, ceremonious personality, that enabled him to do it so well that this picture, now in the Tate gallery, London, is considered the best of his works.

Burne-Jones was born in 1833. When he was young he intended to devote himself to the ministry. After he had studied about a year at a theological seminary he found himself possessed of an avid interest in art. One man especially fascinated him, a living master, whom he resolved to know. This man was Rossetti, and Burne-Jones met him the following spring in London. At Easter the same year he left school and began his studies under him. This step he took on his own responsibility and not, as is sometimes supposed, under the direction of Rossetti. The latter influenced his work strongly, but he acknowledged, as did the world later, that in many ways the pupil outgrew the master. In 1887 he achieved his signal success.

Though his fame as a painter has been established, it is in the realm of decorative design that he has made himself felt. His life was cast among interesting personalities. He went to school with William Morris, studied under Rossetti, and traveled with Ruskin. His son, Philip Burne-Jones, succeeded his father to the baronetcy and renown as a painter.

Next week another famous painting will be reproduced.



YOUNG AMERICANS

TRAIL OF THE BOY SCOUTS

By PATHFINDER

THE USEFUL JACKKNIFE.

MORE and more the jackknife is becoming popular with Boy Scouts, and, indeed, such should be the case. The true Boy Scout should care little for the finished product, but he should be an enthusiast about turning out articles with his own hands. The true Boy Scout should ask for no more advantages than those enjoyed by the pioneer.

Boys have always craved jackknives, and there have been boys in the past who have been clever in using them, but it has really remained for the modern Boy Scout to make the most of the simple tool. I know of no one, however, who has worked out the uses of a jackknife to such an extent as has Scout Master Spies.

"Any scout treasures most those articles which he has fashioned with his own hands," says Mr. Spies, "and every scout has use for the box whistle which can be made from cigar box wood by making a square tube three-quarters of an inch square and the length of a cigar box. Make a plug that will fit tight on three sides for the front, leaving a narrow air space on the fourth side. This plug should be about an inch long, and a hole should be cut on the side of the tube above the air space an inch back, where the end of this plug comes. Then taper the back of this hole to a thin edge. The tone of the whistle will depend on the distance between the end of the pipe and this hole. The same principle is applied in this whistle as in making whistles from willow sticks.

"An effective whistle call for patrol leaders is produced by the chime when two of these whistles, of different tones, are joined together. The tone is pleasing, yet it carries well in the woods, and it has a different quality than the common scout whistle. Having heard it once, patrol members will be able to distinguish it. A siren can be made by placing in the whistle a block which will slide back and forth easily, the block being attached to a stick protruding from the back end of the whistle. With a little practice, bird calls may be imitated with a wooden siren realistically.

"Whittle that wooden spoon for your cook kit out of hard maple. Whittle your batons out of walnut or mahogany, and you may make the handle as fancy as you choose.

"The best staff for a signaling flag is a light one which still has strength. Use seven-eighths inch white pine, about eight inches longer than the signaling flag is square; whittle a handle on one end, and let the staff taper to three-eighths of an inch on top. This is a light and most convenient staff which permits of great speed in wigwag signaling.

"All of the work on a bow and arrow set can be done with a hatchet and a pocket knife. The arrow, of course, must be perfectly straight; the weight in front can be made from a spool and the three air veins at the back can be made from split feathers.

"Use a cedar post for that patrol totem pole. The history of a patrol can be carved into the pole, starting at the top and going around spirally, in much the same manner as the Indians did when they painted their history on skins.

"You have all seen the wooden chain. The making of it requires a good deal of skill, and until you know how it is made you wonder how the links are joined together. As a matter of fact, the ends of the links are made from the wood which is removed from the inside of the connecting link, so that they are never joined together but remain together always—made from one solid piece. Try two links first, then three, and after you can make three you can make as many as you please.

"Then there is the toy sailboat that can be whittled with a rudder attached to a string leading from the boom of the mainsail in such a manner that when the boat tends to turn around a rubber band, set to pull in the opposite direction from the line attached to the mainsail, contracts, throwing the rudder and turning the boat before the wind again. By experimenting, these boats may be made to sail in a straight line across a lagoon or lake several hundred feet wide. The paddle wheel of such a boat may be made from cigar box wood.

"Skiffs, dories, and lifeboats can be whittled out of solid blocks of white pine; and as much time can be spent in making these boats as the whittler cares to give, as they can be fitted up with cabins, gang planks, searchlights, smoke stacks, pilot houses—in fact, they can be made to look exactly like river steamboats. One should be careful that the boat does not become topheavy. The hull should be made plenty wide and flat, and of light wood, as otherwise it will not furnish sufficient buoyancy to keep the cabin and decks above the water line. The works from an old alarm clock can be used as a motor for such a boat, and they furnish much more power than the twisted rubber band.

"So, you see, boys, the blade of a Boy Scout's jackknife can be turned to a far more useful purpose than initial carving."

"PATROL WHISTLES, COOK KIT SPOONS, ARROWS, TOTEM POLES—ALL OF THEM CAN BE MADE WITH A JACK KNIFE." SAYS SCOUTMASTER SPIES.

THE BOY SCOUT OATH

ON MY
I WILL DO MY BEST:

1—To do my duty to God and my country, and to obey the Scout law.
2—To help other people at all times.
3—To keep myself physically strong, mentally awake and morally straight.

Thousands of patriotic boys all over the United States have taken the above oath and are now members of Boy Scouts of America troops.

Every patriotic boy should join the Boy Scout troop in his neighborhood. If there is no troop organization at hand he should see that one is started.

If you are a boy between the ages of 12 and 18 and have not yet had a chance to join a Boy Scout troop, but desire to do so, fill out the following coupon, cut it out of the paper and send it to

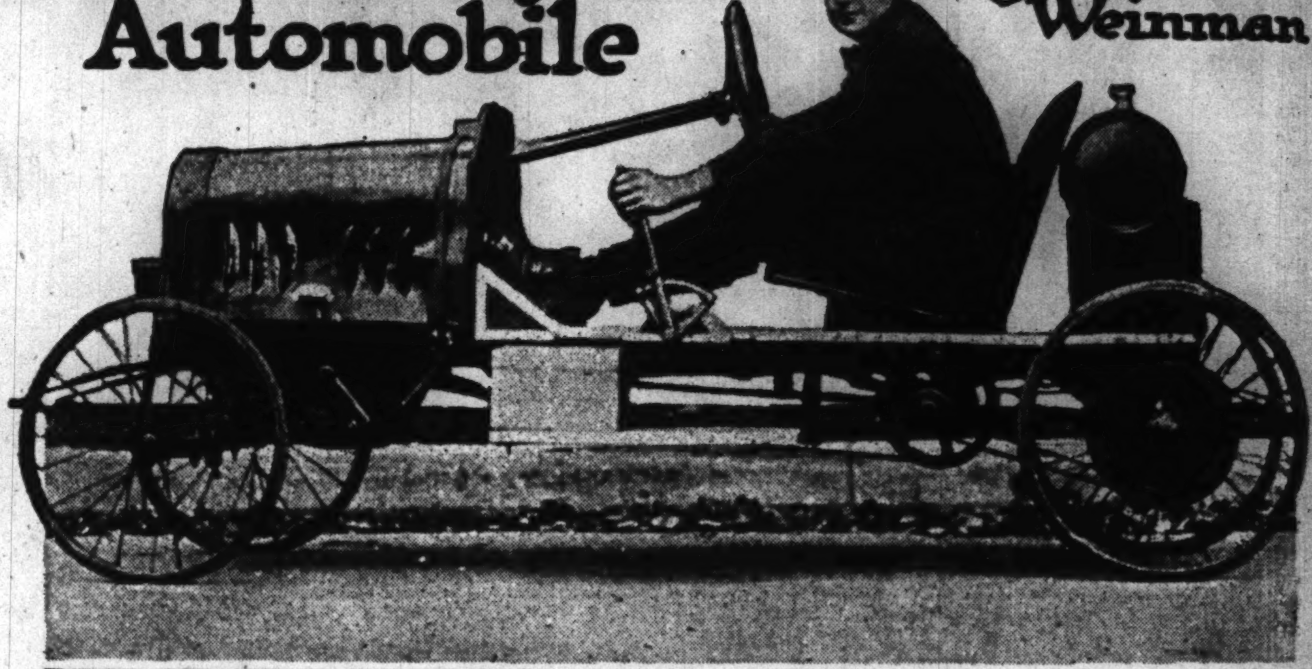
How I Made My Own Automobile

by Milton Weinman



I WANTED to have "something that goes"—that's how it started. A motorcycle was out of the question; my folks settled that for me. Next in line was, of course, an automobile; my pocketbook settled that for me. At this time I was still in high school, and my pocketbook usually looked exceedingly thin and pale; but I had made up my mind, and, after promising not to draw on my bank account, I started in.

My first worry was an engine—"worry" is the word, all right. Anyhow, after a few week's search and an ad in the paper, I picked up a three horse power motorcycle engine for $10. I was working after school and on Saturdays in a dry goods store, but this ten bucks was an awful blow, so my cash soon gave out.

I used a frame of 2x4s, four bicycle wheels with babbit bearings, cable steering, about six months of time, a two years' supply of patience—and then threw the machine in the junk pile!

So endeth the tale of automobile No. 1.

Then I started in on the machine shown in the picture. I had learned my lesson. Was this second machine to have a wooden frame? Was this machine to have bicycle wheels? Was this machine to have cable steering? Nay, nay—and again, nay!

I purchased some 3-16x⅝x2 inch steel channel and had it bent by a blacksmith to my drawing. When the frame was completed it was of the bottle neck type, which allowed a large turning radius for the front wheels—a point I had neglected to consider in the first car. Then I bought some good wheels, a rack and pinion steering apparatus, some belt rims, etc., and went to work.

In my first machine I was constantly thinking of keeping down the weight, but this did not bother me now. I used five-eighth inch boards for the flooring and screwed them into the tapped holes in the frame, never forgetting that a lock washer was a first cousin to every screw and nut which went into this machine.

A tinner made a seat and a gas tank to my drawing—and I discovered that my machine was gradually taking shape.

All through the winter months I worked in that basement—a little while some evenings; a little while on Saturday, and even on Sunday. Two staunch friends stuck with me, though—Lester X. Furth and S. Stanley Rosenbloom. They never tired of giving me assistance, and hence deserve a lot of credit. By the way, the three of us took a trip last summer to the beach. The machine made twenty miles an hour with three or thirty-two when I was alone.

But here, I am 'way ahead of my story. The chassis wouldn't budge an inch without a motor; and it was nearly spring time and no motor to be had. I sold my little three horse power one, as I considered it too small. An ad in the newspaper brought one to me on short notice. I had lots of luck in getting parts and fitting them, I must admit, but my greatest piece of luck was in getting the motor that fitted perfectly into the frame.

The rest was easy sailing. The first nice day we took it out. Of course, there were many adjustments to make, but after a while things ran along pretty smoothly. When I saw and proved to the skeptical ones that the machine would and did run I enameled it a bright orange color with black striping—I didn't need a horn then.

We made many trips to the beach in it—and, take it from me, that's the life. Boundless enjoyment was had from this little car last summer, and we hope to get a whole lot more out of it this year.

GETTING MUSCLE — KEEPING IT

Skipping the rope

JOE RIVERS, the boxer, finds the old fashioned pastime of skipping the rope excellent for his training. Each day he practices at rope skipping for from four to eight "three minute rounds." "I find that rope skipping is not only excellent for developing the legs," says Joe, "but it is one of the finest things in all the world for the wind and it is an exceptionally good weight reducer. When I find myself beginning to get too heavy I increase the number of my rope skipping rounds, and I keep at it until I have perspired freely."

Popular Science

THE "SMOKE SCREEN."

MODERN naval gunnery is so marvelously accurate that the only hope for a ship to escape being sunk when within range of the guns is to hide itself. This is easier said than done, however, and there is only one way in which it can be done, and that is by means of a "smoke screen."

It is difficult for one ship to hide itself behind its own smoke, unless the wind is favorable; but it is comparatively easy for a number of ships to put a huge fog of smoke between them and their pursuers.

The smoke is caused by oil fuel, and it can be turned off or on at will by supplying more or less air to the furnaces. It is so black and thick that it is quite impossible to see more than a few yards through it.

Right off the Reel by Mae Tinee

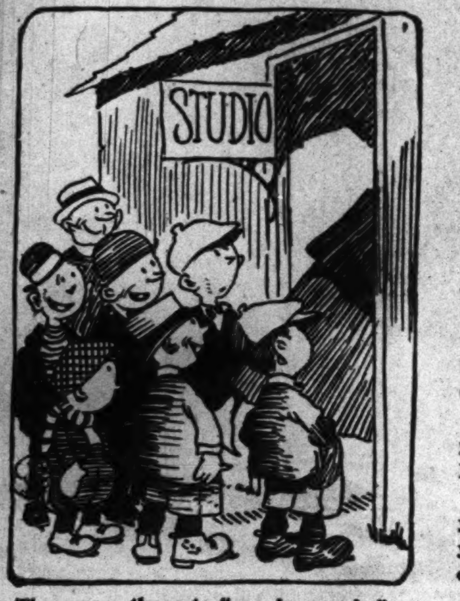
When Working She Allows Herself No Latitude. She Is Obedient to the Director and as Earnest as an "Extra."

WHAT would you say to spending the day at a moving picture studio? (Unnecessary question No. 1.)

What would you say to spending the day at the Kleine studio in New York—with Billie Burke? (Vurr', vurr' unnecessary question No. 2.)

What would you say? Ye gods and goddesses and little fishesses! If the surprise of having the chance didn't take your breath away—you'd yelp with joy—of course. Who wouldn't?



They were there to "see 'em go in."

Well, of course, it would be impossible for all of you to go, so, she said, I went for you. Clear to New York, chug-a-chug, chug-a-chug, so that you and I—all of us together—would have an inside line on Miss Billie Burke, as she works on the big new serial.

There's always more or less red tape getting to people of importance. If you've ever tried it, you know it. So, while I'd have liked to have been able to call up like this, "Hello, Billie! This is Mae. Just got in town. Coming right out. My deah, you're no gladder to hear my voice than I am to hear yours," it couldn't be done.

I had to hail a blond and obliging Mr. Sheldon and tell him who I was and that I was there and what I was there for. Whereupon Mr. Sheldon informed me genially that he would call for me the following day at 9 o'clock at mine hotel and transport me to the studio, which is really an awful distance from town, my dears, cle—ah out in the Bronx. (Yes, that's where they first discovered those cocktails.)

Wednesday morning, 9 o'clock, Mr. Sheldon and Miss Tinee, all were right on the dot, and a brief three-quarters of an hour later witnessed our arrival at the studio, which stands on a hill entirely—or almost entirely—surrounded by apartment buildings which disgorge youth in every stage of development, every stage being apparently always on deck, alert and on tiptoe to "see 'em come out" of the studio. They were also there to "see 'em go in," as I discovered to my eternal discomfiture, for I heard them tell each other in whispers and ways that were not whispers that they'd seen me. One added the information that I was in "com-dees" and another vouchsafed the opinion that I was "rotten." What the others thought on the subject I fled within doors precipitately to prevent learning. You see, it really wasn't coming to me.

A knock on a door marked "Strictly Private," which brought no response, indicated that Miss Burke had not yet arrived on the scene of action, so Mr. Sheldon took me up a flight of stairs to the studio and introduced me to a big, bluff, hearty man giving orders to everybody under the sun. Mr. Walter Edwin, if you please—director. Boss of the big show. The man behind. Honest and Scotch as they make 'em and vurr', vurr' competent. He was Mary Fuller's director for years. Mr. Edwin paused long enough to grasp my hand heartily and say a few cordial whimsical words of welcome. Then he went right back on the job again, and lights flashed on and off, furniture was shifted, screens arranged until finally all was ready for the scene with which the day's work would begin.

Mr. Sheldon left me for a few minutes. When he came back he said that Miss Burke had arrived and would be glad to see me, so we went back to the door marked "Strictly Private," and this time were admitted by a little French maid.

Expecting to be ushered into an ordinary little dressing room, I was rather surprised—to say the least—to find myself in a suite of two rooms, one fitted up as a dining and living room, through the door of which could be seen the wicker and rose fittings of the dressing room proper, and it was here that, for the second time in my life, I met Miss Billie Burke—in private life Mrs. Florenz Ziegfeld.

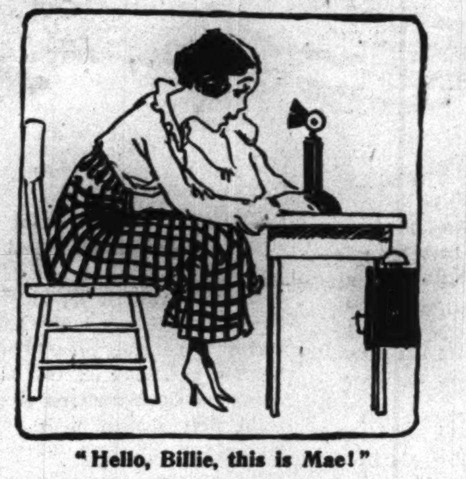
She was sitting in front of her dainty dressing table, looking like a delectable strawberry sundae in her billowy negligee. She was seriously engaged in fluffing her fluffy hair, but she dropped the burnished strand and held out a soft little hand in welcome.

"You won't mind if I go right on, will you?" she asked. "I'm a little late, and Mr. Edwin does not like to be kept waiting."

I smiled. "The question is," I said, "will you mind having me sitting around while you're dressing. I should loathe anybody to do it to me."

"O, I don't mind," Miss Burke said placidly. And having pulled a chair up for me she went back to her task of hairdressing.

The conversation began, as most conversations do, I don't care between whom they are, with a discussion of the weather. Both of us thought it was rather too warm for the time of year. We were perfectly agreed as to that. Then I wanted to know just exactly what the sensation was of being the highest paid movie actress in captivity. Miss Burke elucidated that the sensation was one of these chameleon hued affairs. As far as the remuneration itself went—nothing to be said. But when gowns were late—or not just right—or, or—well, it felt like an awful responsibility.



"Hello, Billie, this is Mae!"

"For," little Miss Burke said, "you know this has simply got to be the best picture that ever went on a screen. It shall. I won't rest until it is. So the sensation is—well, to say the least—a pretty busy one. Eh?"

"Eh!" I agreed. (I wouldn't have the worry for anything. For $4,000 a week? Well——?)

During the next few minutes Miss Burke confided to me the horror she had once of ever appearing in pictures, and she laughed gayly over her change of heart. Does she like pictures? She adores them. She purred like a kitten with delight over "Peggy," the picture in which she made her debut.

"That was really quite nice, wasn't it?" she asked naively. I, having seen "Peggy," allowed it was. Certainly Billie Burke in "Peggy" was nice.

Then we went upstairs to the studio, and I became an interested onlooker. Miss Burke when working allows herself no latitude. She's just as obedient to the director's voice as are any others in the cast. She's as earnest as an "extra" and the Lord knows that means a lot!

I'd tell you a lot about the picture—only, you see, said she, you're not supposed to know what the picture is yet. I will tell you, though, that in the opinion of one pusson it will be some fillum. Howsomever——

Miss Burke asked me if I would lunch with her. I'd have loved to, only Mr. Sheldon had thought it would be interesting for me to lunch in the big dining room where all the rest did, and I had said I would love it.

"Anyhow," I told her, "you're tired and should rest a bit."

She wouldn't admit it, but I know she was tired. So that was the way we left it, and Mr. Sheldon and I went down to the dining room, where the director, Mr. Henry Kolker, leading man, and the others were already eating like hungry kids just out of school.

When the last scene for the day had been taken, Miss Burke linked her arm in mine and took me back to the dressing room. "I'm going to drive you home," she said. Of course I was willing—more than willing, when, after a tender conversation over the phone with that somebody known as "Flo," she said, in answer to a hinted request, that during the ride she'd tell me just what I wanted to know.

What did I want to know?

That's what you want to know.

I'll tell you—some other time. Watcha de poipuhs!

THE exotic lady of the picture is Madame Theda Bara of the William Fox corporation, who, though she's only been in pictures ten months, has achieved success through her playing of vampire roles. Madame Bara is of French-Russian-Italian descent and was born in Egypt in 1890 on the 20th day of July. She has black hair and green eyes, is five feet six inches tall, and weighs 129 pounds. Before going into pictures she was an actress on the speaking stage, playing principally in the Theatre Antoine, Paris, France. As she is exotic in looks, so are her hobbies and likes. Speaking of likes, she is interested in occultism, green jade, elephants, odd jewels, incense, orchids, music—and ginger beer. Oh you little heathen gods! Her favorite books are "Love and Marriage," by Ellen Keys; "Esoteric Buddhism," by Sennett; Lawrence Hope's "India Love Lyrics"; the works of Oscar Wilde; and so on. When she dances she dances classically. She is also a feminist. Married? Probably, since her title is madame.

Told by the Stars on the Stars

ETHEL BARRYMORE.

Ethel Barrymore, having been born on the fifteenth day of August, comes under the sign of Leo, and Mr. Leo decrees for her that she shall be:

DO HAVE A MILLION DOLLARS

Courageous.

Jovial.

Sympathetic.

Friendly.

Have a perfectly natural bearing and not be scared of anybody.

Have plenty of things to say and know just how to say them.

Go to extremes of both joy and sorrow—and temper.

Naturally liberal.

Vurr funny in imitations of manners and customs.

Not be studious, but observant.

Handy in mechanical matters.

Resent being commanded by others.

Honorable, but often misunderstood.

YOU SHOULD BOSS ME — NOT!

Have a healthy physique and a rich tone of voice.

Walk with a quick, buoyant step.

Wear the sardonyx, her birthstone.

Choose friends among those born between March 22 and April 20 and between Nov. 22 and Dec. 22.

CARLYLE BLACKWELL.

Carlyle Blackwell, handsome hero of the movies, was born on the 20th of January, therefore he comes under the sign of Capricorn, and if he lives according to his sign he:

"I WILL BE A BROTHER TO YOU"

Is a natural leader.

Is vurr independent.

Has great aspirations.

Often undertakes more than he can successfully manage because of lack of attention to detail.

Likes to have things done for him rather than to do for himself.

Has bulldog tenacity—in that he never gives up.

Has an easy manner that is vurr attractive to the ladies.

Loves luxury like an Angora cat.

Loves to do good for those in need.

Is shrewd and a regular David Harum at driving close bargains.

NEVER GIVES UP

Is poor pickin' for the physicians.

Should wear a garnet—that is his birthstone—and try to cultivate friends among those born between April 21 and May 21 and between Aug. 24 and Sept. 23.

MAE TINEE'S ANSWERS TO MOVIE FANS

"ASK ME! ASK ME!"

M. E. R.: My dear, I do not know what makes William Hart so serious. Perhaps he has a secret sorrow which he has not seen fit to tell me. I make a note. I must find out what it is. When I hear the cause of the "sad and pained expression" I will print my knowledge—provided it bears printing. He lives in Los Angeles. He is about 30 years old. He is not married. (That might be the reason.)

A. F.: Lottie Pickford is married. Irving Cummings is about 30 years old. Miss Pickford is quite a good deal younger, I think. If you wish pictures of them you had better write, inclosing 25 cents in stamps. Better not send for Mr. Cummings' picture until you hear just where he is located. He is traveling at the present time. Lottie Pickford is with the American company, Santa Barbara, Cal.

B. G.: In the Famous Players' production "The Foundling" Mary Pickford played the part of Molly O, the foundling; Edward Martindell was David King, Maggie Weston was Mrs. Grimes, Mildred Morris played the part of Jennie, and Marcia Harris was Julia Ember. No trouble at all.

MRS. A. G. J.: I am just as flattered as I can be about your thought that you would rather know about me than movie stars. I can't imagine anybody being in such a frame of mind. My picture has been in the Frame, dear lady, long ago. You are probably right about Betty Nansen. It is a puzzle to me, Mrs. A. G. J. Again I thank you for your words of appreciation.

—IF YOU ARE SURE YOU THROW AWAY MONEY

PERTURBED: I think you are a fink. If you are sure you are throwing away money by attending a school of motion picture acting, what makes you continue to go there? There isn't any United States statute that's compelling you to, is there? No, I don't feel a bit sorry for you. Go ahead and waste your money if you want to. When it is all gone, go out and earn some more. That may do you good.

J. R. R.: Your votes were received and registered. So far as I know her name is the same in private life as in public. Yes, Dustin and William Farnum are brothers. Grace Cunard is about 30 years of age.

LOIS R.: No, Mr. Chaplin is not deaf, for he heard me when I talked to him, and is not dumb, because he talked back to me. Neither is he married (you see, he is practically without affliction of any kind). Francis X. Bushman is married. His middle name is Xavier. Awfully glad you like the Right Off the Reel page. Thank you for telling me that you do.

M. K. W.: Address Marguerite Snow, in care of the Metro company, 1465 Broadway, New York.

MUBBA SHE DO AND MUBBA SHE DON'T

FRITZY: I can't tell you whether or not Marguerite Clarke "fancy dances." Well, mubba she do and mubba she don't. You might write and ask her. Address her in care of the Famous Players company, Los Angeles, Cal. No doubt both she and Mary Pickford will be delighted to know that you are in love with them. Address Mary Pickford also in care of the Famous Players company. Miss Pickford is 22 years old. Marguerite Clarke is about 33. Y'wekkum.

SALLY G.: I wish you had written to me long before if you were so anxious for the information. What was the matter? Do I sound vurr', vurr' fierce? The chap that played opposite Mary Pickford in "The Girl of Yesterday" and in "Mme. Butterfly" was Marshall Neilan. No, his picture has not appeared in the Frame. I have no information regarding his personal affairs. He is with the Famous Players company. You like his stare? Ye gods!

N. E. M.: A letter addressed to Earle Williams in care of the Vitagraph company, East Fifteenth street and Locust avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., will reach him. Y'wekkum.

O. F.: There is a good deal of discussion among the Swedes and Norwegians as to which of them Betty Nansen belongs. The odds point in favor of the Norwegians. What an interesting life you must have had traveling around through the different countries! Miss Nansen is about 28 years old, I understand. Lillian Gish is in her early twenties. She is not married. Address Miss Nansen in care of the Fox Film corporation, 130 West Forty-sixth street, New York.

BUSHMAN FAN: Lavender.

V. D.: The Selig company produced "The House of a Thousand Candles." Here is the cast: Harry Mestayer played the part of Jack Glenarm, Grace Darmond was Marian Evans, John Charles was Arthur Pickering, Mary Robson was Carmen, George Backus was Squire Glenarm, Forrest Robinson played the part of Bates, Edgar Nelson was Larry Donovan, Effingham Pinto was Don José, Emma Glenwood was Theresa Evans, and Gladys Samms played the part of Olivia Evans. Y'wekkum.

JACK L.: The following is the cast of "The Golden Chance": Cleo Ridgely played the part of Mary Denby; Wallace Reid was Roger Manning; Horace B. Carpenter was Steve Denby, Mary's husband; Edythe Chapman played the part of Mrs. Hillary, Ernest Joy was Mr. Hillary, and Raymond Hatton was Jimmy the Rat. 1917?

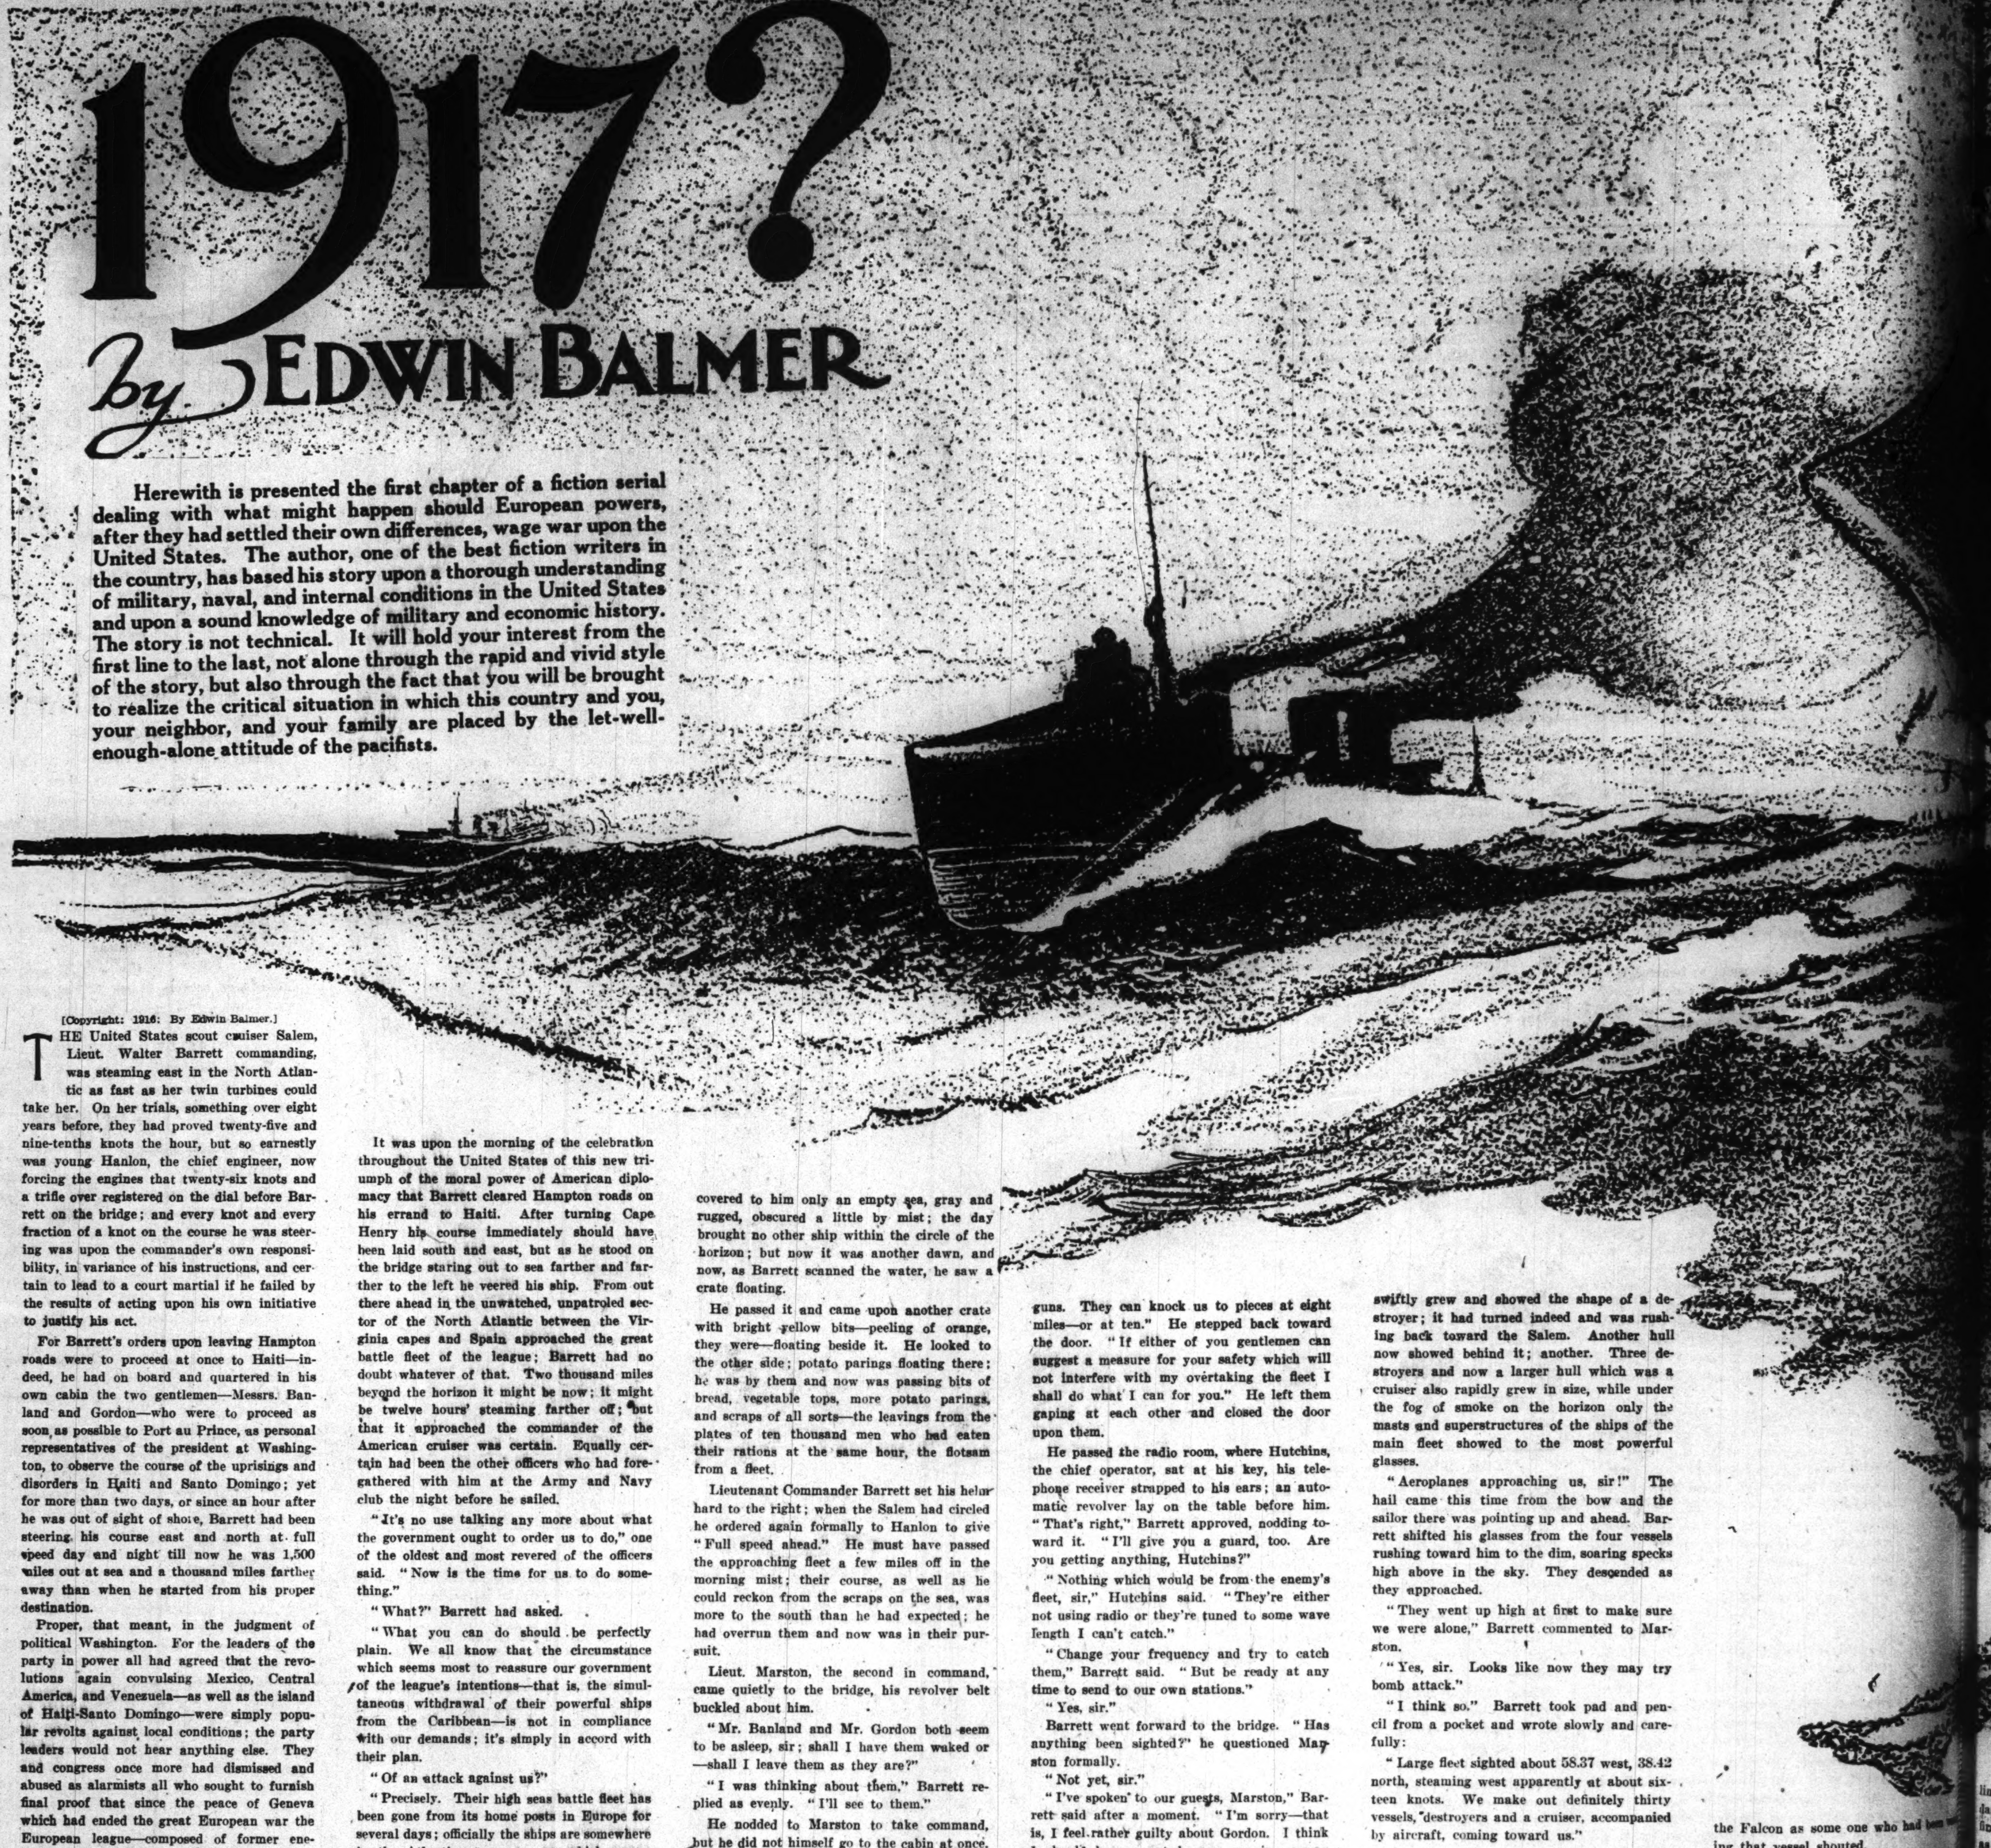
by EDWIN BALMER



Herewith is presented the first chapter of a fiction serial dealing with what might happen should European powers, after they had settled their own differences, wage war upon the United States. The author, one of the best fiction writers in the country, has based his story upon a thorough understanding of military, naval, and internal conditions in the United States and upon a sound knowledge of military and economic history. The story is not technical. It will hold your interest from the first line to the last, not alone through the rapid and vivid style of the story, but also through the fact that you will be brought to realize the critical situation in which this country and you, your neighbor, and your family are placed by the let-well-enough-alone attitude of the pacifists.

THE United States scout cruiser Salem, Lieut. Walter Barrett commanding, was steaming east in the North Atlantic as fast as her twin turbines could take her. On her trials, something over eight years before, they had proved twenty-five and nine-tenths knots the hour, but so earnestly was young Hanlon, the chief engineer, now forcing the engines that twenty-six knots and a trifle over registered on the dial before Barrett on the bridge; and every knot and every fraction of a knot on the course he was steering was upon the commander's own responsibility, in variance of his instructions, and certain to lead to a court martial if he failed by the results of acting upon his own initiative to justify his act.

For Barrett's orders upon leaving Hampton roads were to proceed at once to Haiti—indeed, he had on board and quartered in his own cabin the two gentlemen—Messrs. Banland and Gordon—who were to proceed as soon as possible to Port au Prince, as personal representatives of the president at Washington, to observe the course of the uprisings and disorders in Haiti and Santo Domingo; yet for more than two days, or since an hour after he was out of sight of shore, Barrett had been steering his course east and north at full speed day and night till now he was 1,500 miles out at sea and a thousand miles farther away than when he started from his proper destination.

Proper, that meant, in the judgment of political Washington. For the leaders of the party in power all had agreed that the revolutions again convulsing Mexico, Central America, and Venezuela—as well as the island of Haiti-Santo Domingo—were simply popular revolts against local conditions; the party leaders would not hear anything else. They and congress once more had dismissed and abused as alarmists all who sought to furnish final proof that since the peace of Geneva which had ended the great European war the European league—composed of former enemies—had been acting in concert upon plans for the taking over of certain parts of the Americas; the administration declined to credit any and all information which asserted that the league would seriously attempt to claim colonies in America in defiance of Washington.

Accordingly the American administration had refused to depart from successful precedent in dealing with the troubles in the Caribbean; it had reasserted the Monroe doctrine in stronger and more positive terms than ever before; it had sent the American army to patrol the Mexican border; it had scattered the Pacific warships off Guaymas, Mazatlan, and Acapulco; the Atlantic battleship squadrons—greater in number but with far more coasts to cover—watched Tampico, Vera Cruz, Campeche, Truxilla, Caracas; while a dozen cruisers and destroyers did gunboat duty off the mouths of tropical rivers. In short, the dispersal of the American forces was exactly what the alarmists described as most desired by the leaders of the European league, and the government at Washington had played the political situation most perfectly into their hands.

In Mexico City, in Chihuahua, in Nuevo Leon, and in the interiors of Nicaragua and Venezuela, Europeans as well as Americans had been murdered, their women outraged, their property destroyed without an effective move being permitted to the American forces on the coasts; indeed, so far from ordered relief, the American policy had been effective chiefly in preventing the European commanders from dispatching forces inland to rescue the imperiled, restore order, and establish safe and stable government. According to tradition, Washington not only had refused to act but had refused to allow others to act. At the demand from Washington the foreign ships at last had withdrawn and had left the American war vessels alone to "guard" the Caribbean ports.

It was upon the morning of the celebration throughout the United States of this new triumph of the moral power of American diplomacy that Barrett cleared Hampton roads on his errand to Haiti. After turning Cape Henry his course immediately should have been laid south and east, but as he stood on the bridge staring out to sea farther and farther to the left he veered his ship. From out there ahead in the unwatched, unpatroled sector of the North Atlantic between the Virginia capes and Spain approached the great battle fleet of the league; Barrett had no doubt whatever of that. Two thousand miles beyond the horizon it might be now; it might be twelve hours' steaming farther off; but that it approached the commander of the American cruiser was certain. Equally certain had been the other officers who had foregathered with him at the Army and Navy club the night before he sailed.

"It's no use talking any more about what the government ought to order us to do," one of the oldest and most revered of the officers said. "Now is the time for us to do something."

"What?" Barrett had asked.

"What you can do should be perfectly plain. We all know that the circumstance which seems most to reassure our government of the league's intentions—that is, the simultaneous withdrawal of their powerful ships from the Caribbean—is not in compliance with our demands; it's simply in accord with their plan."

"Of an attack against us?"

"Precisely. Their high seas battle fleet has been gone from its home posts in Europe for several days; officially the ships are somewhere in the Atlantic at maneuvers, which means that they've mobilized, ready for attack on us at signal."

"And the withdrawal of the cruisers from the Caribbean?"

"Means that the cruisers have gone to join the high seas fleet, of course to aid in the attack in force."

"You feel that is sure, sir?"

The older officer referred to the others. "Who questions it now?"

No one questioned, so after putting to sea Barrett had steered his course to the east. The first day showed him nothing to stir him further; but at sunrise of the second day he had sighted a great biplane in the clouds. Instantly he flashed the news back to the shore by wireless; the official reply to him said that the presence of aircraft could now be of no significance. What was the Salem doing in the position from which it signaled? The administration particularly desired the presence of Messrs. Banland and Gordon at Port au Prince as soon as possible.

Barrett, with the code communication in his hand, turned quietly to the quartermaster.

"Follow the plane as long as it is in sight, and when it disappears continue in its direction." He went himself to the telephone to the engine room. "Can you give us any more, Mr. Hanlon?" he questioned the chief engineer.

"I'll try, sir."

Within the hour the biplane had disappeared; but it had remained in sight long enough to guide the Salem. During the remainder of the day the scout ship rushed east at full speed, and at night, with all ports covered and with the switches of the lighting circuits thrown out, Barrett had driven his ship on through the darkness. No light from another ship, no sound of another's engine, no smell of another's smoke had reached him or his lookouts during the night; dawn had discovered to him only an empty sea, gray and rugged, obscured a little by mist; the day brought no other ship within the circle of the horizon; but now it was another dawn, and now, as Barrett scanned the water, he saw a crate floating.

He passed it and came upon another crate with bright yellow bits—peeling of orange, they were—floating beside it. He looked to the other side; potato parings floating there; he was by them and now was passing bits of bread, vegetable tops, more potato parings, and scraps of all sorts—the leavings from the plates of ten thousand men who had eaten their rations at the same hour, the flotsam from a fleet.

Lieutenant Commander Barrett set his helm hard to the right; when the Salem had circled he ordered again formally to Hanlon to give "Full speed ahead." He must have passed the approaching fleet a few miles off in the morning mist; their course, as well as he could reckon from the scraps on the sea, was more to the south than he had expected; he had overrun them and now was in their pursuit.

Lieut. Marston, the second in command, came quietly to the bridge, his revolver belt buckled about him.

"Mr. Banland and Mr. Gordon both seem to be asleep, sir; shall I have them waked or—shall I leave them as they are?"

"I was thinking about them," Barrett replied as evenly. "I'll see to them."

He nodded to Marston to take command, but he did not himself go to the cabin at once. He went first to the forward five inch gun and spoke a few words to the crew.

"If they fire first we fight them, boys," he said simply.

Andrew, the gun pointer, saluted. "Yes, sir," he said for his crew. The others set their lips and met their commander's eyes as he looked to them; Barrett saw that they understood what they would be called upon to do, that they knew they had no chance to survive an action. He went to the after five inch gun and then the round of his six threes. His gun crews and all his men on watch above knew; down in the engine room every one knew also; Barrett was sure of that. He turned and went forward to his cabin, where the two civilian passengers—they were very good friends—both had their quarters. Barrett knocked and Banland, in dressing gown and slippers, shot back the bolt on the door and let him in.

Barrett apologized for disturbing his guests. "We have found traces of a large fleet steaming towards the States," he said. "There can scarcely be question that it is an enemy's fleet—I mean that it is hostile. We will probably overtake it, or come within sight of it, in a couple of hours. It will be my duty to approach close enough to make out the number and class of the ships and report by wireless. We shall probably have time to do that—I mean to send the report by radio—but after we are sighted we have no chance whatever to escape."

"No chance?" Banland repeated, his face chalk white.

"What do you mean?" Gordon demanded.

"There will be at least six ships in the fleet we are following which will be faster and at the same time much more powerful than this vessel," Barrett returned. "I should say there are probably four—certainly two—battle cruisers with them which can go three knots faster than we and which carry fifteen inch guns. They can knock us to pieces at eight miles—or at ten." He stepped back toward the door. "If either of you gentlemen can suggest a measure for your safety which will not interfere with my overtaking the fleet I shall do what I can for you." He left them gaping at each other and closed the door upon them.

He passed the radio room, where Hutchins, the chief operator, sat at his key, his telephone receiver strapped to his ears; an automatic revolver lay on the table before him. "That's right," Barrett approved, nodding toward it. "I'll give you a guard, too. Are you getting anything, Hutchins?"

"Nothing which would be from the enemy's fleet, sir," Hutchins said. "They're either not using radio or they're tuned to some wave length I can't catch."

"Change your frequency and try to catch them," Barrett said. "But be ready at any time to send to our own stations."

"Yes, sir."

Barrett went forward to the bridge. "Has anything been sighted?" he questioned Marston formally.

"Not yet, sir."

"I've spoken to our guests, Marston," Barrett said after a moment. "I'm sorry—that is, I feel rather guilty about Gordon. I think I should have counted upon running across our friends," he nodded quietly into the mists ahead, "and I should have put off Gordon with a boat's crew when we were near shore."

"Why not Banland, too?" Marston asked.

"He was in congress a couple of years ago; he was telling me last night, Marston. Then I remembered him. When we asked for a new scout cruiser with speed enough to let us have a look at an enemy and get away he knocked it out—or was one of them who did—for a new postoffice in Virginia, I believe. It's a very pretty postoffice, I understand, and in twenty or thirty years the village may grow up to it. By the way, Marston, tell Daniels"—he was the chief master-at-arms—"to send a man to guard Hutchins and to shoot at sight any one who goes near the radio without business there. Daniels knows the men; tell him to pick right—for the honor of us all."

"Yes, sir."

Barrett looked down at the bridge dials. "The engines are doing very well," he commented.

"Smoke ahead, sir," a lookout in the foretop hailed.

"Ahead?" Barrett called back, his glasses to his eyes.

"A little to the right, sir. Now there's more to the left!"

"I see it," Barrett said quietly to Marston. "Do you make it out? That must be from several ships."

"I don't make out any aircraft above them. They must be scouting ahead of them again." Marston's glasses were searching the sky.

"Destroyer to the right and turning about, sir!" the lookout overhead hailed again.

Barrett glanced up and followed the direction the man was pointing. Far off on the gray horizon and a little to the right of the Salem's stem a small gray speck which was a ship showed under the haze of smoke. As the Salem rushed toward it the gray spot swiftly grew and showed the shape of a destroyer; it had turned indeed and was rushing back toward the Salem. Another hull now showed behind it; another. Three destroyers and now a larger hull which was a cruiser also rapidly grew in size, while under the fog of smoke on the horizon only the masts and superstructures of the ships of the main fleet showed to the most powerful glasses.

"Aeroplanes approaching us, sir!" The hail came this time from the bow and the sailor there was pointing up and ahead. Barrett shifted his glasses from the four vessels rushing toward him to the dim, soaring specks high above in the sky. They descended as they approached.

"They went up high at first to make sure we were alone," Barrett commented to Marston.

"Yes, sir. Looks like now they may try bomb attack."

"I think so." Barrett took pad and pencil from a pocket and wrote slowly and carefully:

"Large fleet sighted about 58.37 west, 38.42 north, steaming west apparently at about sixteen knots. We make out definitely thirty vessels, destroyers and a cruiser, accompanied by aircraft, coming toward us."

He reread it and handed it to Marston. "Code that and have it sent at once." He gazed again at the aeroplanes and the destroyers and looked back at the engine room dial. It showed revolutions of the turbines which told that the Salem was still making above twenty-six knots; the engine room crew could not be asked to do better, but for what they would be required to do Barrett believed they deserved a word of explanation. He stepped to the engine room telephone and spoke to the chief below.

"Three destroyers and a cruiser—apparently the Falcon or one of her class—are coming for us, Mr. Hanlon. I have just sent word that we have sighted a large fleet. We are going to try to pass the smaller vessels and get as close as possible to make out the main fleet before we sink. If we are unable to signal to you after the action begins keep us full speed ahead as long as you can."

"I understand, sir," Hanlon's voice replied.

The anti-aircraft gun on the forward deck—it was a small quick firer with double telescopic sights—moved as the crew trained it upon the aeroplanes swooping down. The pointer looked back again to the bridge. The planes, which had passed far ahead of the destroyers and of the cruiser, were within extreme range.

"Tell those men they are not to fire under any circumstances until I tell them to; they must not even aim. We are not to start this."

The anti-aircraft quick firer ceased to move. Barrett gazed back at the colors astern; above him also, upon the foremast halyards, the stars and stripes showed plainly in the breeze. The other ships showed no emblem; only under the wings of the aeroplanes a device in the shape of a circle crossed with a bar was painted. The aircraft had come close enough to make it plain. They were perhaps a thousand feet up and twice as far forward of the Salem, but Barrett's gaze abandoned them for the Falcon as some one who had been [illegible] ing that vessel shouted.

For a spot of smoke, appearing [illegible] obscured the cruiser's forward gun [illegible] and two hundred yards ahead of the [illegible] and only slightly to the left of its [illegible] spurt of spray dashed up from the sea; [illegible] other spurt, almost beside the Salem, [illegible] shell ricocheted.

"They started it—without warning!" [illegible] ston cried.

Barrett stared, his eyes glowing, his [illegible] tight pressed. A second sudden [illegible] the Falcon's forward gun dimmed its [illegible] hundred yards closer to the Salem, but [illegible] a little to the left, the shell shrieked [illegible] sea.

"Fire!" Barrett cried. "Give it to [illegible] O, give it to them!" He turned to [illegible] restrained. "Code 'The Falcon has [illegible] upon us,' and get it off quick."

The clatter of the forward [illegible] made his shout almost unheard. At the [illegible] shell from the Falcon the crew had [illegible] the gun upon the nearest of the [illegible] planes. The forward five inch [illegible] deeper and slower reply. It did not [illegible] to reach the enemy's cruiser; the [illegible] using its nine inch rifles, was [illegible] Salem from far beyond the extreme [illegible] the American fives; but the destroyers, [illegible] er even than the Falcon, were close, [illegible] the nearest of the three torpedo [illegible] Salem was sending its shells. They [illegible] close, the spray spurting up white [illegible] first destroyer; and now following [illegible] there showed no spray, the proof of a [illegible]

A cheer, a wild, exultant shout, [illegible] from the American gun positions; [illegible] shock—a disruption which deadened [illegible] rett all sensation after his gasp and [illegible] the blinding yellow flash before [illegible] the cheer and muted the guns [illegible] instant. Barrett stood a moment [illegible] that he had been crushed, beaten [illegible] mighty blow which struck head, [illegible] limbs equally, that he had been battered and dashed down, smothered and broken, was the first consciousness which returned to him; but as he sought to scramble up, as he struggled and groped with hands to clasp something which would pull him to his feet, he discovered after a moment that he was standing, that he had not been knocked down, and now he could be conscious of seeing, of feeling the bridge rail with his fingers, of hearing the sound of firing again; he could even think once more.

A high explosive shell—one of the nines from the Falcon—had struck and burst on the deck below him; Barrett gazed down dizzily. The long brown barrel of his forward five inch rifle pointed straight ahead and at the elevation for long range firing; but as he watched to see it recoil and for the yellow puff of powder gases to mushroom from the muzzle the gun remained motionless, silent. Barrett's gaze shifted down the barrel to the gun shield and then behind it.

The legs of a man lay under the breech of the gun—the legs, nothing more; they lay very still; but beside them something squirmed. It was not the other half of Andrew—Barrett knew now that the legs were of the gun pointer to whom he had spoken and who had replied to him half an hour before—for the squirming mass possessed a leg; a little further off the gun, to the right, something else lay which no longer was a man but which could not be called anything else. As Barrett saw it it seemed to cease to move. On the gun shield, on the deck, elsewhere about lay horrid bits, a reeking, ghastly splatter. Barrett gazed back to the gun. The breech was open, a charge was in place; when the shell from the Falcon destroyed the crew the gun had been almost ready to fire. The seeing of this stirred Barrett wildly; in a daze, half in stupor still from the shock of the shell, he had gazed upon his first dead, but the sight had served only to keep him stunned, nerveless; but now the view of the gun, the gun needing only the turn of the breech block and a finger on the firing button, roused him to action. He shouted aloud; his first start—he was still dizzy—was himself to rush down to the gun, himself to shove the breech block home and lock it, push the firing button, and send the shell to the Falcon and kill them there, kill them all as they had killed his men.

But now, with the appearing of the relief gun crew, Barrett more completely regained himself. Some one already was closing and locking the breech; beside the legs of Andrew another gun pointer stood, his hand moving the lever to lay the gun again on its target. Two of his mates, standing in the ghastly splatter, were bringing the next cartridge; two others were thrusting aside the thing which had ceased to squirm, and two more—Barrett recognized them as of the doctor's detail—were lifting up and carrying the bloody mass, which still moved, down to the lazaret.

The gun fired and was loaded again, but Barrett was himself and watched it no longer; he refrained even from following the course of the shot; it had ceased to affect him now, as his ship was hit again somewhere farther forward, that more of his men were killed and their mates, appearing to take their places, were picking up bodies and casting them into the sea. For Barrett remembered now that his ship was fighting chiefly because it was better for his men to die that way than to be slaughtered without fighting; they were all to die; he was to die with them in a moment; there was no possible chance for their guns to save them; fighting at best could serve to delay the delivering of a torpedo from the destroyers or of bombs from the aeroplanes which otherwise might sink the Salem a few minutes earlier than the guns of the far off Falcon could do the work.

Barrett lifted his glasses again to his eyes and gazed steadily at the shapes of the ships showing far ahead under the haze of smoke. The engine room dial before him showed the same number of revolutions of the turbines which had registered before the shells from the Falcon had struck; the Salem was still keeping its pace, it was overtaking the enemy's main squadrons, and Barrett could begin at least to guess at the number of the battle units.

For a few minutes after the first two hits the gunners of the Falcon had not shortened their range as rapidly as their ship and the Salem were approaching each other, and so, for those moments, the nine inch shells had been passing overhead; now they were hitting again, but still a little high. They passed through the funnels, piercing without exploding; they swept away stanchions, boats, and davits. Now they shortened the range properly and were firing; spray—a white, vicious wave—spurted from the sea directly ahead; the shell, on the ricochet, struck the side of the Salem glancingly and did not burst, but the next struck fair and square at the bow and went through, and the forecastle deck erupted upward as the shell exploded below.

Flame and smoke followed, and Barrett's glasses, focused on the fleet far, far ahead, were useless. He gazed overhead and saw that the masts of his ship still stood and the wires of the radio still were horizontal from fore to aftermast; he stepped to the telephone circuit which communicated with the foretop and fastened the receiver over his ears.

"What do you make of them, Mr. Griswold?" he said to the boy officer in command there.

"Twenty-two dreadnaughts, I think, sir; five squadrons of four ships each," the boy's voice came to Barrett steadily. "Four ships of the Zeus class, six of the Trajan, four of the Pharoah, six of the Sargon class—I can see their masts very plainly—and the others look like the Thor. Four may be battle cruisers of the Carthage class, but I can't say about that at all, sir; they are farthest away."

"And the rest?" Barrett asked.

"Twenty-six more in sight, sir, seem to be cruisers, colliers, and destroyers."

Barrett took the telephone receivers from his ears and, seizing his pad, he wrote the figures in code. The ships, as the boy had seen them, agreed with his own guess of their number and their power. Griswold had been in the best place to see and Barrett had stationed him there because of his coolness and keenness of sight. Another shell from the Falcon had struck and burst at the bow while he had been talking with the foretop; now another pierced the Salem's side; its eruption smothered for an instant the flames which the shell the minute before had started; then the blaze leaped hotter and higher from the crater below the deck, but Barrett, his message coded, gave no thought now to the hull of his ship; the destruction of that he had conceded long before; he looked up aloft to the wires of the radio, and, seeing they still remained, he choked in thanks to God. He looked back to where, amidship, the radio apparatus was housed; that, too, still seemed safe. He caught at Marston, who somehow still was beside him, though every one else had vanished from the bridge. Marston seized the message without waiting for command and hurried away.

"Come back—come back, Billy, when it's sent and tell me that it's done!" Barrett cried after him.

Marston disappeared. Barrett turned back to the battle. So far as power to fight was left to the Salem the battle seemed over. Between the shock of the shells from the Falcon and their awful burst below Barrett heard only the noise of his anti-air craft rifles; only the machine guns in the tops still were keeping up the fight; on the deck and below and forward, where the Salem had been exposed to the Falcon's fire, was all death and ruin; the relief crew of the forward five lay before Barrett, slaughtered; one boy only—a boy with an arm all shattered at his side, struggled to his feet and tugged helplessly with one hand at the breech block. The forward threes which had come in action also were still; where one of them had been all the side of the ship had been shot away; smoke and flames concealed the position of the other—flames through which men, writhing and screaming, staggered up from below, men burned save where the blood of a wound burst through the sear of a burn and spurted crimson over the black flesh; men blinded so lately that in the light of day on the deck they groped for the sides of the inky companionway which still seemed to shut them in and cried to their fellows to lead them up—to bring them up to the light.

Barrett saw them and shut his eyes for a moment and was dizzy again. His hand was on the indicator, which he had set to put his helm hard to the right, to turn his ship away from the shells instead of running into them still, to attempt to flee at last. He could feel his ship sheering now, but as he turned it the hideous uselessness of his attempting to get away assailed him. He could not strike his colors and surrender; the enemy, if he signaled them with the white flag for mercy, would still keep up their fire. They knew that he had not pursued them to engage them, but to discover their force and flash the warning to the shore; they would look upon the sign of surrender now as a ruse to save his ship while it could dispatch his warning; and, in fact, if he struck his colors now that would be so; at this moment his message was being dispatched. Might it not be better then to rush in to close range of the guns of the Falcon and, after his warning had been sent, let them sink his ship with merciful swiftness than to double or triple the torture of his men by attempting to flee?

His ship was broadside to the Falcon, and, as he wavered, the detonation of the discharge of his after five inch gun and now the firing of the after threes decided him. They had been protected before from the shells of the Falcon, and now, exposed and brought to bear, they flashed into action. Barrett sustained his signal to the helmsman; it was useless to flee, but, with stern toward the enemy, at least he still could fight a few minutes longer, and, as he gazed over the sea he observed that the first of the enemy's destroyers had rushed in too close; its commander, believing the American ship was completely incapable of defense, had been closing to deliver the quick coup de grace of torpedo attack. The shells from the Salem's after five caught this craft full and fairly; one, two, three—Barrett, with tingling elation, watched his shells strike. Steam—a great, white cloud puffed up from amidships the destroyer; its bow went down and, as its consort ships swerved, it began to sink.

The obliteration of the men at the after five was the Falcon's instant answer, and flames, with men contorted in agony on the after deck, as the shells burst below it as the Salem fled. Barrett, turning on his bridge, looked back toward the stern. Marston appeared below; he caught at the rail and clambered up; stumbled, fell down, clambered up again, and gained the bridge. Barrett caught him and held him; Marston choked and could not speak. Barrett's arm about him found a great hole in his side; a piece of shell had struck Marston in the lungs; the blood was strangling him, in Barrett's arms.

"What is it, Billy?" Barrett was begging him. "What is it?"

Marston could make no reply. Barrett pleaded with him; it was to the wireless cabin that Marston had gone from Barrett with the warning for which all were giving their lives. Had Marston been wounded beside the radio instruments? Had the shell which struck him burst there and destroyed the sending coils at the same time? Was it that which Marston had come back to tell? Barrett put the question. Marston shook his head. It was not that, so it must be the other; the message was sent; it had gone; Hutchins had got it to Washington; the nation now knew! That was what Marston had brought himself back to say. Barrett remembered now the last thing he had said to Marston. "You mean it's sent, Billy?" he cried. "You came back to tell me it's gone?"

Marston choked as he tried to reply; he could not speak, but his nod answered for him and his eyes—the eyes of a man a moment before death, defiant, bold, triumphant. Marston's eyes closed, then opened again, and looked past Barrett to the sea where, far off still, the Falcon was firing; a shell from the Falcon struck somewhere astern, but at its havoc Marston smiled as he looked back to Barrett once more. "They can kill us, but we've beaten them!" his smile said as plainly as words to his commander. "They can kill us, but we've done what we've come to do!"

Barrett laid him down. Forward and aft the Salem was in flames, its deck blown up, the sides gaping. Toward the bow, before Barrett had given the order to flee, everything had been shot away. Now the after five inch rifle leered, half dismounted; the after threes had ceased to sound; their crews, with the men who had tried to relieve them, lay strewn, dead, dismembered—a few of them still heaving in agony. Some of these gazed up at their commander, and Barrett, seeing them, at first recoiled from their eyes; then he went among the men.

"They can kill us, but we have beaten them!" he read in their eyes as he had read in Marston's. "They can kill us, but we've done what we've come to do!"

Barrett stood straight, with head erect, so that his men who still might see him could know, before they died, that they had triumphed. He turned as, after the shock of the next shell from the Falcon bursting within the hull, he realized that some one had come up beside him. It was the chief quartermaster, Daniels, whom he had ordered to detail a guard for Hutchins, the wireless operator. The quartermaster, like Barrett, was still unhurt; he stood stiff as he saluted.

"What is it?" Barrett challenged him.

"Sir, Mr. Hutchins was a spy!"

"What?"

"Sir, I found he was flashing the spark with the switch thrown out between the transmitter and the aerial wires."

"What?"

"I shot him, sir. But before I could kill him he smashed the condensers. Mr. Spurstow is working to fix them now. He sent me to report, sir, that he believed no message which was ordered has been sent."

The blood throbbed dazedly in Barrett's brain.

"Hutchins was a spy!"

That spies were enlisted, that there might be a spy on his ship, Barrett had known well. To guard against a spy Barrett had told Daniels to station the guard at the radio instruments; and Daniels had chosen to stand guard there himself. He had served to protect the operator; but it was the operator himself who was the spy! As soon as the master-at-arms had seen this he had shot Hutchins. Spurstow, the relief operator, who had been kept below to be called if Hutchins were hurt, was working to repair the apparatus which Hutchins had destroyed. But now—now what could he do? By a miracle, it seemed to Barrett, his masts and the radio wires stretched between them still remained; at any instant now, with the striking of the next shell in ten or twenty seconds, a mast might go, all the radio installation be destroyed; if they were left undamaged to the end the ship could not last many more minutes.

Barrett gasped before the master-at-arms "How long——" He started to ask the time which Spurstow might need to repair or replace the condensers, but Barrett stopped. It made no difference now how long it might take, it was the only thing now to do; to try to repair the radio and to keep the ship afloat as long as might be.

"Go back to Mr. Spurstow," Barrett commanded the master-at-arms "and tell him I understand; I'll do for him all I can."

But, as Barrett went back to the bridge, he knew there was nothing he could do which might help. If he could gather a gun crew from the men yet unhurt and from the wounded there was no rifle, except one machine gun in the foretop, which still could be served. And the enemy knew this. The two remaining destroyers, warned by the fate of the first which had rushed too close when the Salem turned, had dropped away from effective gunfire, but now, certain that all danger from the Salem was over, they were rushing in again with bow torpedoes ready. Over them the Falcon maintained its murderous fire. Only a miracle with the engines—a gain of knots over anything they had ever done—could possibly save the Salem. Barrett gazed down with wonder at the dial registering what the engines were doing. Still at the revolutions which meant twenty-six knots! They could not yet have been reached by a shell; they must be undamaged; but to hold that pace through the battle with the ship blown to pieces above! It meant that every fireman down in the stoke hold, every oiler, every man in the engine crew shut in far below the water line, was in his place; every man was doing his duty—and more. It was madness and worse to ask them to attempt still more; Barrett knew this as he took the telephone to speak to his chief engineer.

"Mr. Hanlon," he said, "can you give us any more?"

"More, sir?" Hanlon's voice came back without complaint. He had been doing the superhuman throughout the fight, but he knew that his commander must be facing the more than human himself to ask it of another. "I'll give you all I've got, sir."

What it was that Hanlon did down there below, what he had left yet to give, Barrett could not know. Only, as he gazed again at the dial, he saw that somehow the chief engineer was forcing his turbines to swifter revolutions. The magnificent uselessness of it brought the blood pricking through Barrett's veins; he had called upon the engine room, as he had called upon his guns, to make the last atom of effort which might chance to delay even for a few seconds longer the certain fate of the scout ship, but doom now could not be kept away. One to the right, the other to the left, the enemy's destroyers were coming up very fast; the Falcon, too, was closer, and following each spot of haze before its guns a shell struck and burst within the American ship. Yet, were the ship only a few knots faster, Barrett knew he could still get away; he could have viewed the enemy's fleet and might bring off his ship safe. But now!

How I Paid my Way into English High Society

by Mary Isabel Brush

Herewith is presented the last installment of a remarkable series recounting the actual experiences of an American woman in buying her way into the society of English nobility. The articles were written shortly before the war broke out.

Miss Brush prepared this series at the expense of and under the direction of the Saturday Evening Post, but the breaking out of the war prevented publication at the appointed time, and recently "The Chicago Tribune" bought all the rights of the series from the Saturday Evening Post. Miss Brush for some years has been a contributor to "The Tribune" under the pen name of "Mme. Y."

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE.

In previous installments Miss Brush related how she inserted an advertisement in a London newspaper stating that she was prepared to pay for the services of a professional chaperon who would introduce her to British royalty. From among several titled women who answered her advertisement she selected the Countess of Balmoral. The Countess stated her price for presentation at court and the season leading up to it as $5,000. Miss Brush demurred on the expenditure, and agreed on various sums of five to twenty pounds sterling each for invitations to teas, lawn parties, dinners, motor trips, and entertainments at baronial estates. She went to a tea on Carlton terrace and at several entertainments, where she met persons more or less distinguished by royalty—all of whom were about equally dull, listless, insipid, and impecunious. A Miss Sommers, whose letter proposing to introduce Miss Brush to royalty sounded good, asked Miss Brush to come to see her for arrangements. Miss Sommers told Miss Brush she should by all means be presented at court, and said she would like to chaperon her for nothing, "but she was dreadfully hard up." Without making any definite arrangements with Miss Sommers. Miss Brush accepted Lady Balmoral's offer to take her to an entertainment at which His Serene Highness Prince Alexander of Teck and his wife, Princess Alexander, were to be present. The price was ten pounds, which Lady Balmoral insisted should be sent her at once. When the money had been forwarded Lady Balmoral told Miss Brush she might bring along any of her American friends she wished. Acting on the suggestion, she got a friend, a Harvard graduate, to accompany her in the party, which included Lady Balmoral and Lord Duffering. They had just arrived at the low Norman house on the countryside when the last installment closed.

THE groups surrounding the receiving line were sparse and amiable, whereas the throng in the tea tent was all but rioting. Lady Balmoral had no trouble, however, in securing satisfactory accommodations in front of the strawberries. The rest of us, from the outskirts, secured a glass of claret and an occasional cooky as they were passed.

When we returned to the lawn the receiving party had broken up. Lady Balmoral said in a low voice to Lord Duffering that we could not go round in a great party, and that he should take care of some one whose name I did not hear. He straightway went off by himself to the place set with high backed chairs and a raised dais where a placard proclaimed that performing geese would do a marathon. The earl and countess lost themselves among the groups. The English girl and I were left to follow the dictates of our own hearts. She said: "Shall we take a walk?"

We passed the house, where we saw the dining room door placarded with a painted sign in black, amateurish letters on yellow cardboard, "Private." The prince and the princess were having their tea. The walk ran into the gravel path, which became the oak lined river lane. The spongy earth gave under our feet as we followed its moist course on and on. My companion became confidential with that curious way English girls have of looking so reserved and all of a sudden handing out the most astonishing secrets, such as their loathing for their parents and their unfortunate entanglement with some one who belongs to another.

COMPANION BECOMES CONFIDENTIAL.

Why did I wish to enter English society? She desired nothing so much as to get out. She did toe dancing and would love to perform professionally, but she would rather marry and raise a family. There was so much night work in going 'round socially.

I thought of the button makers of Muscatine, Ia., and inquired whether she had an eight hour law. She had not the faintest idea of what I meant, and she commented on what was in her thoughts. She had seen me talking so earnestly at the luncheon to the member of parliament and she wondered what the conversation was about. I tried to recall it, but was distracted by her utterances. He was at that boarding house because she was here. Her mother was Lady Something, but it was not a powerful title—only a little distinction conferred on her for being the wife of some one in the army. I think that was the way of it.

Of course her mother wished her chaperoned by some one of greater social name, who might put her in the position of making a distinguished marriage. A member of parliament did not seem good enough to her mother, especially since he had absolutely made his own way. Her mother wished some one with more history back of him. Still, Lady Balmoral knew and did not interfere. The member of parliament paid enormous board money, besides being nice in many ways to the countess. My sponsor evidently did not care from how many sides she took money and she would even use her influence to further some good end, such as a marriage for love, if she but turned a dishonest penny by it.

MEETS AN ACQUAINTANCE.

My main attention clung to the business of the day, and I thought the guests of honor must have resumed their places in the receiving line. We turned into a path that presently brought us on to the lawn near the performing geese. A number was just completed, whereupon the royal visitors got up from their seats in the front row to return to their posts.

The earl and the countess were nowhere to be seen. I followed my prey for a distance and sank on to a bench near the receiving line. The next moment a catastrophe long feared befell me. I saw some one I knew. A charming Englishwoman with whom I was acquainted stood over me.

THE ENGLISH GIRL

"Well! How do you do?" she said, and introduced her companion. He was a rather big man in England and, as I am going to quote him presently, I regret that his name must be withheld. "You are the last person I should have expected to see here."

"You are quite right. I am in a thoroughly uncharacteristic situation."

"Well, come on and meet the princess and you'll feel better."

I gazed across the green at the spectacle and was filled with a sudden resentment. One woman after another dropped a deep curtsy as she passed. Why should I, a free agent, bend the knee to that other woman, who was pretty, but not pretty enough; good, but no better than the best, and totally without those transcendent qualities that would draw us voluntarily to our knees? If the human being is so forlorn a creature as to demand a symbolical object before which to precipitate himself, how can any of his kind be so without humor as to lend himself to be the object symbolized?

"Thank you very much," I answered my friend. "I think I will not meet the guests of honor."

Even as I spoke something leaped up in me to make a silent protest that I would. Come to England on an errand that involved meeting some one designated as royal highness and walk away without meeting her! Shades of the great men who had troubled themselves to train me! I read in their averted eyes my expatriation. Still, to meet their highnesses through this unimplicated agent would have no significance.

LADY BALMORAL DEFIANT.

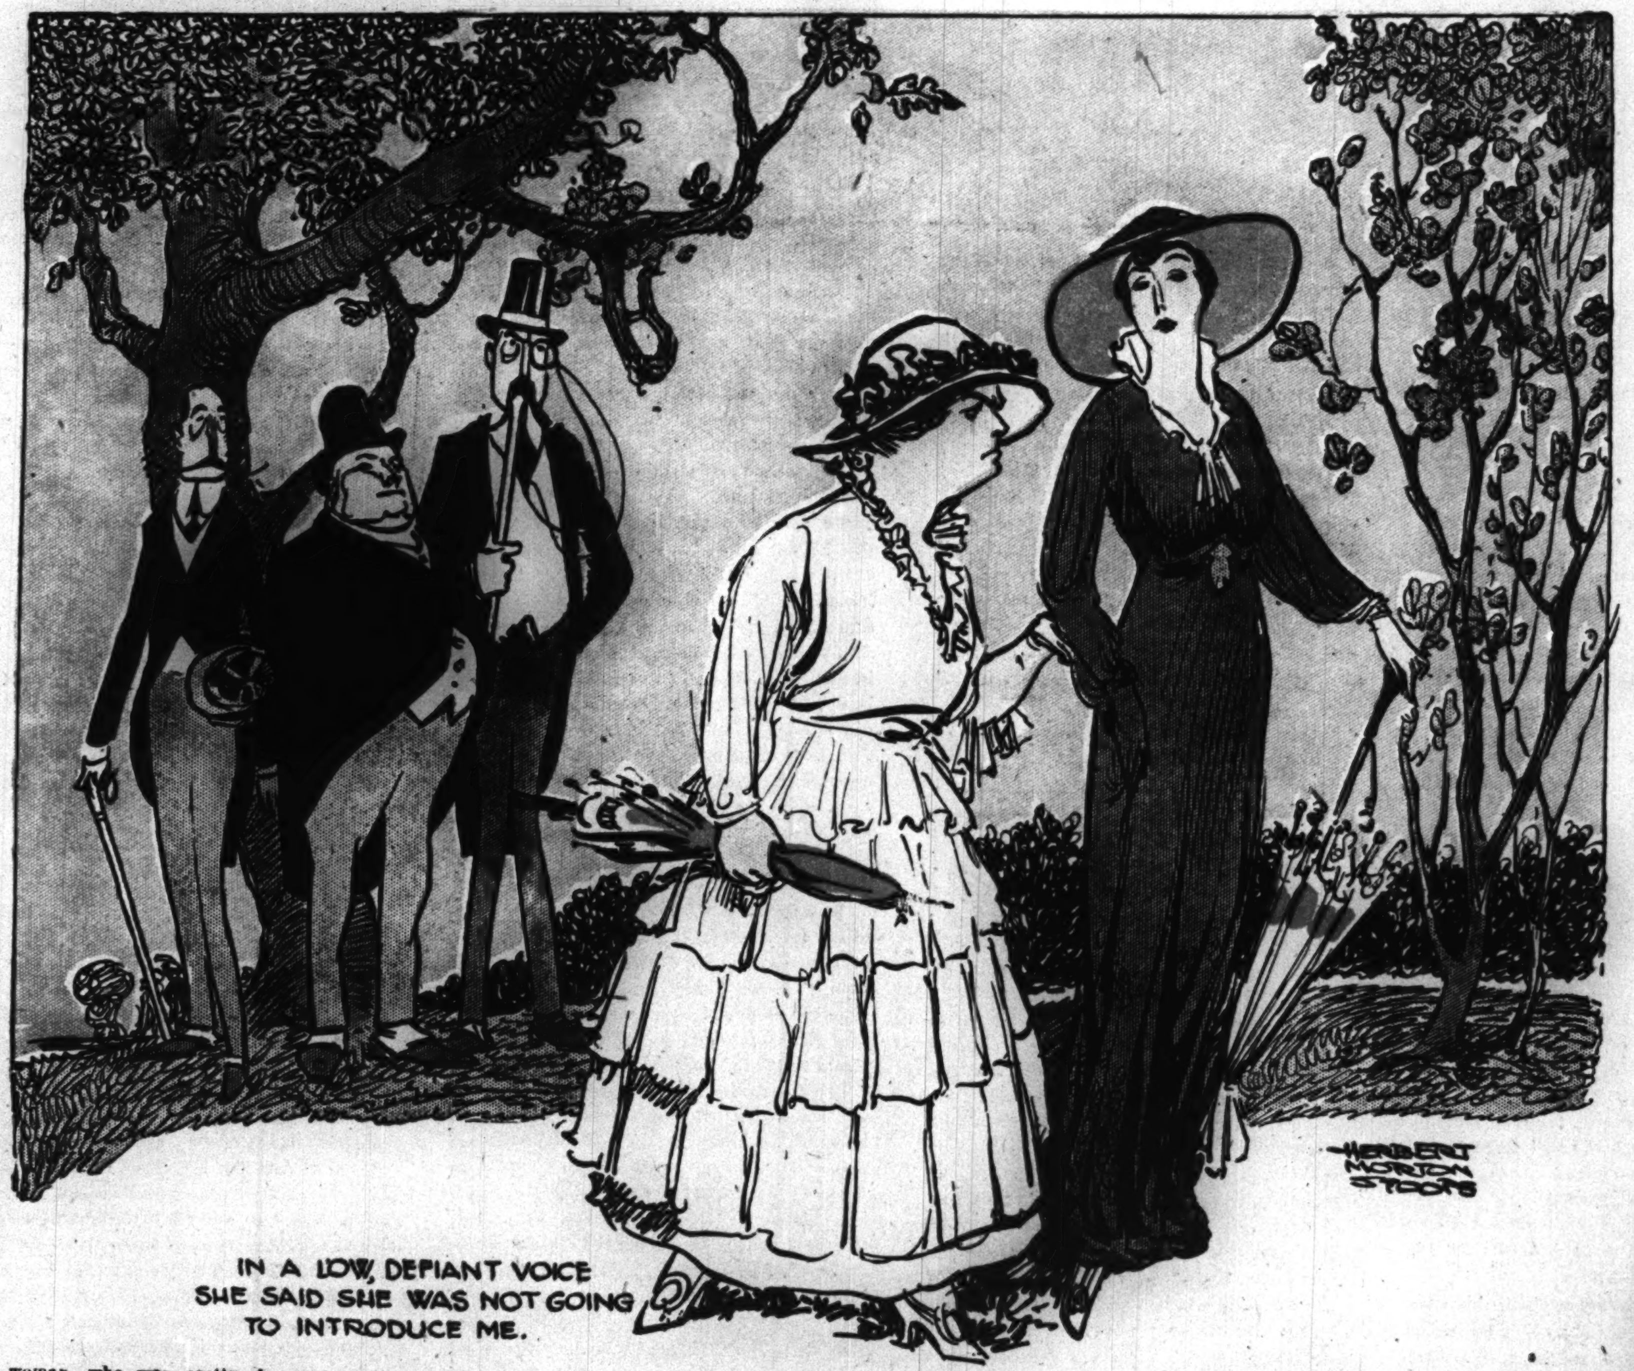
I hurried away in search of my paid sponsor. She was standing under an oak tree talking to an earl, an honorable, and a duke. I said to her that I was ready to meet the royal guests. The rose tint went out of her face, which changed and hardened into an expression that was not pretty. Putting her hand on my elbow, she steered me to the edge of the shade. In a low, defiant voice she said she was not going to introduce me. I had suspected as much for upward of an hour.

The mystery that regulated her previous actions was explained. All the minor faculties for success were hers, such as precaution, talent for detail, coordination. She would make an excellent mistress of a boarding house or head of an office routine force; but she was without the investigative and the imaginative senses. Nothing had ever called her attention to the probing of the regulations governing the payment of checks. She grew a little insolent as she stood facing me at the edge of the shade cast by the oak tree.

"It wasn't in the agreement that I should introduce you. I only guaranteed to get you here."

"This is no time," I answered, quite without anger, "for discussing what you agreed to do; but, as a matter of fact, if you don't introduce me to the guests of honor I will cable to Vincent Astor to stop payment on that check." My sponsor's expression told that she had not known such a thing could be done. "I know Mrs. Astor, too. When she goes over that batch of checks—as, of course, she will—she will say: 'Why did Mary Isabel Brush make out one of these to Lady Balmoral for $48.80?' And she will think a minute. Then she will add, reflectively: 'And, having made it out, why does she stop payment on it?' The making of a scandal is put into a third person's hands right away."

The countess knew that her hour had come. She wasted no words, but, with set, white looks and businesslike manner started with me toward the line. That $48.80 must not be allowed to escape her. When we were within twenty-five feet of the royal party we swerved and made as though to attack it from behind. A friend of the countess stood between the receiving line and the house. She was chatting with some one, but the countess forever put an end to that visit with a stressed:



IN A LOW, DEFIANT VOICE SHE SAID SHE WAS NOT GOING TO INTRODUCE ME.

"Lady Egbert, come here! This is Miss Brush. Will you introduce her to the princess?"

BEFORE WHOM THE PEOPLE BOW.

In three minutes the deed was done. I met two very agreeable and refined looking people who gave the impression that they would be nice neighbors if the opportunity were theirs to prove their worth in back yard acquaintanceships and the all night vigils of illness, but they have not this privilege. They have been set apart in the little group before whom the British people prostrate themselves, because one of this couple is the brother of the woman who has been married by arrangement, and not by the triumph of her charms, to a man representing power. He succeeds from an ancient line whose might gave them a scepter that their people gloried in having them wield.

He in this generation still holds a scepter. His people, like those of the early kings, have placed it in his hands. It is exactly like the old one, which his subjects have had copied, but it is of papier-maché. His early predecessors made their government, but he does not even head his. He wears their ancient robes, sits on their coronation chair, bears their titles, but his occupations are not the same.

He opens grammar schools, punches electric buttons in the ceremonial of starting vast new machinery, travels through Scotland, reading typewritten speeches that are handed him, and for a few months of every year sets the official sanction of Great Britain on the season's output of débutantes. American young women, like some of our other domestic products, may get the imported label for a price. Canned goods made in Ohio and champagne made in California are sent across the ocean, stamped there with a pretty seal, and accepted again by a certain class of our people as superfine.

I was made in Indiana, but for $5,000 and an endless amount of trouble—an important part of which consist in kicking 'round several miles of train during a long afternoon—I too, could get the official impress and sanction of Great Britain stamped on me. He who puts it there is supposed to be invested with vast authority and—as a tributary dignity—rank. The authority has all slipped away long since, and now certain of us are engaged in glorifying the rank which drew its value only from the thing that is gone.

In my experimental introduction to royalty, of course, I behaved with all the subservience demanded by precedent, and because life delights to supply appropriately ironical details for large dramatic occasions, the date of this comedy chanced to be July 4. I told the countess, who was waiting as undisturbed as though no misunderstanding had arisen, that I thought I should take an earlier train than hers. We said good-by as casually as though we expected to meet again.

NO SALES PERMITTED AT COURT.

Before leaving the grounds I ran across the man my friend had introduced to me.

"It's a curious thing," I said, "this business of rank and royalty. I even hear introductions are bought and sold."

"Yes, there's a woman here—Lady Balmoral—who deals in them. The king is quite provoked about it."

"The king! He actually and definitely knows?" The man nodded. "And yet does not put her out of business?"

"He has restricted her."

"Restricted? He lets her sell only a certain number—is that it?"

"No, indeed; he has told her she must not sell any at court, and he allows her to introduce only two people—a relative and one close friend."

Severe and effectual punishment for so grave a blow at British dignity! It is akin to the masterly methods employed with the militants! Not delicacy of feeling but actual economic danger explained my sponsor's hesitation to present me to one bearing a royal title.

"The king knows," I repeated, "and yet does not put her out of business?"

"Just what could he do? You see, that is an old and dignified title and has never been in the courts."

"You mean that no one of the name has, as yet, been divorced?"

He nodded. If such are the basic laws of merit, what are the arguments? I was glad the task was completed which had ceased to be amusing or instructive—that it, I was under the impression that it was finished. The next day, however, a telephone message came to the hotel that the countess wished to see me. I took myself unenthusiastically that night to her residence to discover what she desired. She was not very cordial. Mrs. Sommers had telephoned to say I had engaged her to take me 'round and had given the countess as reference. The countess replied that I was going with her. Mrs. Sommers said:

"No—she came to me; and, though I am too sick to take her often, I said I thought she ought to appear with different ones, and I would arrange that. I have secured Lady Constance Ray."

The countess answered that I had already started with her, and Mrs. Sommers commented that you had to watch these Americans, because they were tricky and went 'round getting one chaperon to bid against another so they could secure their introductions inexpensively.

I satisfied the countess that a mistake had been made, whereupon she turned on her agreeable manner.

"Lady Constance, you know," she confided, "can't get the invitations. Last year she had somebody and got her invited out only twice. She and the girl she took out don't speak now." But this was beside the main question. "Now, about taking tea on the terrace of parliament on Monday—could you bring me £10?"

I made it quite clear I could not and I said I had decided to abandon my introduction into British society. I then saw the full scope of her native agreeableness as practiced. She turned white and took on her look of age.

"American!" she snarled at me.

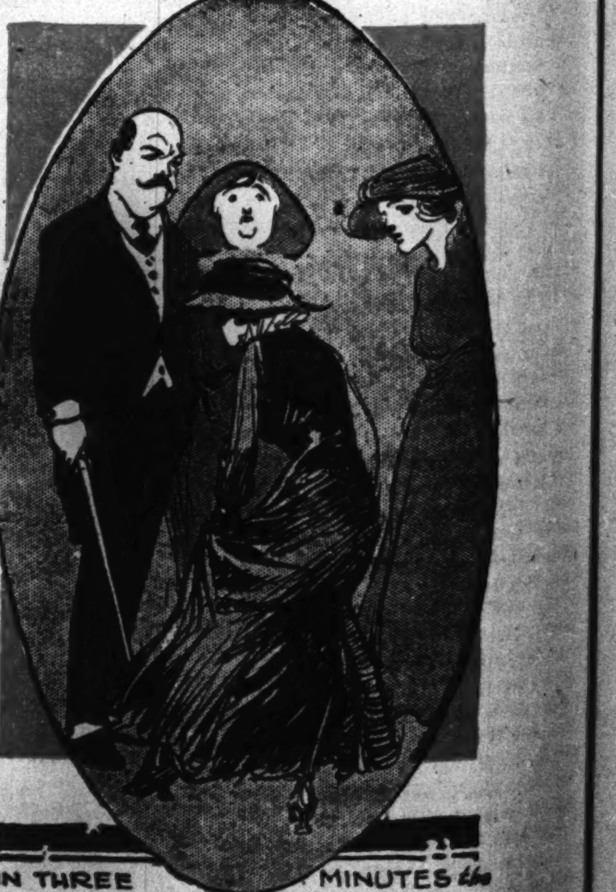
"I will go," I said.

As she did not bid me good-by or ring for a man, I made my way down the unlit staircase and through the complex hallway to the door. I was several minutes in finding the way, but she did not reconsider and send one of her eleven servants whose salaries I had paid for the week. With the aid of my own little electric pocket lamp I got the door unfastened and went out into the drizzling rain.

No light had issued from the doorway, with the result that the taxicab chauffeur did not see me when I left the house. He was standing a quarter of a block down the street and I went to him through the dampness and the dark.

The next day I received the parting communication of the countess. She left word at the hotel, with the manager, whom she called by telephone, that, as she did not know me, she desired that I should not use her name as reference.

I left word for her that my experience had been most satisfactory and I wished to express my thanks.



IN THREE MINUTES the DEED WAS DONE.

Once in a while I receive a letter from her imploring me to explain why I wished those introductions—did it have anything to do with the king?—but I have not answered up to now.

The BLACK PEARL by MRS. WILSON WOODROW

"If You'd Been the Sort of Girl You Ought to Be You Wouldn't Have Stayed a Minute Longer in That Cabin Than You Could Have Helped. What Made You Stay Up There? You and Him, Too," Gallito Pointed One, Long, Gnarled Forefinger at Seagreave.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

At Paloma, Hanson, theatrical magnate, meets and falls in love with Pearl Gallito, the Black Pearl, a dancer whom he wants to put on the stage. He incurs the enmity of Hughie, her brother, her father, and Bob Flick, a suitor of Pearl's, who looks up Hanson's record and finds that he has a wife living in Colina. Hanson luckily also "gets something on them"—that they are concealing Crop Eared José, a fugitive from justice. The three are ignorant of Hanson's knowledge. Pearl, infatuated with Hanson, refuses to give him up in spite of his wife—that is, until Hanson makes a fearful break by inferring that her nickname, "The Black Pearl," refers to her character, not her coloring. Before this she was ready to elope and sign a contract with him. Afterward she scorns him and goes away to Colina to forget. Still, she refuses to sign a contract with Sweeney, rival theatrical man. In Colina she practices her dances, but fails to forget Hanson, who persistently communicates with her through Mrs. Gallito. In Colina she meets Crop Eared José, Mrs. Nitschkan, Mrs. Thomas, and Harry Seagreave—"Saint Harry"—who interests her. Hanson, desperate, meets Pearl at Colina. Pearl discovers she no longer loves him and says so. Hanson swears revenge—plans to send the sheriff after Crop Eared José. This he does. But the posse is frustrated through the efforts of Seagreave, whom Pearl really loves now, and Gallito and Flick. José is taken to a mountain hiding place, Seagreave and Pearl following. While there a snowslide takes place, preventing their escape for two weeks. This results in mutual love.

CHAPTER XV.

THE sun flooded hillside showed plainly the path of the avalanche; blank, featureless it lay, without sheltering tree or rock to diversify its bald monotony. But it was bare no longer, for the brown earth was covering her nakedness with a delicate mist of green. Beyond the sweep of the avalanche the maples were swinging their tassels, and the swelling buds of the oaks and aspens showed that they were almost ready to burst into leaf; the air was full of bird calls and fluttering wings, and the breeze, although chill, seemed ineffably soft in comparison with its recent rigorous blasts.

Pearl and Seagreave had gone but a short distance from the cabin when suddenly Pearl shielded her eyes with her hand. "Look," she cried, excitedly, and pointed to two men who were standing down by the bridge evidently awaiting them, "I can't quite see from here, but it is, it must be, Bob and Pop."

She almost fled down the hill after that, and Seagreave, his face suddenly set in lines of determination, kept pace with her. He had noticed, even if she had not, that those two motionless figures at the bridge had not advanced one step to meet her, but were maintaining an attitude portentously watchful, it seemed to him, and boding ill for the warmth and spontaneity of the welcome she so evidently expected.

But Pearl appeared to see nothing of this, and as she drew near the two who awaited her, she would have flown like a bird into her father's arms. But before she could throw her arms about him he caught her wrists and pushed her back a step or two anything but gently.

"Why weren't you down at the bridge last night?" he asked, sternly. The old man had changed since the avalanche. There were anxious, deep hollows about his eyes, which were at once brighter and more sunken than ever. His parchment skin looked livid and lifeless and his mouth had tightened until it was drawn in and pinched.

"Why weren't you down at the gully waiting for us?" he asked again. "The bridge was across at midnight. The boys have been working night and day to get you out, and this is the way you act, hiding up there in that cabin like you'd as lief stay there as not."

"Yes, Pearl, why weren't you down to meet us?" Bob Flick spoke for the first time. His slow, soft voice was placating, and yet it was evident that his sympathies were with Gallito. "The boys had the place all lit up with torches while they worked, and your pop and I waited half the night for you down here. Why didn't you come?" Neither of the men had so far even glanced at Seagreave, but ignored him as thoroughly as if he were not there.

Pearl looked at Flick a moment in frowning incomprehension. Petted, spoiled child that she was, she could not bear to be scolded where she had expected a rapturous welcome. From Flick to her father she glanced and then back again. "What's the matter with you two?" she cried. "Are you mad just because I didn't come chasing down the hill in the dead of night? How did I know that the boys were going to get the bridge across at midnight?"

"Because if you'd been the sort of girl you ought to be you wouldn't have stayed a minute longer in that cabin than you could have helped. You'd have stood down by the gully all night long just to show the folks in the camp that you wouldn't stay in that cabin after there was any chance at all for you to get away," Gallito answered her before Bob Flick got a chance. "What made you stay up there? You and him, too," he pointed one, long, gnarled forefinger at Seagreave, "have got to answer me that question. And there's another one, too, and you'll answer it."

Again Pearl stared at him and again she turned her puzzled eyes on Bob Flick. Then, as the meaning of their attitude flashed over her, she fell back a pace or two, her face grown white. "Dios!" she murmured, with stiff lips, a sob rising in her throat.

Then she tossed high her head in hot resentment. Her mouth was set in a thin scarlet line of obstinacy, her eyes burned, but their expression was unreadable. With a slow movement of her body, expressing infinite scorn, she swung away from her father and her lover and, with her eyes upon the far blue ranges, superbly ignored them.

Bob Flick shot a warning glance at Gallito, who was about to speak, and took a hasty step forward. "Look here, Pearl," he said, conciliatingly, "don't mind your pop. The strain on him's been awful. It's been hard on all of us. You sure gave us some terrible days, not knowing whether you were alive or dead, but we all kind of figured from the direction that the snow slide took that it missed the cabin, and we wouldn't believe anything else but that you were as much alive as ever and as anxious to see us as we were to see you. And, Pearl, listen," striving to divert her gaze from those dim, blue ranges, "we ain't been idle. There's some great news for you. You tell her, Gallito."

"Yes," the Spaniard's tone softened a little and he lifted his head with a touch of pride, "it sure is great news. I been in correspondence with Sweeney and he opened up the matter of a contract again. I been dickering with him just the same as if we knew that you were safe and alive. I wouldn't let myself think anything else; and the result, Pearl,"—he paused, his eyes scanning her face—"the result is that he's just doubled his offer of last year and will play you over a circuit twice as big, the cities only. How does that strike you?"

But there was no answering enthusiasm on Pearl's face, not even a gleam of interest. Gallito and Flick looked at each other in dismay. Her indifference was genuine, they saw that clearly. There was no affected disdain in her manner of receiving the news. It was simply a matter which did not touch her at all.

Seeing this, a slow, burning flush crept up into her father's face, his jaws worked. "Pearl, did you hear?" he demanded, "because if you didn't you'd better pay attention, and pay attention quick. I've accepted for you, given my word to Sweeney that if you were alive you'd take this offer. And now you and me are going to leave Colina within a few hours, and you're going to leave for good. Understand?"

She smiled in slow, indifferent scorn and answered nothing, and her attitude maddened Gallito. "What do you mean by acting this way?" he cried. "Let's get down to it. Why weren't you down at the gully last night? Wouldn't he let you?" Again he pointed an accusing finger at Seagreave, who stood a little apart watching the scene with folded arms. "Pearl, you answer me, for I'm going to ask you that question straight out now. Ain't you just as good as when you came?"

But Pearl's seven or seventeen devils were in full possession of her now, and one of them, the demon of silence, stood her in good stead, for she knew intuitively that this attitude of non-explanation would prove far more irritating to her inquisitors than the vials of her wrath poured freely upon them.

But Gallito was in a white fury by this time. "By God," he cried again, "you will answer me! You will tell me and tell me now!"

"I'll be hanged first!" She flashed the words at him as a snake darts its fangs.

"And I'll be hanged if you'll ask her such questions before me!" cried Seagreave, speaking for the first time.

Her father looked at him with a slow and bitter smile, then he gave a little nod of acrid comprehension. "You keep out of this, Harry Seagreave," he said in a low, cold, deadly voice. "This is between the girl and me. Pearl, you come with me—now. We leave Colina, as I told you, within a few hours. You come now." He took a step or two down the hill, as if expecting that she would follow him.

A wailing wind blew down from the peaks. The mocking bark of a coyote sounded near at hand in those wild solitudes, a bird flew from one tree to another, and the sound of a breaking twig was like a pistol shot.

Moments passed, and still Pearl had not obeyed her father's command. It was not repeated, which was characteristic of Gallito. He merely waited, until at last she lifted her eyes and unwaveringly met his. "I'm not going" she said clearly.

Harry made a quick, impetuous step toward her, but before he could reach her her father had caught her by the wrist again and swept her aside.

"Look here, Gallito," cried Seagreave, "since she won't explain, you've got to listen to me. I——"

"I've told you to keep out of this, Seagreave," interrupted Gallito in his harsh, grating voice. "I'll deal with you later."

But at the sound of Seagreave's voice the color had come back to Pearl's cheek, the light to her eyes. Hands on hips, she swung her skirts and surveyed Bob Flick and her father with a scornful, slanting gaze. "I didn't know that there was anybody in the world that would dare ask me such questions; even you, Pop. And making arrangements with Sweeney without waiting to consult me! And ordering me to leave Colina on two or three hours' notice! Dios!" She spread her hands out on either side of her as if pushing away an impossible thing. "I can hardly believe it. I didn't answer you, Pop, nor you, Bob, because I was trying hard to take things in. But now," she turned to Seagreave, her head lifted higher yet in the glory of joy and pride, "I'm not going to leave Colina— yet, and I'm not going to sign up with Sweeney; am I, Harry?"

Seagreave passed her father and was beside her in two strides. "You're going to do as you please," he said.

She leaned toward him, smiling her fugitively sweet, tantalizing smile; and, oblivious of the others, Seagreave caught her to him as if he would hold her against the world.

And, seeing this, Bob Flick turned and walked down the hill with never a backward glance.

Not so Gallito; his eyes had darkened, those fierce hawk's eyes; his face was livid. "Pearl," his voice grated in his throat, "you can't make a fool of both me and yourself like this. You are a fool of a woman like all the rest, and because I have the bad luck to be your father I must save you from your own madness. You've got your big chance—the chance you've been waiting for—and you're not going to throw it away now, just because you been staying up in that cabin alone with him until you've lost your wits about him." He indicated Seagreave wth a contemptuous jerk of the thumb.

"Seagreave," in cold fury, "you're a damned thief to take advantage of her this way. Now, Pearl, you come on."

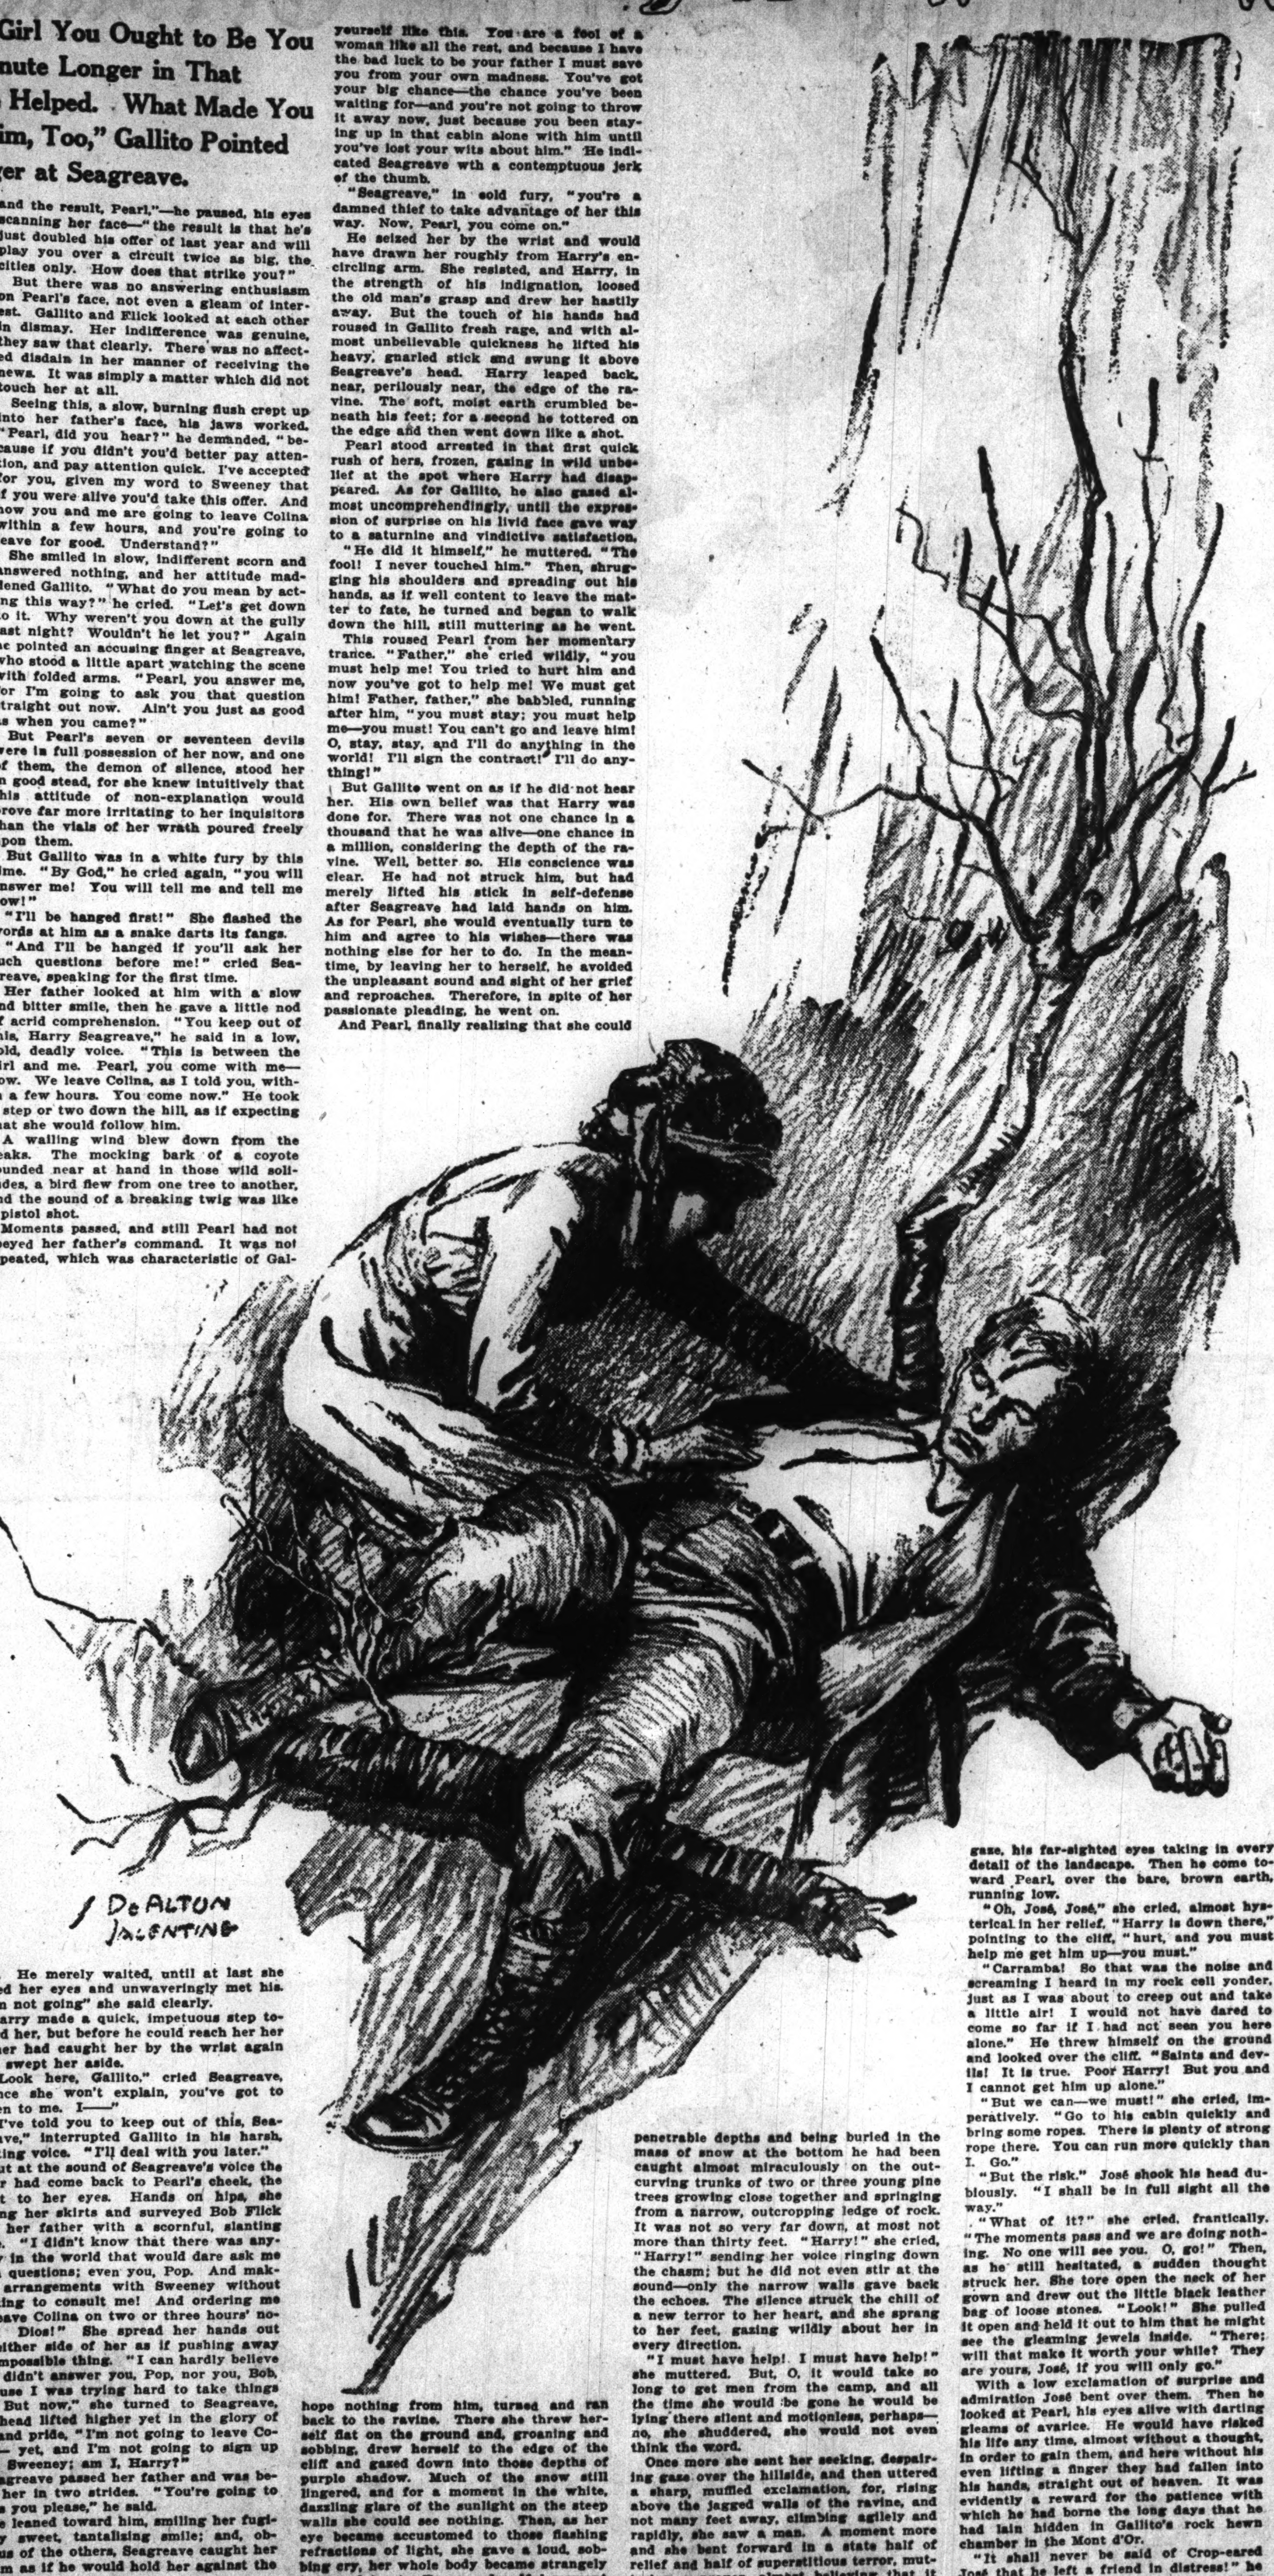
He seized her by the wrist and would have drawn her roughly from Harry's encircling arm. She resisted, and Harry, in the strength of his indignation, loosed the old man's grasp and drew her hastily away. But the touch of his hands had roused in Gallito fresh rage, and with almost unbelievable quickness he lifted his heavy, gnarled stick and swung it above Seagreave's head. Harry leaped back, near, perilously near, the edge of the ravine. The soft, moist earth crumbled beneath his feet; for a second he tottered on the edge and then went down like a shot.

Pearl stood arrested in that first quick rush of hers, frozen, gazing in wild unbelief at the spot where Harry had disappeared. As for Gallito, he also gazed almost uncomprehendingly, until the expression of surprise on his livid face gave way to a saturnine and vindictive satisfaction.

"He did it himself," he muttered. "The fool! I never touched him." Then, shrugging his shoulders and spreading out his hands, as if well content to leave the matter to fate, he turned and began to walk down the hill, still muttering as he went.

This roused Pearl from her momentary trance. "Father," she cried wildly, "you must help me! You tried to hurt him and now you've got to help me! We must get him! Father, father," she babbled, running after him, "you must stay; you must help me—you must! You can't go and leave him! O, stay, stay, and I'll do anything in the world! I'll sign the contract! I'll do anything!"

But Gallito went on as if he did not hear her. His own belief was that Harry was done for. There was not one chance in a thousand that he was alive—one chance in a million, considering the depth of the ravine. Well, better so. His conscience was clear. He had not struck him, but had merely lifted his stick in self-defense after Seagreave had laid hands on him. As for Pearl, she would eventually turn to him and agree to his wishes—there was nothing else for her to do. In the meantime, by leaving her to herself, he avoided the unpleasant sound and sight of her grief and reproaches. Therefore, in spite of her passionate pleading, he went on.



And Pearl, finally realizing that she could hope nothing from him, turned and ran back to the ravine. There she threw herself flat on the ground and, groaning and sobbing, drew herself to the edge of the cliff and gazed down into those depths of purple shadow. Much of the snow still lingered, and for a moment in the white, dazzling glare of the sunlight on the steep walls she could see nothing. Then, as her eye became accustomed to those flashing refractions of light, she gave a loud, sobbing cry, her whole body became strangely limp and inert. For one dreadful moment she feared that she was going to faint. Then she drew on all the strength of her will and was herself again, ready in that moment of poignant relief to dare anything, do anything to save him.

For quite plainly she saw Harry. Instead of whirling down into those impenetrable depths and being buried in the mass of snow at the bottom he had been caught almost miraculously on the outcurving trunks of two or three young pine trees growing close together and springing from a narrow, outcropping ledge of rock. It was not so very far down, at most not more than thirty feet. "Harry!" she cried, "Harry!" sending her voice ringing down the chasm; but he did not even stir at the sound—only the narrow walls gave back the echoes. The silence struck the chill of a new terror to her heart, and she sprang to her feet, gazing wildly about her in every direction.

"I must have help! I must have help!" she muttered. But, O, it would take so long to get men from the camp, and all the time she would be gone he would be lying there silent and motionless, perhaps—no, she shuddered, she would not even think the word.

Once more she sent her seeking, despairing gaze over the hillside, and then uttered a sharp, muffled exclamation, for, rising above the jagged walls of the ravine, and not many feet away, climbing agilely and rapidly, she saw a man. A moment more and she bent forward in a state half of relief and half of superstitious terror, muttering a prayer, almost believing that it was a vision; and then, with a relief beyond all speech, she saw that it was José. She could not be mistaken.

He had pulled himself over the cliff by this time and had cautiously risen to his feet. Up and down the hill and in every direction he sent his sweeping, careful gaze, his far-sighted eyes taking in every detail of the landscape. Then he come toward Pearl, over the bare, brown earth, running low.

"Oh, José, José," she cried, almost hysterical in her relief, "Harry is down there," pointing to the cliff, "hurt, and you must help me get him up—you must."

"Carramba! So that was the noise and screaming I heard in my rock cell yonder, just as I was about to creep out and take a little air! I would not have dared to come so far if I had not seen you here alone." He threw himself on the ground and looked over the cliff. "Saints and devils! It is true. Poor Harry! But you and I cannot get him up alone."

"But we can—we must!" she cried, imperatively. "Go to his cabin quickly and bring some ropes. There is plenty of strong rope there. You can run more quickly than I. Go."

"But the risk." José shook his head dubiously. "I shall be in full sight all the way."

"What of it?" she cried, frantically. "The moments pass and we are doing nothing. No one will see you. O, go!" Then, as he still hesitated, a sudden thought struck her. She tore open the neck of her gown and drew out the little black leather bag of loose stones. "Look!" She pulled it open and held it out to him that he might see the gleaming jewels inside. "There; will that make it worth your while? They are yours, José, if you will only go."

With a low exclamation of surprise and admiration José bent over them. Then he looked at Pearl, his eyes alive with darting gleams of avarice. He would have risked his life any time, almost without a thought, in order to gain them, and here without his even lifting a finger they had fallen into his hands, straight out of heaven. It was evidently a reward for the patience with which he had borne the long days that he had lain hidden in Gallito's rock hewn chamber in the Mont d'Or.

"It shall never be said of Crop-eared José that he left a friend in distress!" he exclaimed virtuously, and, stuffing the little bag in his pocket, sped up the hill.

Uttering broken expressions of relief, Pearl again threw herself flat on the ground and gazed over the edge of the cliff. And, as she lay thus, moaning out passionately tender words which Harry, lying motionless and unconscious, could not hear, a sudden thought struck her. She would go to him. She looked down, far down where those rocky walls lost themselves in indefinite hazes, and shuddered; but another glance at Harry and courage flowed to her again. She saw where, on the narrow projecting ledge and on the trunks of those upspringing pines, she could get a foothold near him, if it were but possible for her to climb down. Scanning the wall closely, it seemed to her rough and jagged enough for her to do so with comparative safety.

Just as she reached this decision she heard a faint halloo from the same direction from which José had come and, turning her head quickly, she saw Mrs. Nitschkan hastening over the hill toward her.

"Gosh a'mighty!" exclaimed the gypsy when she had come within speaking distance. "What kind of a howdy-do is this? I brought up a bite for José to eat and, although I've stood down there whistling my head off, he never poked his head out of the ground, the jackrabbit! And the next thing I see is you lying flat in the mud."

"O, Nitschkan!" Tears of relief were streaming down Pearl's face. "Thank God that you've come! Harry fell over the cliff. We can see him, and José's gone to the cabin to get ropes."

With many exclamations of surprise Mrs. Nitschkan peered over the edge of the ravine. "Saved by them little sticks of pine trees and a piece of rock no wider than my foot! Ain't that the workings of Providence for you?"

"Is he—is he—do you think he is——" Pearl's voice broke in anguish.

"No, I don't. He ain't lookin' that way," said Mrs. Nitschkan with such force and heartiness that Pearl was immediately reassured. "He's jus' got the sense knocked out of him. I don't jus' see yet how we're goin' to get the ropes fastened to him, so's he can be drug up."

"I'm going down to him. I'll fasten them."

"You! And yet I don't know but what it ain't best. It'll take all the strength José and I've got to draw him up careful and not go bumping him too much against the rocks."

Pearl took off her shoes; then, shutting her lips tightly and reassuring herself with the knowledge that the rock was rough and she was sure footed, she lowered herself over the side of the ravine and reached for a foothold. Presently she found it, and then another. Slowly, with cut and bleeding hands, she made her way down. Half way, perhaps, she grasped a little bush which seemed to spring securely from the cliff and held tightly to this until she could grasp another jutting point of rock and then another bush, until at last, with a great sobbing sigh, she found her feet planted on what seemed sure ground. It was the trunks and the outspreading branches of the same pine trees which held Seagreave. She took a second to draw a long breath, and then, holding cautiously to a little branch, she bent over him.

With infinite tenderness she attempted to straighten out one leg which was doubled beneath him, but he moaned and sighed so that she desisted, seeing from the limp way that it lay that it was broken. He had evidently fallen on his back; and like a dagger zigzagging its way through her heart was the thought, "What if that, too, were broken?"

O, how should they get him up without injuring him further and cruelly hurting him with the ropes? And he must be so cold! She shivered herself in the damp, icy air of this ravine. She called up to Mrs. Nitschkan to swing down to her her long cape, which she had discarded before beginning her climb. The gypsy did so carefully, but just as she let the end of it go a gust of wind swept it in slow circles down the ravine.

Mrs. Nitschkan uttered more or less profane exclamations of disgust; but Pearl said nothing. After her first feeling of intense disappointment a new idea had come to her, and she hastened to act upon it. As quickly as she could with her torn fingers she unfastened her gown and slipped out of it, and then, unheeding Mrs. Nitschkan, who was scolding her like a magpie, she threw it over Seagreave, tucking it about him as best she could. The breath of the snow-damp air upon her shoulders and arms was like a bath of ice water, but she scarcely noticed it, for she heard Mrs. Nitschkan welcoming José.

He and the gypsy immediately began swinging great coils of rope over the cliff.

"Can you get the ropes under him, Pearl, and tie 'em in a kind of cradle?" called Mrs. Nitschkan.

"Of course," she answered, "if you and José will tell me how."

Then, under their direction, she managed to bind the ropes securely about Seagreave, moaning and weeping herself at the pain she evidently caused him, although he did not so far recover consciousness as to realize what was happening to him. When she had finished she caught another swinging end of rope which they threw her and climbed up the cliff. She took a moment or two to get her breath, and then, slowly and with all care possible under the circumstances, they drew Seagreave up.

"Dios!" cried José, panting. "It is well that you two are so strong, because we have yet to get him to the cabin. Fortunately I, also, have great strength."

After some discussion it was finally decided that Pearl was to hasten on ahead and build up the fires and heat water, while Mrs. Nitschkan and José carried Harry up the hill.

It was for them a slow and difficult progress, but the cabin was finally reached, and the gypsy and José laid him on his bed, undressed him, and examined his injuries.

Presently Mrs. Nitschkan came into the outer room, where Pearl cowered beside the fire, her hands over her face. She caught imploringly at the other woman's skirt. "O, Nitschkan, what is it? Will he live? Tell me, tell me, quick!"

"Things might be better and they might be worse, but," with rough good will, "you ain't no call to wear mourning yet. His back ain't hurt serious, but his left leg and his right arm are both broken and he's an awful lot cut and bruised, especially about the back and the head. I can set a leg myself, as good as most, and many a one have I done, but those that I've set 'em for don't always seem to have as good use of their limbs after as before. So, if you want him as good as new again, you'd better have a doctor."

"Yes," agreed José, who had come into the room. "They are bad breaks. I, too, can set a leg or an arm, but, as you say, Nitschkan, those for whom I have done it have usually been ungrateful enough not to use them right."

Pearl staggered to her feet. "I will go," she said, "if you two will only stay here and look after him while I am gone. O, dear José, promise me that you will not leave Nitschkan alone. You can hide here in the cabin when you see me coming with the doctor."

José's fingers touched the little black bag in his pocket. "Saints and devils," he cried, expanding his chest, "only a dog would refuse you! Of course I will stay."

WARTS

THE GATE HOUSE STORIES

by
Wm. DONAHEY

NONE of Paula Gale's friends knew of the tragedy that had entered into her young life. But nevertheless it was so, a great calamity had darkened her future. Two dreadful warts had suddenly appeared on the back of her lilylike hand. The tiny red spots appeared one fatal day and when they had gained the enormous proportions of a pinhead the afflicted one began to assail the objectionable things with quantities of cold cream, and when that reliable friend failed she appealed to the highest court; she laid the matter before her mother.

"Just warts," smiled her mother after she had examined the hand.

"Can this hard hearted woman be my mother?" thought the wretched one, as she watched her mother go singing about her work.

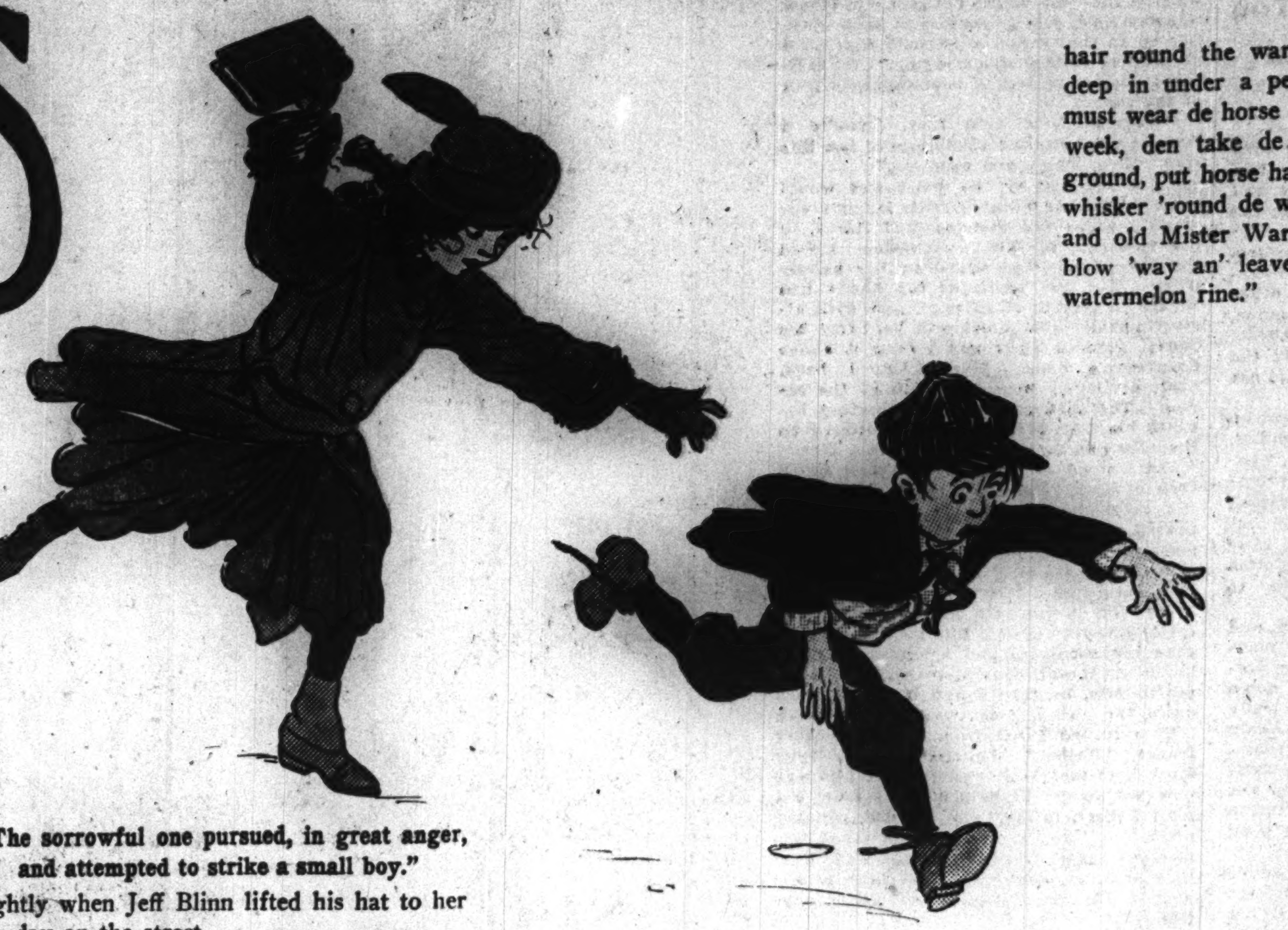
She needed sympathy, so, like a drowning man grasping for a straw, she breathed the sorrowful secret into her sister's ear.

"Rats!" cried the happy-go-lucky twin when she had listened to the tragedy. "Nothing but warts. They won't hurt you any. People have lived down worse things than warts. Cheer up, you may live to be a real useful citizen in spite of them."

After this cold and heartless treatment Paula decided to live the rest of her life in secret sorrow. None should know how the awful warts had embittered her soul.

Most of her friends noticed the resigned expression on her face and asked its cause, to which she answered with a sad smile, punctuated with a deep sigh, "O, nothing."

Some of her friends thought she was sick, while others claimed that she was in love. These friends grew so bitter in their arguments that two distinct sides were formed, one arguing love and the other sickness. The love crowd, however, won the day on two arguments. First, Paula was seen to blush slightly when Jeff Blinn lifted his hat to her one day on the street.



"The sorrowful one pursued, in great anger, and attempted to strike a small boy."

The second and the most convincing argument happened one evening after school, when the sorrowful one pursued in great anger and attempted to strike a small boy who had bawled after her in these words:

"Paula's mad and I am glad,
And I know what will please her.
A bottle of wine to make her shine
And Jefferson Blinn to squeeze her."

The offending verse now became the popular song of the day and was sung at suffering Paula from a safe distance by all the mischievous children of the neighborhood. The tormentors soon turned their attention to an unfortunate youth who had come to school with a button shoe on one foot and a laced one on the other, thus leaving Paula to the full enjoyment of her secret sorrow.

Before long the romance of a saddened future began to wear away, and Paula's thought took a more practical turn—how to get rid of the ugly warts. Determined to find a cure, she went straight to the most sympathetic person she knew—Azzariah Jeremiah Bean, better known to the children as Beany, and brought the subject to his attention.

"Dat's too bad," exclaimed the colored boy, after he had examined the offending warts.

"I know what's happened to you," he said. "You seen a white horse and a black cat lately?"

"Why, I don't remember," answered Paula. "Why?"

"'Cause if you done seen 'em both at the same time," said Beany, anxiously, "it's awful bad luck. Worse 'n stepping on a crack while you look at the new moon. I 'spect you've seen a black cat an' white horse, for it's most sure to bring on warts. Ain't they ugly? I'm mighty sorry for you."

This was what Paula wanted—sympathy. "But how am I going to get rid of them, Beany?" she asked, anxiously.

"A powerful charm ought to do it fo' you," answered the lad, thoughtfully. "I know—you take hair from a white horse's tail, an' a whisker from a black cat. Tie the horse hair round the wart and bury the whisker deep in under a persimmon tree. You-all must wear de horse hair 'round de wart for a week, den take de cat whisker out of de ground, put horse hair in its place, an' tie cat whisker 'round de wart. You do dat, Paula, and old Mister Wart he just pucker up and blow 'way an' leave yo' hand smooth as a watermelon rine."

"O, do you really think the charm will work?" cried the afflicted one.

Beany was hurt, as he always was when his white playmates doubted the charms of which his southern grandmother loved to tell him.

"I just said it would, didn't I?" he asked, leaving out every trace of southern accent, as he always did when he was on his dignity.

"Y-y-es. But it seems sort of silly that horse hair should take off warts. There's no reason for it."

"Well, was there any reason for the warts to come?" asked Beany.

"N-o," answered Paula. And Beany exploded with a triumphant "Well, then!"

After much discussion, the terms on which the wart charm would be forthcoming were fixed at 6 cents—2 cents for the horse hair, 4 cents for the whisker.

"Cat whiskers are worth 4 cents," argued Beany. "'Cause a cat whisker's hard to get. Hoss doan care when you get de hair from his tail, but cat, he certainly do get pretty pert when you try take whisker off his face, and I ain't goin' take chances of being all scratched up for less 'n 4 cents."

Beany soon got the horse hair from the stables of the coal yard where his father was watchman, but the cat's whisker was obtained only after great efforts from the face of a beloved pet belonging to an old lady in the neighborhood.

Under the personal directions of the serious little colored boy the horse hair was tied firmly about the warts and the cat's whisker was buried beneath an apple tree, which Beany decided was as good as a persimmon—especially as no persimmon tree could be found.

Now, feeling quite secure that the warts would soon disappear, Paula hurried over to the gatehouse at the railroad crossing, and explained, to the amusement of the old gateman, the wonderful advantages of Beany's charm.

"Well,' said Mr. Binjy, when she had finished, "the charm may be a good one. Beany's clever with charms. But I have a wonderful medicine that will help the charm along, I think. Will you try it?"

"Y-e-es," said Paula, "if I can keep the charm going, too."

So each morning for several days Mr. Binjy put his medicine on the warts. Soon they began to dry up and to Paula's delight disappeared.

The children in the neighborhood were much interested in the case, for Beany, who had kept close watch of those warts, had boasted openly that it was his charm that had made the cure possible. Some of the children believed that Mr. Binjy's medicine was responsible for the cure, but the majority, awed by the mystery of Beany's charm, gave that young man the credit and regarded him with awe.

Mr. Bean's reputation as a worker of charms spread throughout the neighborhood with remarkable speed.

Those afflicted with warts came from far and near to consult the famous charmer and the price of cat's whiskers rose with astonishing rapidity. In fact, one boy was said to have offered one pocket knife, 9 cents, and a goldfish for one of the coveted hairs.

Beany's rapid rise to wealth came to a sudden end, however, for the old lady who owned the cat with the marketable beard heard of Mr. Bean's commercial career and carefully kept her bewhiskered pet behind locked doors.

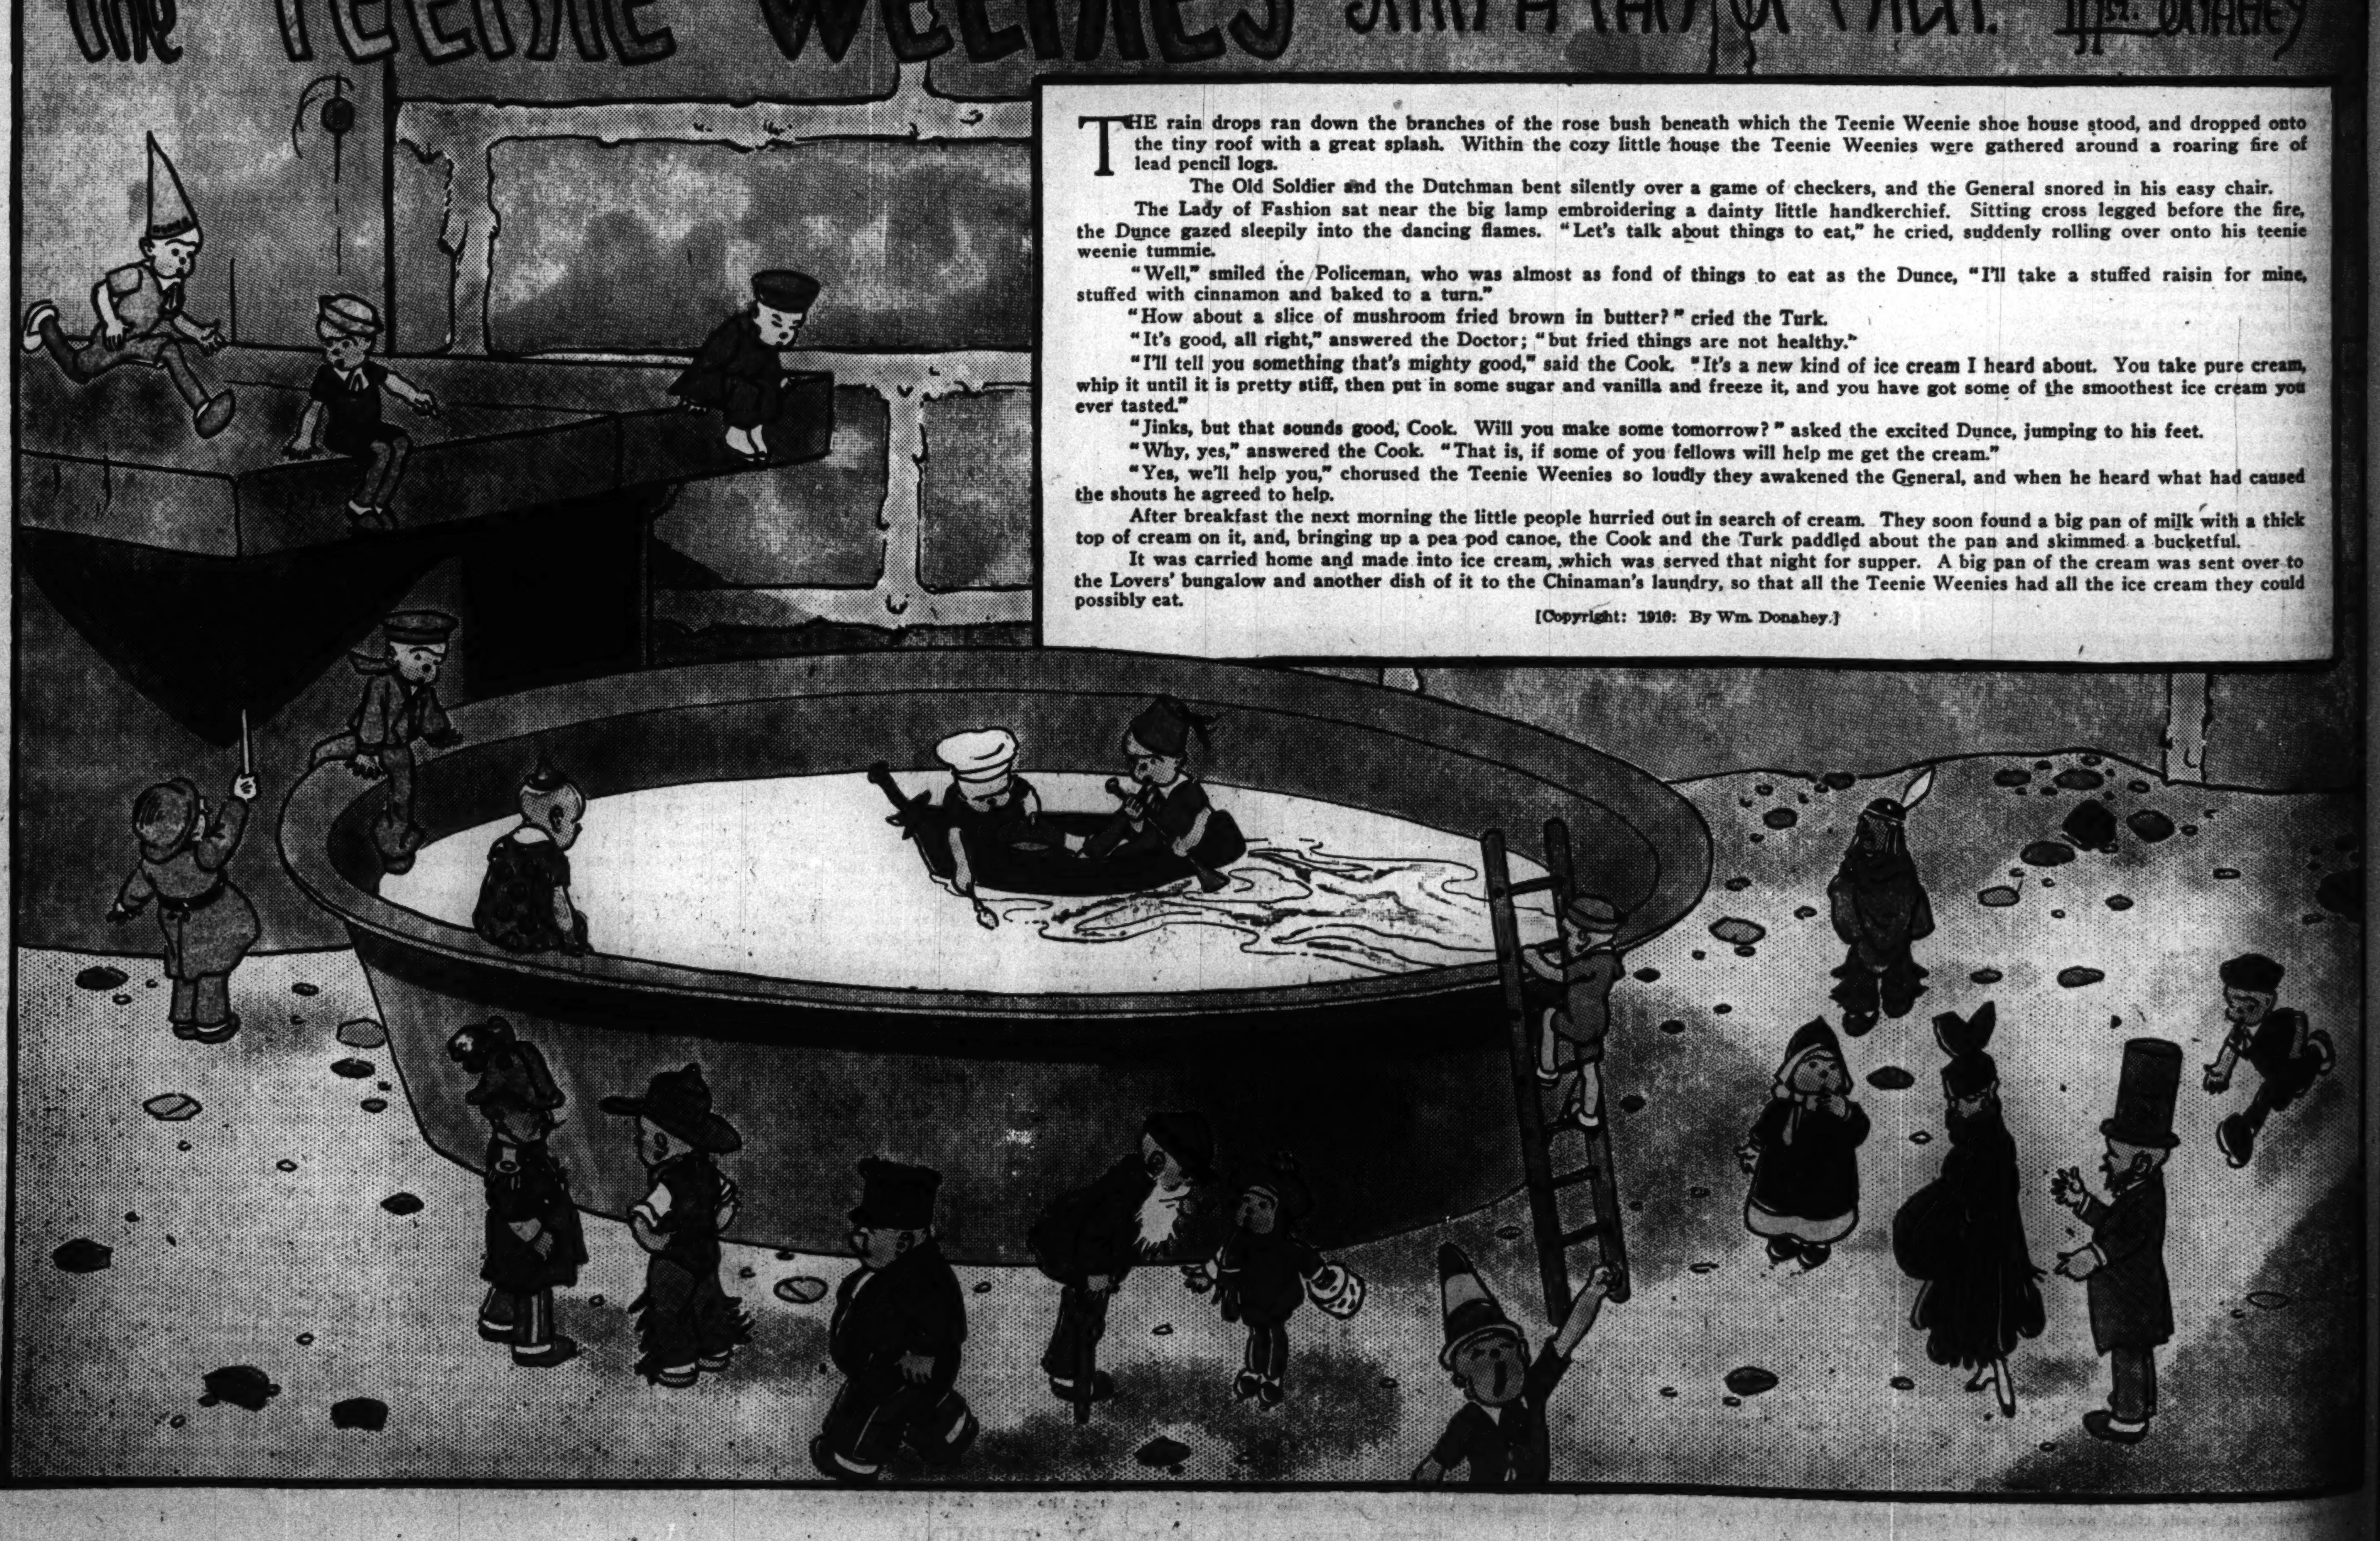
The TEENIE WEENIES SKIM A PAN OF MILK.

by
Wm. DONAHEY



THE rain drops ran down the branches of the rose bush beneath which the Teenie Weenie shoe house stood, and dropped onto the tiny roof with a great splash. Within the cozy little house the Teenie Weenies were gathered around a roaring fire of lead pencil logs.

The Old Soldier and the Dutchman bent silently over a game of checkers, and the General snored in his easy chair.

The Lady of Fashion sat near the big lamp embroidering a dainty little handkerchief. Sitting cross legged before the fire, the Dunce gazed sleepily into the dancing flames. "Let's talk about things to eat," he cried, suddenly rolling over onto his teenie weenie tummie.

"Well," smiled the Policeman, who was almost as fond of things to eat as the Dunce, "I'll take a stuffed raisin for mine, stuffed with cinnamon and baked to a turn."

"How about a slice of mushroom fried brown in butter?" cried the Turk.

"It's good, all right," answered the Doctor; "but fried things are not healthy."

"I'll tell you something that's mighty good," said the Cook. "It's a new kind of ice cream I heard about. You take pure cream, whip it until it is pretty stiff, then put in some sugar and vanilla and freeze it, and you have got some of the smoothest ice cream you ever tasted."

"Jinks, but that sounds good, Cook. Will you make some tomorrow?" asked the excited Dunce, jumping to his feet.

"Why, yes," answered the Cook. "That is, if some of you fellows will help me get the cream."

"Yes, we'll help you," chorused the Teenie Weenies so loudly they awakened the General, and when he heard what had caused the shouts he agreed to help.

After breakfast the next morning the little people hurried out in search of cream. They soon found a big pan of milk with a thick top of cream on it, and, bringing up a pea pod canoe, the Cook and the Turk paddled about the pan and skimmed a bucketful.

It was carried home and made into ice cream, which was served that night for supper. A big pan of the cream was sent over to the Lovers' bungalow and another dish of it to the Chinaman's laundry, so that all the Teenie Weenies had all the ice cream they could possibly eat.

Beautiful in Color are Gauze Like Frocks for Spring

Exquisite Are the New Fabrics, Sheer Unto Gauze, and Adorable in Shade and Coloring.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

By JEAN SEIVWRIGHT.

(Drawings by E. C. KELLY.)

AS Nature delights in using most wonderful colors when she illumines the morning sky, or scatters with careless hand the golden dandelions, the delicate spring beauties, and the flaming tulips that charm the eye grown weary with the drab tones of winter, so the creators of dress have decreed most beautiful colors for spring attire. The fabrics, too, are exquisite in texture and those destined for afternoon and evening wear are frequently of a sheerness that rivals the gauzelike quality of the spider's web.

To the right of this figure another charming dinner gown is portrayed and the novelty of its trimming will doubtless appeal to every woman who follows with interest the vagaries of Dame Fashion. Originated in a lovely flesh tint of indestructible voile, this attractive model is adorned with horsehair embroidery, for trimmings of straw are among the novelties of the moment. With this are used small bead motifs that give a bright glistening effect to the gown.

The model that completes the trio is different, for this fascinating creation is designed from fine organdie in pleasing shades of lemon and green. The skirt, in spiral tunic style, is elaborated with groups of tucks that give the essential fullness. The underskirt is enriched with silver bead embroidery, a decoration that is also chosen to enliven the girdle. The corsage is also elaborated with this shimmering decoration. While the close fitting bands of the cuffs are similarly adorned, a plaited organdie frill gives a pleasing finish to the cuffs, and thus repeats the style note of the skirt.

With the revival of many old time modes comes the return of the fan. Some of the handsomest are made of ostrich feathers, for the plumage of this bird lends itself to many unusual developments. In the illustration a particularly handsome type is shown with the figure at the left. This is made of rose colored ostrich feathers that harmonize well with the delicate flesh tints of the gown. These are mounted on tortoise shell sticks that seem to accentuate the lovely color of the plumes.

Other interesting fans are tipped with goura, which gives a somewhat misty-like finish to their otherwise clearly defined tips, while formal quills, straightly and gayly decorated, with festoons of ribbon roses, are affected by the women who revel in the extravagance of a far-off but picturesque era.

The uses of ostrich are really legion. Some of the newest opera bags, made of delicate pastel tinted silks, are girded around the narrow bands of this attractive trimming. Such dainty creations look extremely well when used in conjunction with the new silk wraps—originated in all the gay shades that seem to herald the return of spring.

The coats are light in weight, as they are unlined. Frequently they are without trimming except for a quaint plaiting or ruching of the silk, although a delightful touch is found when a band of ostrich enriches the simple cuff or adds a novel touch to the collar.

Leather now is trimming the majority of the smartest sports suits which are for wear at country house parties. Then, too, the newest of the sports hats are of kid and straw. This combination of materials permits of an almost endless variation. Coarse white straw, for instance, can be topped by almost any shade of shiny kid.

Other leather ornaments modish this month are thonglike petite ornaments which nod out provocatively from the brim of the hat, and leather cockades which rise up abruptly from the center of the crown.

Another novelty in the millinery world is the introduction of embroidery on the newest sports hats. Take a smart French beaver, or a felt, or even a Panama, and use the mercerized yarn in bright colors. This yarn is preferable to silk because it shows off more effectively. You may embroider almost any kind of a design that you desire. You may choose a bird, a flower, a conventional design, or an entire scene if you wish an abundance of pictorial effect.

MEN AND WOMEN

Common Fault of Good Husbands.

THE other evening when I was going home I met a little married woman, about 28, pretty, and full of fun and life. She has been married eight years. In a burst of confidence she told me she had been to a downtown café and for the first time in her life she accepted an invitation to dance with one of the male hangers-on whom the management encourages and finds means of introducing to unescorted women. She was accompanied by a woman friend.

"I was simply desperate for a dance," she said. "You know, Bill used to be crazy about it before we were married, but I can't drag him to a dance now."

Bill is like a lot of other men—an excellent provider so far as clothes, a home, and food are concerned. And, like a lot of other married men, Bill pats himself on the back for being a good husband, with no pool playing or bowling habits, or club affiliations, and proceeds after supper to bury himself in his easy chair and a cloud of tobacco smoke, while poor Mrs. Bill, whose day is necessarily without any of the associations or pleasantries of Mr. Bill's, must look on helplessly, wishing with all her heart that married life didn't make such settled down creatures out of husbands.

The trouble with a lot of men is that they forget that happiness in marriage for the average woman is founded not on shelter, food, raiment, or even luxuries, but on some of the old loverlike attentions which the average man withholds because he has convinced himself erroneously that they are "fool notions."

Dancing isn't a fool notion. It is the healthiest form of play that may be indulged in. It is a brain recreation as well as a body recreation. A great medical authority said not long ago: "It is probable that man gets nearer his lost paradise when he is dancing than at any other time. Dancing has great curative powers. Men at 50 and men at 80 should dance."

If you look at things from an unprejudiced viewpoint, you must realize that the men and women who accomplish big things in business are those who arouse themselves from the after supper lethargy. They are men who know how to play as irresponsibly and as lightly as they work during the day.

Good for Everybody.

Next Wednesday is Ash Wednesday, the first day of Lent. Regardless of creed, a Lenten season is an excellent thing for every one, for fasting and abstinence is as good for the body as it is for the soul. A season or some other kind of inceptive is necessary for the average human being to start any personal reform. And by this time of the year New Year's resolutions are in about the same dilapidated condition as the Christmas dolls and toys.

At no season of the year is there greater need of care in food consumption than at the approach of spring. There should be a lessening of heavy, heat producing foods. Much of the spring tiredness and enervation would be avoided by substituting lighter foodstuffs for meats and starch foods, and by the observation of temperance in drinking and smoking.

So why not begin next Wednesday to prepare a healthy and happy spring for yourself?

How About Husband?

A great deal has been said and written about the duty of the wife never to let herself slump on her personal appearance. And too much cannot be said or written on the subject. It is a virtue with a holding power on a man's affections that makes it vastly worth the effort—if effort it be.

But how about friend husband? Hasn't he a duty or two in the same direction? When he went calling on "her" he was shaved, his shoes were shined, his linen was immaculate, and these things were a part of him, and no small part, in the development of the girl's affection for him.

Isn't it quite as jeopardizing to the love between them for him to become an unkempt and untidy husband as for her to develop into a slovenly wife? It is. The same love and respect that is inspired by the wife who keeps herself looking well and pleasing is equally inspired by the husband who never becomes careless of his person or clothes.

It is a pretty even tossup which is the most repellant sight—an unkempt man or a slovenly woman.

Many a man who complains openly about his wife's dressing sacque and her careless hair dress might improve the general love tone of his domicile by taking a look in the mirror at his own unshaven face and collarless shirt and realizing his own imperfections.

He doesn't have to be a Beau Brummel by any manner or means around the home. But cleanliness and order about his person and clothes is as much the duty of the husband as it is the duty of the wife to look as neat and attractive as possible.

Time and Place for Dogs.

Everybody who has ever owned a dog knows only too well that a dog is man's best friend. Everybody knows a dog has a way of getting into your heart and leaving a sorrowful breach if the friendship is suddenly terminated.

But in spite of all this, here are times in our lives when we have "too much dog." Haven't you gone to homes where the dog is planted in the center of an admiring circle and the conversation confined to his tricks, his bath, his aversions, his wonderful intelligence, etc.? It sometimes goes against the grain to have to join in the idolatry of this four footed beast. There are so many other interesting subjects for healthy, grownup men and women to discuss.

Worse than this feature, however, is the unkindly feeling your soul is filled with when the household pet is allowed to paw over your dress. It has been known to spoil what might have been an otherwise perfectly pleasant evening.

There is a time for everything and a place, and dogs are not exempt from this rule.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

THE child born with a silver spoon in her mouth has nothing whatever on a certain teeny-weeny little bundle of humanity which opened its baby blue eyes on a bright, sunny day in Washington, D. C., not so many years ago. Her inheritance was a crown of gold.

Not so surprising, therefore, that when this teeny baby grew up she should be known as the highest priced movie star in existence, is it?

Who is she? Why, the little golden haired beauty, Miss Billie Burke, of course, whose salary as movie star in THE TRIBUNE's new serial is $4,000 a week really "honest to goodness" money!

What have her golden locks to do with it? Everything, my dear! Because if she were not very beautiful she would receive no such fabulous salary. And her glorious red gold hair undeniably has been the preëminent feature in earning for her her beauty reputation. Not that she is not bountifully endowed in other beauty directions. She is. But she could earn a beauty reputation on her hair and her clever ways of dressing it alone.

In fact, her hair is so distinctly the most striking beauty feature that when you think of Billie Burke simultaneously you think of her glorious hair. Her lovely, laughing eyes and her pearly teeth and her charmingly girlish figure are secondary thoughts. The color is a ravishing, burnished gold. There is a natural wave in her hair which makes it amenable to her every whim of dressing it. And does the little movie star know how to dress her hair? I should say she does.

She doesn't follow the suggestions of any outside authority. Therefore she never makes the mistake of wearing a coiffure that would be more becoming to some one else. She never hides any of her hair's own beauty by slicking it back into a tight and ugly little knot as other beautiful haired ladies have been known to.

No. Miss Burke knows the value of individuality. She knows her own type, and in her coiffures she displays this knowledge most effectively from the clever little draping of the front hair to the alluring little curls that play around her ears. The importance of the care of the hair and knowing how to dress it to suit the individual are best illustrated in Miss Burke's success as a beauty.

And it's such clean, healthy looking hair! With the most brilliant luster, which is maintained or arrived at only by care, and regular, daily care!

"First thing in the morning before I get out of bed," Miss Burke told me, "my maid brings my brush to me and I brush vigorously and earnestly for five minutes at least. And every night I go through the same performance.

"I love to do it," she continued. "In fact, I could no more begin or end the day without brushing my hair than I could go without brushing my teeth. I brush until my scalp tingles. I find the twice daily brushings do away with the need of any special massage. I use a brush the bristles of which are stiff enough to penetrate the scalp, but not stiff enough to scratch it. There is such a pleasurable feel of 'life' in the scalp after these brushings that I feel quite rewarded for the effort."

A still greater reward, I reflected inwardly, is the exquisite cleanliness of her scalp, the absolute freedom from any suggestion of oiliness or dandruff, and the healthy, wholesome beauty of the hair itself.

"How often do you shampoo your hair?" I asked her.

"It depends really upon the amount of dirt to which my hair is exposed," she answered. "In the summer I motor a great deal and, of course, more frequent washings are necessary on account of the dust. I don't believe at all in the theory that hair should be washed not oftener than once in three weeks. I think it should be washed the minute it shows the need of shampooing. With red and blond hair more frequent shampooings are necessary than with dark. And especially red hair should be kept in the most cleanly condition. It makes such a difference in the color when it is allowed to go indefinitely without shampooing. Under ordinary conditions I find that once in ten days or two weeks is often enough to shampoo my hair," she added. "But, then, of course, the daily brushings help keep it clean and in good condition."

"Do you ever add lemon juice to the rinsing water?" I asked her, remembering it to be an effective measure of bringing out the golden tints in light hair.

She answered in the negative. No need of introducing any foreign ingredient to bring out the golden tints in her head. I apologized. Nature had been most bountiful.

"I use a good, pure soft soap, and make a jelly of it by adding water, letting it boil, then cool and thicken," Miss Burke explained. "I am very particular to clean the scalp thoroughly as well as the hair. And I am especially careful to rinse out every particle of soap and to dry my hair thoroughly. So much of a successful shampoo depends upon the rinsings and drying, I think."

"Do you ever have any of the 'can't-do-anything-with-it' troubles after your shampoo?" I asked her, doubting as I asked because of her happy possession of that nice, natural wave which generally dispels this difficulty. But she narrowed any possible breach that might have arisen over envy due to her never having known this common affliction of womankind by confessing to a knowledge of its inconvenience. However, she made a happy suggestion which she claimed as a successfully tried remedy—one or two persistent brushings to make manageable the wayward strands.

"Nothing spoils a woman's whole appearance like loose, wayward strands of hair," Miss Burke said. To which I heartily agreed. I can't associate with any woman of beauty the suggestion of loose strands of hair, much less this little lady of the $4,000 a week salary.

THE TRIBUNE star believes in giving the hair sun baths. "I go about a great deal in summer time without a hat," she said, "just so the sun can get a chance at my hair. I think the sun tones the hair up wonderfully. But, of course, I have to be careful not to remain too long in the sun's hot rays, for there is the danger with red and blond hair of bleaching the color perceptibly in this manner."

With the variety of "ups and downs" to Miss Burke's coiffures I was thoroughly impressed. Almost as varied as the ups and downs in an average life, but differing from them in the joyfulness of the downs of her pretty hair dressings. It matters not whether she dresses it up high on the crown of her shapely head or low down on her neck, it's Billie Burke and pretty and becoming.

She has a way of dressing it low and banged with most distracting little sentinel curls standing guard over her ears which makes her look not a minute older than a first year high school girl. In less than a jiffy, under her skillful manipulation, she transforms herself into a grown up lady, but saves herself from the too grown up look by doing her hair into a cluster of adorable bopeep curls on top of her head and pulling it out over the ears and pinning it here and there to give it that effective little side drape which is so characteristically Billie Burke.

Antoinette Donnelly's Answers.

DISCOURAGED: To relieve the pain of a soft corn, place absorbent cotton between the toes. I shall be glad to send you my formula for removing corns if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

MATTIE W.: I shouldn't think of taking anything to reduce the size of my neck if I were you, if you think you have a goiter. The best and only thing for you to do is to consult a physician about it at once, as a goiter may result seriously if it is not taken in time and given careful attention.

FRECKLES: A girl 5 feet 5 inches in height at the age of 16 should weigh 125 pounds. As you are still a growing girl I should hold and hold tight to those five superfluous pounds of flesh if I were you. Freckles are due to an irregular distribution of the pigment forming cells in the skin, and their appearance is caused or exaggerated by exposure to sunlight, which stimulates the formation of pigment by these cells. I am sure they will go away if you take care to protect your face from the sun and wind. It is a good plan to put cold cream on your face and then dust it with powder before going out in the air. I have a formula for lotion for removing freckles which I shall be glad to send to you if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

NANCY: Middy blouses are youthful and girlish and make a comfortable mode of attire for a schoolgirl. A girl 5 feet 3 inches at the age of 16 should weigh 120 pounds. You are only a couple of pounds underweight. Try to keep up your health and strength by getting lots of sleep, rest, a reasonable amount of exercise, and by eating nourishing, wholesome food. Drink lots of water and keep yourself free from constipation.

VERA: The only way to fill out the hollows in your face and to have a good complexion is to keep yourself in good health. And you cannot keep yourself in good health unless you eat simple, nourishing foods, avoiding greasy foods, pastry, and sweets; get out in the sunshine and air and have plenty of exercise in the open air. Drink lots of water between meals, sleep eight hours, tan if possible, with plenty of fresh air in the bedroom, and keep your bowels in a healthy condition. Cocoa butter is most too heavy to use on the face and is liable to cause a growth of hair. It would be far better to use a good cold cream. I shall be glad to mail my formula for cold cream to you if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

KITTY: Good exercises for developing the arms are sweeping, lifting weights, swinging Indian clubs, and using dumbbells. Chest weights are also excellent for developing the arms. The weights should be fairly light at first, beginning with perhaps two and one-half pounds and gradually increasing until five pounds are used. Face the chest weights, grasp the hands firmly, and hold arms straight out in front of the chest. Stand with your heels nearly together and far enough away from the weights to raise them a little distance from the floor. Draw the two handles to the chest and almost under the armpits, letting the elbows and shoulders go well back, then extend the arms. Repeat ten times. Practice this exercise faithfully twice a day.

GERTRUDE: Avoid putting your hands in hot water and water in which a strong soap or powder has been placed. Hot soapy water will make the hands red. Frequently bad circulation will make the hands red and unattractive. A rundown condition is often indicated by excessive perspiration of the palms. For either of these troubles the only sure treatment is an internal one. Build up your system, get lots of fresh air and exercise, and eat simple, nourishing food. Rubbing the hands with glycerin will often counteract redness. I shall be glad to send you my instructions for the care of the hands and nails if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

PATSEY: The best soap for the face is the pure imported castile. This is a good shampoo for blonde hair: Shave a small cake of pure white castile soap into a pint of boiling water and let it stand until thick. Add a few drops of rosewater just before it thickens. Wet your hair so that the jelly will adhere. Then rub until a lather forms. To the first water add a raw egg well beaten and the juice of half a lemon. Rinse your hair thoroughly. The lemon gives that golden tint so desirable in blonde locks.

ALICE: How long have you been trying the green soap treatment? You know you cannot remove blackheads and pimples with just a week's treatment. In some obstinate cases it may taken several months. Don't lose courage, but keep on with the treatment and I am sure your efforts will be rewarded in due time. Be careful of your diet and get lots of exercise in the open air. I shall be glad to send you my treatment for pimples if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

ELLEN: No, I shouldn't advise you to have your hair washed oftener than once in three weeks, especially as you have such a wealth of hair. What you can do is to use a good tonic to overcome the oiliness and then it will not be necessary to wash it so often. I have a formula for tonic which I shall be glad to mail to you if you wish it and will send me a stamped, addressed envelope. Pretty, wavy hair adds greatly to the charm of the face. There is no harm in moistening your hair with a curling fluid before putting it up in kid curlers or papers. The constant use of a curling iron has a tendency to split and break the hair.

FRANCES: Lemon juice will remove the stains from the hands. You can also mix the lemon juice with powdered pumice. Frequently poor circulation will make the hands red and unattractive. Build up your system and get lots of exercise in the open air. I shall be glad to send you my instructions for the care of the hands if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

LITTLE MOTHER: There isn't a question in my mind but what the constant use of olive oil on your baby's body is what caused the "fuzz" to appear. I should discontinue the use of the oil if I were you. In the meantime do not worry about it, for I am sure it will disappear in time if the oil is not used any more. A hair curling fluid will not keep the hair from splitting, it is merely used to make the hair wavy. I shall be glad to send you my formula for hair curling fluid if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

MATTY F.: Moles represent small defects of development in the skin. The only safe and effective way of having moles removed is by the electric needle. And only by an expert. No, don't think of trying to remove them yourself, as when they become irritated malignant growths are liable to result. I have a formula for removing freckles which I shall be glad to mail to you if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

JENNIE G.: You are foolish, indeed, Jennie, to want to bleach your hair. Bleaches and dyes are injurious to the hair and many times result in serious skin eruptions. I do not recommend any bleaches or dyes, and would suggest your leaving your hair just as it is. I am sure you will be sorry before many months have passed if you do not. After the hair has once been dyed or bleached it is almost impossible to keep it the same shade. Nature has a way of giving each and every one the color of hair that harmonizes with the face and by changing the color of your hair you are defying nature, and the consequence is that an otherwise attractive face is made startlingly ugly when surrounded by dyed locks. Take the best of care of your hair and I am sure you will never regret having received this word of warning in time.

BONNIE: Splitting and breaking of the hair is usually the result of external injury due to the fact that the hair has become brittle from lack of oil. Sometimes the lack of oil comes from general disturbances of the health, but much more frequently is due to improper care of the hair. The remedy is to give the hair enough oil to restore its elasticity and resistance. There is no harm in clipping off broken hairs, and when the hairs split they should be clipped off. I shall be glad to send you my instructions for scalp massage if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

HAROLD: You can remove the callouses on your feet by soaking them in hot water for half an hour each night before retiring. This will soften the spots. Then rub the callouses with a piece of pumice stone to take off the hard skin. During the day keep a little cold cream on the spot to keep it soft. I have a treatment for blackheads and pimples which I am sure would greatly improve the condition of your face. Would you like me to mail it to you? Just send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

ETIQUETTE.

Any question on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope. Please write on one side of the paper only.

New Trend in Entertaining.

THE matter of entertaining is growing at the same time simpler and more difficult. That is, it is no longer good form to have a great number of courses and a half dozen different kinds of wine, but the dishes you do have must be perfect; the wine the best of its kind. We are turning from gourmands to gourmets.

T. R.: When calling on a friend or acquaintance, leave your card with the maid who opens the door when you ring. If one of the family lets you in, then leave your card on the hall table, so that the one on whom you call may have a correct record of your name and address. As to whether you should give your full name when calling your employer or any one else on the telephone, it depends on whether there is some other person of your surname. If so, then give your Christian name as well as your last name. Otherwise the latter is enough.

ANXIOUS: I think that I would not ask any one to my "announcement" party whom I did not intend to invite to my wedding. The time when you decide to announce your engagement generally is the time when you should ask the local papers to publish it. Invitations to a large wedding can be sent out three weeks in advance. To the small and intimate affair you propose to have it is not necessary to invite the guests so long beforehand. The party at which you announce your engagement should precede by a day or so or be simultaneous with the general announcement of it. Married girl friends are quite eligible to this function.

You cannot have different sized "at home" cards to send different people, nor would it accomplish your object of acknowledging past hospitalities or warding off future wedding presents.

Thank your friends for their presents in the simplest, sincerest possible way. If you write from the heart you don't need the words of another.

As I do not know the plan of your house I cannot give you helpful advice as to whether or not the groom and his best man should come in from the hall to the parlor. They should enter with the clergyman. I think, as there are to be no other bridal attendants, your sister is your bridesmaid. The term maid of honor merely means one especially selected from a group of bridesmaids to be nearest the bride. White roses and stevia make an attractive centerpiece for a bridal table. The bridal party is enough for this table.

SUBSCRIBER: It is better to serve a salad course alone at a luncheon or dinner and not with the main meat course, though the combination of the two courses into one is often made so as to shorten a dinner. A salad fork should be provided. Unless you have something that needs cutting up, a knife is not necessary.

KATE: While it is courteous for the escorts of two women to dance each with the other's partner, it is not obligatory; that is, in the case you cite it was not necessary for the young woman's partner to ask the married woman to dance just because the latter's husband had invited the young woman he was escorting to dance. The formality of an entertainment doesn't seem to have anything to do with these things. A formal introduction by a mutual friend is all that is necessary to enable a man to ask a woman to dance.

* *

L. B. M.: Your escort should offer to assist you in removing your wraps before you sit down at a table in a restaurant. If you do not take off your coat until after you are seated, then the waiter can help you. Your escort should try to anticipate the waiter in aiding you when you rise from the table. You should let your escort precede you in following the waiter to the table allotted you in the restaurant.

The Most Remarkable Corset Ever Made Is the Nemo Wonderlift

A statement easy to make, just as easy to prove; already endorsed by many thousands of women, and, we believe, by every physician who has ever seen it.

You must think of the Wonderlift as something apart and different from all other corsets, including the Nemos you already know.

Other Nemo models give complete and comfortable hygienic support from underneath; but the Wonderlift not only supports, but lifts into place, and holds in healthful position, all the vital internal organs. It prevents, relieves and often cures painful and dangerous ailments that cannot be effectively reached by medical treatment.

But that's only incidental. The Nemo Wonderlift is a superior STYLE corset, producing in perfection the graceful silhouette of present fashion.

There are Wonderlift models now for all figures from cadaverous to gigantic:

No. 554—For full figures, short or of medium height; sizes 22 to 36—$5.00.

No. 555—For taller full figures—$5.00.

No. 556—For slender to medium figures, tall or of medium height; sizes 20 to 30—$5.00.

No. 557—For slim figures, prominent hip bones, concave abdomen—$5.00.

No. 998—For very large women with heavy, hanging abdomen; the greatest corset ever made for women of this type—$10.00.

No. 1000—A model de luxe, for average full figures, of lustrous brocade—$10.00.

Illustration on right shows position of Nemo Wonderlift Bandlet when adjusted, wearer seated. The adjustment is made by an inside lacing, laces passing through eyelets to outside of corset. Support given is so perfect, constant and comfortable that thousands of physicians now "prescribe" the Wonderlift Corset in place of costly, cumbersome and often ineffective bandages.

Doris Blake Says

If you were born this week you are

Frank.

Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write Doris Blake, care "The Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply send stamped and addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

YOU are a faithful student, never considering your education finished, but always striving to improve your mind and body. No sign appreciates more the advantages of a liberal education. But withal you have only a fair measure of self-reliance; under your rather determined exterior there is a hidden, unsuspected lack of self-confidence, due to your overconscientious ideas of duty. But you do like to verify your conclusions, although you seldom change them.

You demand a reason for everything, and as a result are often the cause of a great deal of unhappiness, especially if you happen to marry one who does not like to explain why she does what she does. Not only are you rather exacting and severe in your domestic discipline, but also in connection with business, for law means everything to you.

Combined with this natural inquisitiveness is much shrewd tact, otherwise your enemies would be countless. As it is, you seldom get into lasting difficulties, for your honesty and frankness always help to keep you sailing smoothly. If you happen to take up the ministry as a profession, not many rich men will be found in your congregation, for you are apt to be too socialistic in your tendencies and to express your opinions too forcibly.

In other words, you have the courage of your convictions and are often found on the unpopular side. Always hopeful, and broad in your sympathies, you are a friend to humanity, with no distinction as to race or color.

No one can ever accuse you of being lazy, for you apply yourself studiously to whatever task is at hand. But it must be admitted you do best what you like best to do.

You are fond of beautiful things in nature and art, so are exceedingly sensitive to conditions in the home, particularly if inharmonious. When everything is harmonious you are never happier than in beautifying your own home. There is an innate modesty and purity about you Pisces people which reminds one of the pure water of your native element. Your paths lie in the straight, clean way. If in a position of responsibility, you will fill it faithfully and acceptably.

One might label you, "Generally good natured," for such is true, although you can get angry if unduly irritated. But you do like fun and your laugh is the infectious kind. You will do anything for your friends, and as a result they are apt to get a great deal out of you, giving but little in return. There's nothing you like better than to get up a camping or a boating party, and you may be sure you'll never have any difficulty persuading your friends to go with you, for they know full well who will pay the bills.

Parents of Pisces children should be especially careful to get them well started in life. "As the twig is bent" is particularly applicable to you Pisces people. You naturally avoid change, and so as a child you should receive a good education and be placed in a position where there are good chances of rising. Usually this may best be found in some growing mercantile business. Should you become an author, your style will partake of your native element, with an eye to the picturesque. There are many lines along which you might succeed, some of which are as an artist, builder, writer, musician, clergyman, poet, scientist, or physician.

Your colors are gray, emerald green, pink, white, and black; birthstone, pink shell and moonstones.

Capricorn, Dec. 23-Jan. 20, and Virgo, Aug. 24-Sept. 23, furnish you many congenial companions. As a marital companion, if you are a Pisces woman, a Cancer man, June 23-July 22, will suit you best. If a Pisces man, a Virgo or Capricorn woman will make you the happiest life companion.

Broke Their Dates.

"Dear Miss Blake: We are two young girls who have been keeping company with two young men for about eight months and would like to know if it is proper to ask a boy to telephone us in his spare time. Also if he breaks an engagement is that a sign that he doesn't care for me any more, and should I turn him down if he asks for another date? We would be thankful for any information concerning these matters.

"BRIGHT EYES AND DIMPLES."

You can ask your friends to 'phone you in their spare time, but don't you think it would be far nicer if they did so without any suggestion on your part? I do, for one. And you can just be mighty sure that unless said boy had a good explanation for breaking that date I'd never give him another chance to break one. But I always believe in hearing the other side and in being as generous as possible toward a first offense.

Meets Him Half Way.

"Dear Miss Blake: I've been keeping company with a young man whom I like greatly. He is nice, when he comes to see me, and acts like he liked me, in fact he has told me that he did. But when he leaves me he seems to forget all about me, unless I meet him half way, and it isn't because he is bashful, for he's not. What would you do if you loved him and yet didn't want him to get the opinion that you were 'running' after him?

"GERDA."

By "meeting him half way," do you mean that you have to ask him to call each time? If so, stop it. You admit he is not bashful, therefore, you know that he is perfectly capable of asking himself and you will never win his respect by following the pursuing methods. Give him to understand that it is up to him to do the asking; show a spirit of independence. That usually works. Let me know if it doesn't this time.

Real Love Stories

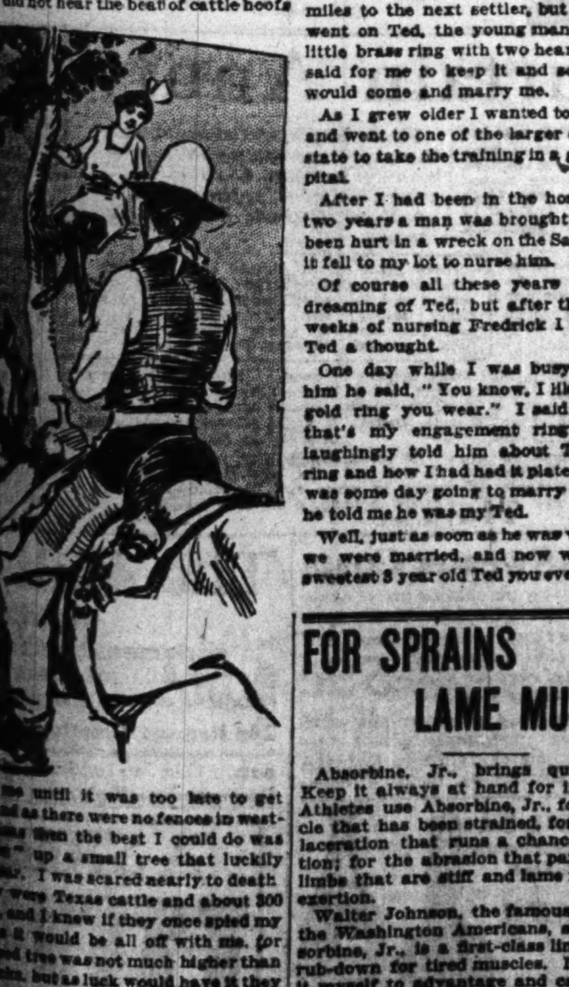
This department appears every other day in "The Daily Tribune."

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. "The Tribune" will pay $5 for every story published. Manuscripts will not be returned. Address Doris Blake, "The Tribune," Chicago.

Up a Tree.

ONE summer day when I was about 10 years of age two of my younger sisters and a brother, a horrible tease, and myself were romping along the roadside near our western Kansas home. As I was not much of a runner the others decided it would be great fun to run off and leave me, which they proceeded to do.

Of course I began to cry, and for that reason did not hear the beat of cattle hoofs



[illegible] me until it was too late to get away, and as there were no fences in western Kansas then the best I could do was "shin" up a small tree that luckily stood near. I was scared nearly to death for they were Texas cattle and about 300 of them, and I knew if they once spied my red dress it would be all off with me, for the blessed tree was not much higher than their backs, but as luck would have it they did not spy me.

Of the three men who were driving the cattle one was a young fellow about 18. He saw me in the tree and came to my rescue. After much coaxing he got me to get on his pony behind him astride. In this fashion we arrived at my home, to find a badly scared mother, for the rest of the children had arrived before us and told of running away from me and of seeing a herd go through.

My mother was glad to cook dinner for the three cattlemen, for it was eleven miles to the next settler, but before they went on Ted, the young man, gave me a little brass ring with two hearts on it and said for me to keep it and some day he would come and marry me.

As I grew older I wanted to be a nurse, and went to one of the larger cities of our state to take the training in a general hospital.

After I had been in the hospital about two years a man was brought in who had been hurt in a wreck on the Santa Fé, and it fell to my lot to nurse him.

Of course all these years I had been dreaming of Ted, but after three or four weeks of nursing Fredrick I never gave Ted a thought.

One day while I was busy caring for him he said, "You know, I like that little gold ring you wear." I said, "so do I; that's my engagement ring." Then I laughingly told him about Ted and the ring and how I had had it plated and how I was some day going to marry Ted. Then he told me he was my Ted.

Well, just as soon as he was well enough we were married, and now we have the sweetest 3 year old Ted you ever looked at.

LAME MUSCLES

Absorbine, Jr., brings quick relief. Keep it always at hand for instant use. Athletes use Absorbine, Jr., for the muscle that has been strained, for the cut or laceration that runs a chance of infection; for the abrasion that pains and the limbs that are stiff and lame from overexertion.

Walter Johnson, the famous pitcher of the Washington Americans, says: "Absorbine, Jr., is a first-class liniment and rub-down for tired muscles. I have used it myself to advantage and can heartily recommend it to all ball players everywhere."

Absorbine, Jr., is a concentrated antiseptic liniment—only a few drops required at an application. It is safe and pleasant to use—leaves no greasy residue. Sold by most druggists, $1.00 and $2.00 a bottle or postpaid. Liberal trial bottle for 10c in stamps.

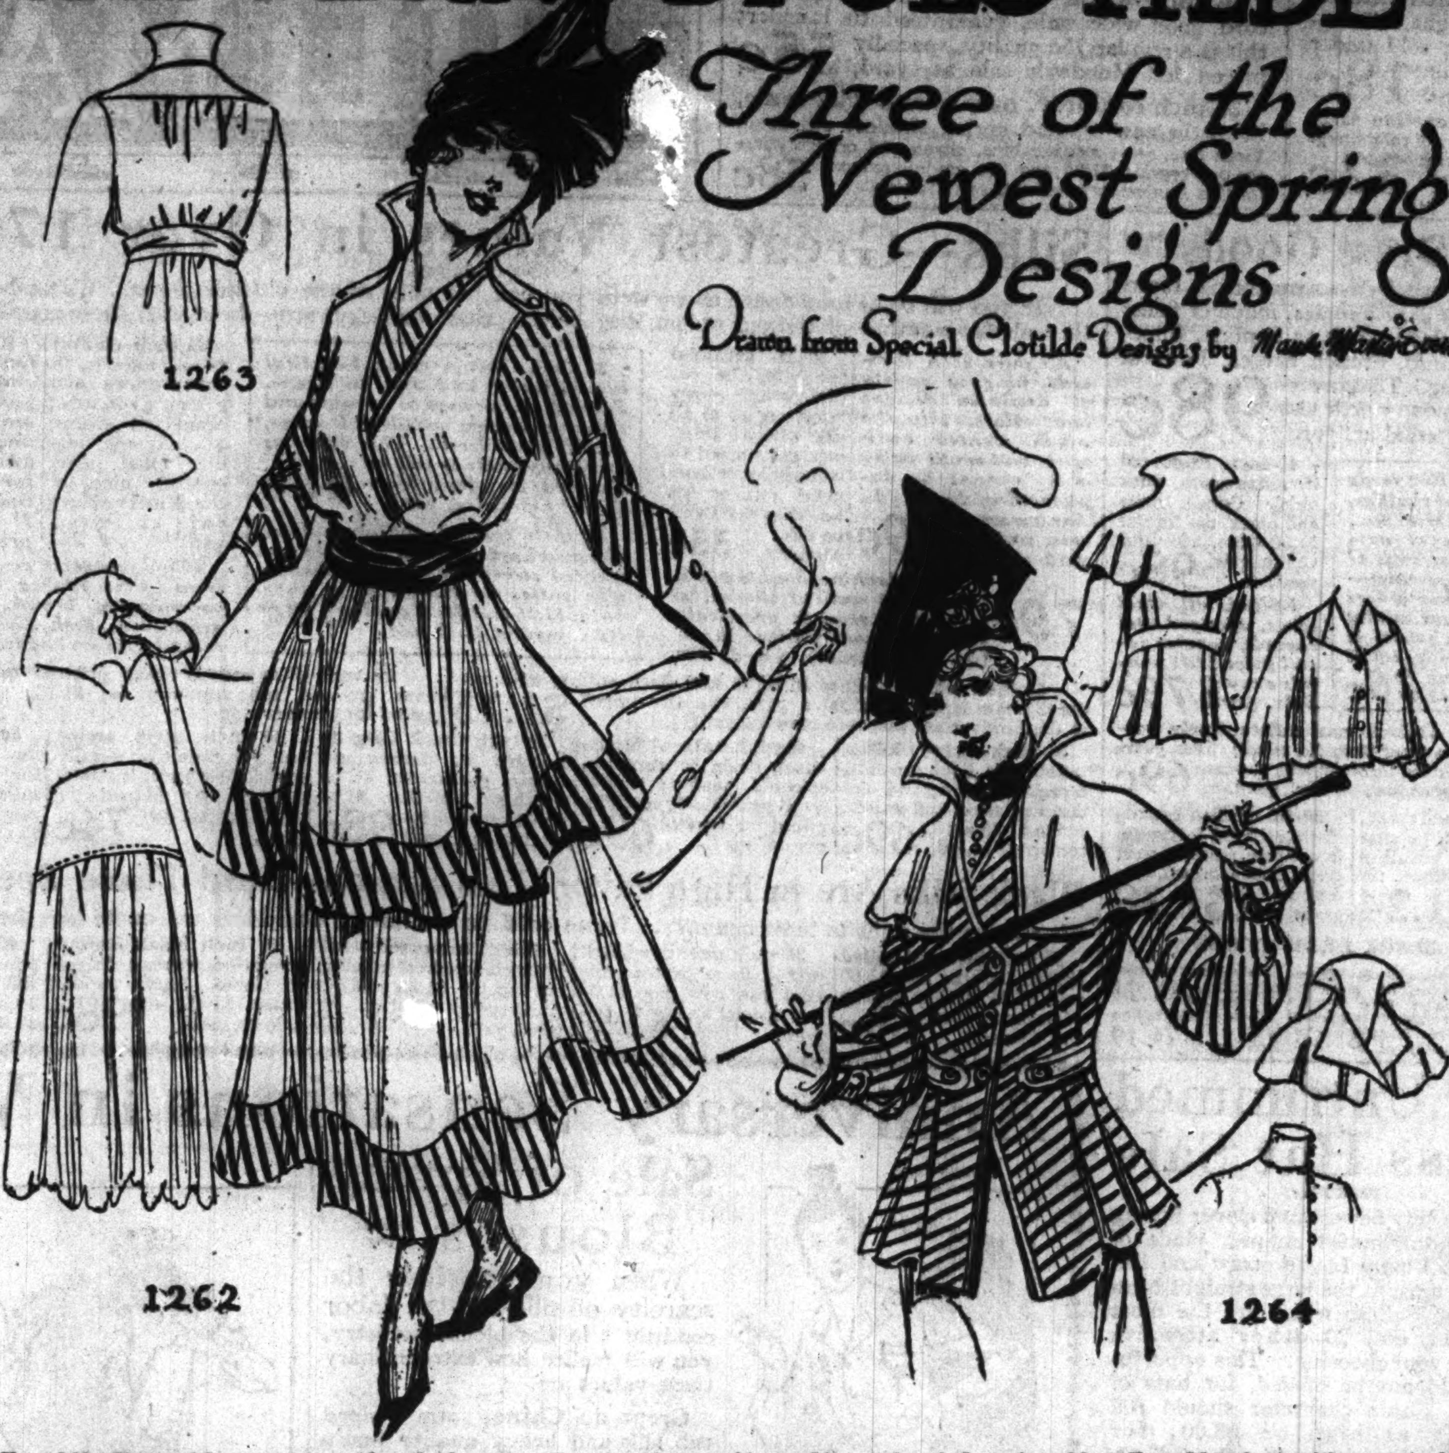
PATTERNS BY CLOTILDE

Three of the Newest Spring Designs

Drawn from Special Clotilde Designs by Maude Martin Evans



No. 1262—Skirt with one or two flounces, having straight lower edges, for misses and small women, 16 and 18 years. For the 16 year size will be needed 4⅛ yards of material 36 inches wide, 3¾ yards 44, or 3¼ yards of flouncing 28 inches wide, with 2¾ yards 18 and ¾ yard of material 36 inches wide for the yoke.

No. 1263—Blouse with separate overbodice, for misses and small women, 16 and 18 years. For the 16 year size will be needed 1⅝ yards of material 36 inches wide, 1⅜ yards 44 for the blouse, 1⅛ yards 36 or 1 yard 44 for the overbodice.

No. 1264—Coat with cape to be worn belted or loose, perforated for shorter length, for misses and small women, 16 and 18 years. For the longer belted coat will be required 3⅛ yards of material 36 inches wide or 2⅞ yards 44, 1⅞ yards 54, with ¾ yard 44 for the cape, the collar, and the belt. For the short coat will be needed 2⅝ yards 36, 2¼ yards 44, or 2 yards 54. Stripes may be on bias.

STRIPES are one of the most fashionable features of the present modes, and these patterns offered today afford an abundant opportunity to display these stripes to great advantage. Stripes are being shown now in wonderful variety and beauty. Their use lengthwise, crosswise, and bias makes excellent contrast, and as long as they are going to be one of the most popular features I have incorporated them on all of the three designs.

Dark blue is to be the favored color for the street suit or the street dress. There is a tendency to run brown a close second, but it's not a very good spring color and there is small chance that it will achieve any real permanency.

There are already delicate tones of biscuit and gray and dresses in the pastel colors of broadcloth. Up to the present moment all the suit coats are short and they are in no way allowed to interfere with the present modish silhouette.

To be quite in the height of fashion one's spring hat must rise high. It may be possible that with the coming of warmer weather there will be a proportionate flattening of the crown, but so far this has not happened.

How I Won My Mate.

How did you win the love of your mate? What measures, if any, did you adopt? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on "How I Won My Mate." Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, "The Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

He Flipped Pancakes.

I had a position as secretary to a business man. I hated cooking, and got most of my meals at a nearby restaurant. Instead of sitting at a table, I always ate at the counter, as I liked to watch the man in the white suit when he flipped pancakes. He soon got to know me as a regular customer, and we gradually got to talking. One noon he invited me to a show, and as he looked like a nice, clean young man, I accepted. I told him I hated cooking, and he said he would do nothing else. Later he proposed, and now I keep my position while he flips cakes in our kitchenette.

Hint to Old Maids.

My famous cooking won John. At 35 I was still single, no admirers in sight, and so tired of dressmaking. I had never learned to cook except in an ordinary way.

One night as I helped serve a church dinner I observed that certain bachelors paid particular attention to some appetizing dishes and praised the cooking. This was a hunch. I joined a cooking class and to such good advantage that in three months I was an adept.

I persuaded my aunt to invite certain eligibles for dinner. I cooked and served it. Other dinners followed. Then they began to ask me to entertainments and inside of four months I received three proposals, but, of course, I accepted John's.

J. T.

Refused to Drink.

Some years ago I came to the city from a small inland town and being a stranger finally found a small private rooming house. I had never been in the city before and the landlady, a kind, motherly woman, introduced me to the other roomers.

One night one of the roomers brought a friend to the house, and as I was feeling extremely blue introduced me to him and suggested we go out for a good time. Well, with some more of the roomers we went to a garden and somehow I was paired with the new acquaintance. Every one was drinking strong drink, but I had never drunk any and could not be coaxed to.

From then on this young man escorted me everywhere, and when he asked me to marry him he said: "It was your refusing to drink that won me; also your not using slang." And when I tell you that he is extremely handsome, while I am very plain, you can see how I won my mate.

Making a Date.

Frank was the sort of privileged fellow of "our set," who felt enough at home with us just to drop in any time the spirit moved him. His attentions were altogether too brotherly to suit my feelings toward him, but I dared not say anything for fear he should guess in what regard I held him and I would thus lose his respect.

One afternoon he was watching me roll nut filled dates in powdered sugar. Laughingly he remarked as he sampled one of the dainties: "You are a wonderful dater, Florence." Before I really realized how it would sound, I retorted, "You're no judge. You never really dated with me in your life."

"Young lady," he cried, just give me half a chance with all these idle youth that encumber your front porch and I'll be the happiest man in seventeen states."

Since our marriage he had always maintained that it was this little incident in our friendship that really aroused him from his apathy and set him "a courting" me in earnest.

How to Order Your Clotilde Patterns.

In ordering a waist the size should be determined by the bust measure. Give the bust measure. In ordering a skirt the size of the hip is more important than the size of the waist, but give both the hip and the waist measure. Ten cents for each waist, coat, or skirt.

In ordering misses' patterns the age should be stated—12, 14, 16, or 18 years. Ten cents for each waist, coat, skirt, or dress.

In ordering children's regular patterns order them by the age of the child. Ten cents each.

Clotilde's patterns are made in New York exclusively for THE CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE and may be obtained through no other service. It is requested that customers allow one week before making complaint for nonreceipt. An extra 2 cent stamp will allow for letter postage and thereby hasten delivery.

The AMATEUR GARDENER

by Eben E. Rexford

All questions relating to the cultivation of gardens will be answered if addressed to The Amateur Gardener, "The Tribune," Chicago. Please write on one side of the paper only.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

Palm Culture.

COMPLAINTS are always coming in about failure with palms. As a general thing, investigation shows that the failure complained of, is due to wrong treatment rather than to any fault of the plant.

Sometimes the fault is in the soil. Most palms thrive in a mixture of ordinary garden loam and sand—just enough of the latter to make the compost friable. If old and well rotted manure from the cow yard is obtainable mix some of this with the other ingredients of the soil, but on no account make use of fresh or unrotted manure. Substitute finely ground bonemeal for it in the proportion of a teacupful to half a bushel of soil.

Always be sure the pots in which your palms are grown have proper drainage. This is a matter of great importance, as these plants do not long remain in healthy condition if the soil in which their roots spread retains much water.

See that every pot has at least an inch—an inch and a half would be better—of some kind of material that will not decay readily, like broken pottery, brick, or charcoal. Put this in the bottom of the pot, taking care to see that the hole in the pot is not obstructed by it, spread a layer of sphagnum moss over it to prevent the soil from washing down into it, thus interfering with the free escape of surplus water, and then put in your compost.

If you can get pots that are deep instead of broad make use of them, as the roots of a palm tend to go down instead of spreading out.

The best varieties for general culture are the Kentias, Belmoreana and Fosteriana, Phœnix reclinata, Areca lutescens, Phœnix Roebelenii, and Latania Borbonica, the "fan palm." The Kentias, Arecas, and Phœnix are of upright habit—though P. reclinata is inclined to spread, while the "fan palm" is of low growth with a wide spread of foliage.

If you keep your plants in jardinieres, see to it that water is not allowed to accumulate in them, as it will if they are not emptied frequently. If this water stands in the jardiniere until there is enough to come up about the pot, the effect will be the same as if your plants were given no drainage.

Water whenever the surface of the soil looks dry. Then use enough to thoroughly moisten all the soil in the pot. You can tell about this if a little of it runs out at the hole in the bottom of the pot. See that watering is attended to regularly, instead of whenever you happen to think of it.

Do not keep your plants away from direct light for long at a time, as many persons do who use them for general decorative purposes. If this is done there is danger of souring of the soil. If this happens, the roots of your plants will soon become diseased and the plant will become sickly and soon die.

Wash the foliage at least once a week, using a soft cloth or a camel's hair brush. If a small quantity of sweet milk is added to the wash water, it will give the foliage a glossy look that will add much to the attractiveness of the plant.

If the plant seems inclined to stand still and produce no more leaves, make an application of some good fertilizer and examine the condition of the soil at the same time, to make sure that it has not been injured by undue retention of water.

Do not repot your plants until you are sure that the old pots are filled with roots. The plants should be interfered with as little as possible. An annual repotting is not necessary unless the plants are root bound.

In repotting slip the ball of earth out of the pot and set it in another one a size or two larger, and fill in about it with fresh soil. On no account scrape the soil away from the roots. To do so often causes the death of the plant. Large pots and frequent repotting are not necessary if the soil is kept well supplied with nutriment by the use of fertilizers.

BAD BREATH

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets Get at the Cause and Remove It.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, act gently on the bowels and positively do the work.

People afflicted with bad breath find quick relief through Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The pleasant, sugar-coated tablets are taken for bad breath by all who know them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets act gently but firmly on the bowels and liver, stimulating them to natural action, clearing the blood and gently purifying the entire system.

They do that which dangerous calomel does without any of the bad after-effects.

All the benefits of nasty, sickening, griping cathartics are derived from Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets without griping pain or disagreeable effects of any kind.

Dr. F. M. Edwards discovered the formula after seventeen years of practice among patients afflicted with bowel and liver complaint with the attendant bad breath.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are purely a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color. Take one or two every night for a week and note the effect. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

Hair on Face
Neck and Arms

This method for removing superfluous hair from face, neck and arms or under the arms is totally different from pastes and rub-on preparations, which merely remove hair from the surface of the skin. To rob hair of its vitality you must use De Miracle original liquid depilatory. It attacks hair under the skin as well as on the skin. Imitations of De Miracle are as worthless as pastes and rub-on preparations, because they lack certain ingredients that De Miracle alone contains which gives it the power to devitalize hair. Insist on the genuine De Miracle and you will get the best hair remover ever offered the public. Be sure to buy De Miracle by name and you will avoid disappointment. In $1.00 and $2.00 bottles. If your dealer will not supply you, buy a bottle at The Public Drug Co. or Buck & Rayner's five stores, or order direct from De Miracle Chemical Co., Dept. C-36, Park Ave. and 129th St., New York.

Magazines of the highest character endorse only De Miracle.
ELITE STYLES SAYS:
"It is worthy of the highest praise."

POSLAM QUICKLY CLEARS THE SKIN

Heals Aggravating Affections, Causing Them to Disappear.

Broken-out skin is unpleasant to see, distressing to endure. There should be on your medicine shelf a remedy for this above all physical disorders. When it comes to a choice accept nothing less efficient than Poslam.

Try Poslam; compare it. Know the intensity of its healing power, the rapidity of its action. And it can serve you in many ways; from clearing an inflamed complexion overnight to eradicating Eczema, Acne and stubborn diseases.

Poslam Soap is doubly agreeable, doubly beneficial for the skin because medicated with Poslam.

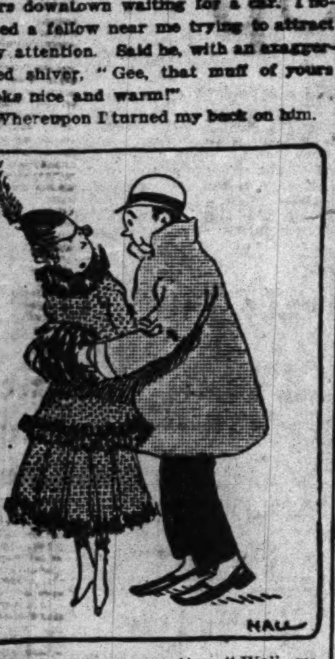
Have You Met a Nervy Flirt?

Who was the nerviest flirt you ever met? What did he say? And what did you say? Was the incident funny or otherwise? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Write on one side of page only. No manuscripts returned. Address Nervy Flirt Editor, "The Chicago Sunday Tribune."

In Broad Daylight.

I was standing on one of the main corners downtown waiting for a car. I noticed a fellow near me trying to attract my attention. Said he, with an exaggerated shiver, "Gee, that muff of yours looks nice and warm!"

Whereupon I turned my back on him.



Then I heard him mutter, "Well, my girl, I'll get you yet." And what should he do but come up behind me, put both arms around me, and stick his hands in my muff! And this in broad daylight, and right downtown!

Well, I gave him an awful jab in the ribs with my elbow and managed to free myself. Nervy? That was the last word in nerve.

Then Her Escort Came.

I was riding on a passenger train recently and found considerable amusement watching the activities of a dapper young traveling man whose eyes continually sought those of young women in the car in a bold attempt at flirtation.

A comely young woman sat directly in front of him, and it was upon her that he soon concentrated his attention. At first the young fellow attempted to win a word by passing a magazine. This offer was rejected by a curt jerk of the head. The next attempt was in the form of a box of candy, which I amusedly watched the insistent fellow buy from the train boy. This, too, was rejected with equal frigidity. Finally the young fellow dropped an orange to the floor of the car, kicked it gently so that it rolled to the feet of the young woman, leaned forward, retrieved the fruit, bowed and handed it to her. "I believe you dropped this,," I heard him say. "Thank you," she said sweetly and this time smiled.

At that moment a man entered the car and sat down in the seat beside the attraction. The next minute I saw the young lady hand the man the orange, saw him bite into it, heard him smack his lips in keen enjoyment—and then I saw a much disgruntled young traveling man fiercely burying himself in the folds of a newspaper.

She Went Right After Him.

One day I was riding my motorcycle when I was hailed by a girl on the street corner. Thinking she wanted information, I stopped and went to her side. But believe me, she didn't want information, but—a husband. She then asked me to take her for a ride. I hardly knew what to do, but I soon found out, because she was already on the rear seat of my motorcycle. Presently the motorcycle stopped and I discovered we were out of gasoline. Before I knew it she was suggesting that I marry her. I beat a hasty retreat and thought of all the nerve—well, this was the limit.

Like a Girl in a Book.

Before we were married my husband used often to put his face close to mine and say: "Your hair is so soft and pretty that I love to feel it brush my face." I felt like a girl in a book.

After we had been married about six years I was one day standing quite close to him, and I felt him jerk away impatiently.

"What's the matter?" I inquired.

"O, it's your hair. If I get anywhere near you it always flies in my face and tickles me. It makes me wild. I do wish you'd brush it up tighter."

I felt like a woman in a book, all right but the story wasn't a happy one.

She Looked Kind Hearted.

I met him out at Ravinia, and as he was pleasing and smiling, we soon became acquainted, and he invited me to go to a restaurant to eat. I went and when we had eaten to repletion he asked me to loan him the price to pay for it. I had to or we would have both been thrown out. Then he told me that he was broke, and I looked the easiest of all the girls he had seen on the grounds, hence his advances toward me. Since then I have never known whether flirts are nervy or otherwise, for I hand them the "frost" as soon as I detect them.

M. E.

His Nerve Was Unlimited.

One evening my sister and I spent the evening at a picture show. As we started home, a young man stepped up between us and walked with us. I thought he was a friend of my sister's, and didn't say anything for quite a while. I noticed she didn't say anything to him. I asked her if he was a friend. She said she had never seen him before. I asked him where he thought he was going. He said he intended to take me home. I told him I was married. He said then he would go with my sister. I told him my sister didn't keep company with strangers. He said he was no stranger, but had been in town three weeks and was a brakeman and wanted to get acquainted. He said he had rented a room. I told him if he didn't leave at once I would call a policeman. He said he wished I would, then he would show him where his room was.

We stopped and told him we wouldn't go another step with him, and if he didn't leave we would call for help. After much parleying he tipped his cap, saying he would take us home some other evening. He certainly was a nervy flirt.

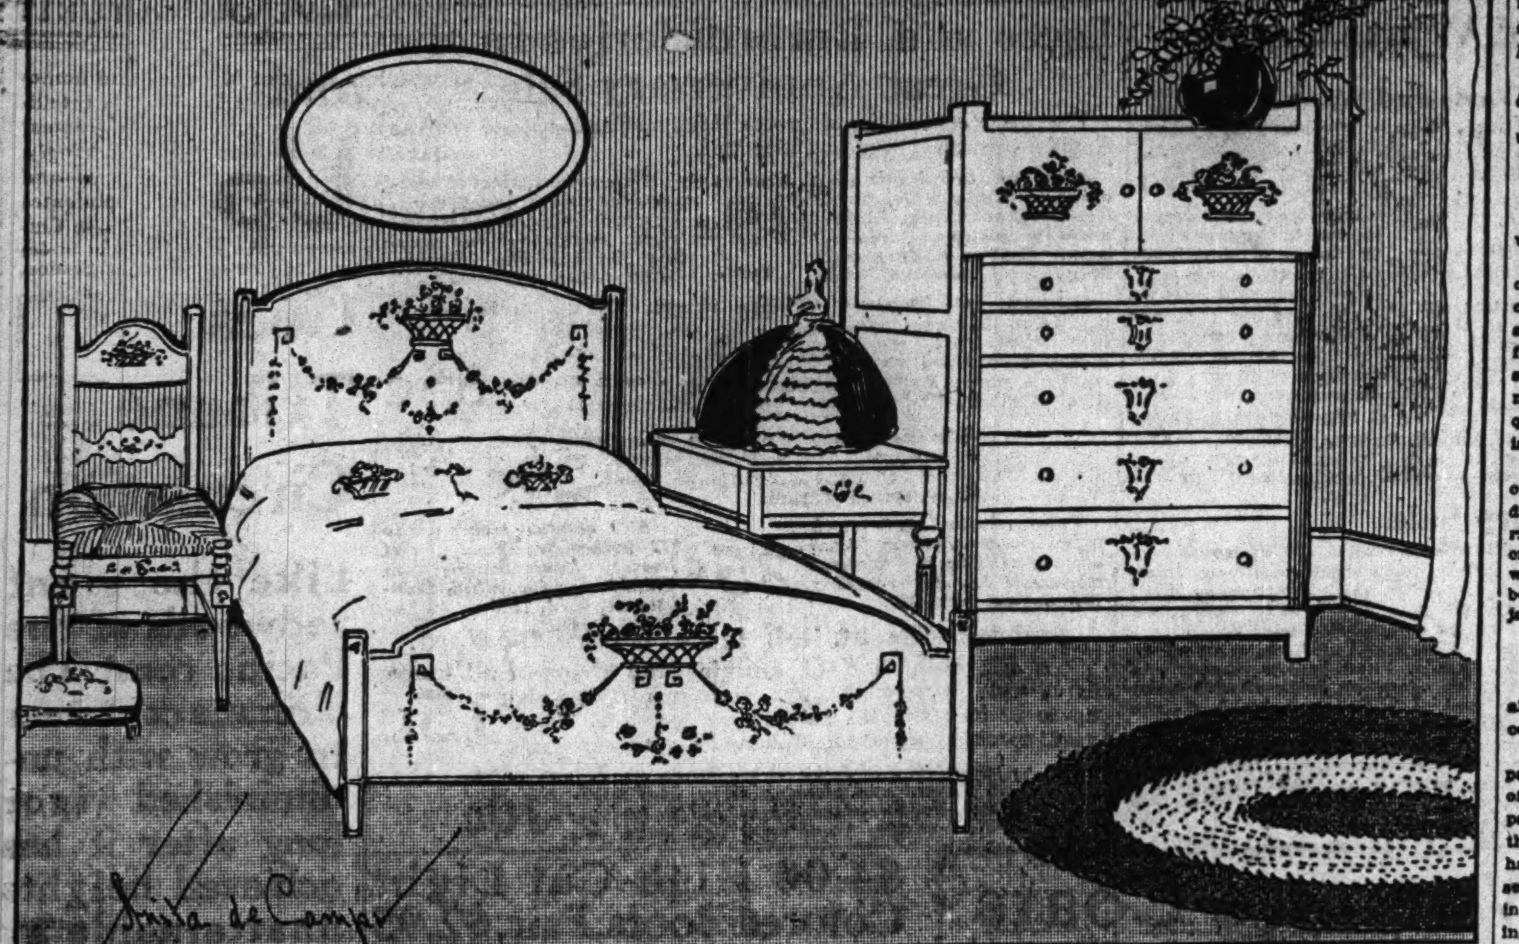
Stamping Designs on Furniture

Anita de Campi



Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope if you wish a personal reply.

TO any one who can do embroidery the feat of hand painting ornaments on furniture is a simple one. It is easier than doing embroidery work, far more quickly done, and requires less skill and patience.

Here is the secret of my discovery, which brings furniture decoration within the scope of embroidery workers. It is this: Patterns, such as shirtwaist embroidery patterns, chemise patterns, pillow, doily, and baby robe patterns, all having flowers pictured on them that were designed to be stamped off by means of hot irons on to linen, to be embroidered, can just as easily be stamped off on to furniture. Yesterday I spent the day experimenting and painted ornamental designs on the entire set of furniture shown in the accompanying illustration. The whole thing was dry, hard, and fast, and ready for use within twelve hours.

Now I am going to tell you simply the whole method of procedure. First, you select a pattern with sprays or wreaths or baskets of flowers on it—the kind that transfer by hot iron process, choosing the kind in embroidery, or "satin embroidery" sort, in preference to the cross stitch or more complicated kind, as the satin stitch patterns give the best outlines. Some of these patterns come in sprays, as many as thirty-six sprays to a pattern. It is well to cut them apart before starting to transfer them, then with a tiny dab of library paste, here and there at the edges, tack them down to the places you mean to transfer them.

A little wreath is lovely around each keyhole of the chiffonier drawers. A narrow running pattern [meant to be embroidered on a collar] is just the thing to stamp across the splats [the backs] of wooden chairs, etc.

Of course, you cannot press the iron flat on the pattern laid on the furniture, as you do to transfer on cloth, for if you did the enamel might blister. You take just the tip of the iron and run it along the lines. The lines on the pattern are printed in colored paraffin, this melts on to the wood—you can see it melt its impression on the wood as you go along. A flat iron serves all purpose for this work, though if you happen to have a soldering iron it is easier to use than a flat iron. You run the nose of the iron right along the lines. The paper sticks. When you see that it is all done, pull this paper off, and there are your sprays of flowers on the wood and the enamel is not injured at all. Care must be taken not to have the iron hot enough to scorch.

The patterns come in blue lines. These are for use on white or light grounds. They also come in light yellow lines. These transfer quite as well on black or dark grounds.

When you see the leaves and petals stamped you will realize immediately that it is really not as hard to fill those outlines in with paint as it would be to fill them in with embroidery.

If you mistrust yourself in the matter of selecting colors there is always the alternative of filling in with a solid color, deep blue, for example. You know exactly how that is going to look, because you have seen it often enough in chinaware, blue on white.

About the kind of paint and how to mix it hand how to use it. Choose enamel paint that comes in small tin cans. It costs 15 cents a can. Get five cans—red, yellow, blue, black, and white. Pour a little of each color into a small cup. Nests of shallow cups can be had from any art supply house. Pour a little white into the blue and red if you want pink and pale blue, and mix blue and yellow in a separate cup to make green, and red and blue into a separate cup to make purple. Have as many separate cups as there are shades and colors you may wish to use. If the paint thickens up before you have finished your work add a little turpentine to it.

Now begin painting. Fill in all the pink petals at one time, then all the blue, all the green, etc. Use a small sable brush and be careful to cover the edge of the printed line, just as you would if embroidering. Fill the colors in flatly. The less attempt that is made at shading the better the result will be. Leave the stems and fine lines until the last, because the paint must be thinned down for these. Have a good sized cup full of turpentine at hand and rinse the brush clean in this every time you change colors and wipe it on a cloth.

Five tins of color are enough to paint several sets of furniture, because you only use a little at a time. The cups can be cleaned with turpentine before the paint hardens. Enamelac paint is better than ordinary oil paint, as it is not smeary. It dries quickly and is water proof and does not smudge or rub, once it has hardened.

Many decorators make a mystery of this sort of work, and the price they charge for doing it is prohibitive. To be sure, if they create original designs they are warranted in charging well for them, but many of the embroidery designs are lovely enough for the average room.

Any one who doubts her ability to do this work, before attempting to decorate her new enameled set might try this scheme out on some small piece. Nests of wooden boxes, the outside one a little larger than a layer cake, with a number of smaller ones inside, can be had for 50 cents. These are good things to practice on.

An interesting point in the ensemble of the room is that, if embroidery patterns are chosen for the painting, the same patterns can be repeated on the embroidery. A washable cushion cover in white linen for the chair seat may match the painted chair back. And the same holds good for bedspread, bolster, shams, and dresser covers.

Answers to Inquiries.

A. M. S.: I see no objection to a slight variation in style of furniture which you suggest using in one room, provided it harmonizes in scale and material.

* *

H. J. L.: In your sun parlor lighted by means of a large skylight I believe that white wicker would be too glaring. If you use green wicker and green lattice work you would detract in a measure from the plants, vines, bay trees, etc., which you expect to put into the room. These, together with the green rugs which you already have, make quite enough green as they stand. It would be better to have your wicker chairs and your lattice work in gray to match the color of the cement floor. Bright touches of color can be had by the use of chintz cushions, etc.

For and By BUSINESS GIRLS

Mary King.

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer send a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Address Miss Mary King, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

The First Day at Work.

IS there any business girl, I wonder, who can truthfully say that she did not suffer from embarrassment and self-consciousness her first day or two at work? Some girls get over their first self-consciousness more quickly than others, but I doubt if there are many girls who escape it entirely.

I have had a letter from a girl who suffered agonies of embarrassment when she started to work in her first position, and even now, after working for a month, she says she has not entirely overcome her self-consciousness. There are a number of girls working in the office with her, and her first day in the office with them she imagined that every one of them watched everything she did and that they were all aware that she was extremely slow about doing her work. If any one happened to come near her desk she became so confused that she made a great many mistakes.

She says she went home after her first day too worn out to eat her dinner and went straight to bed and cried herself to sleep. She decided that she would never be anything but a flat failure in the business world. She dreaded going back to the office the next day, but not wanting to admit defeat right at the start, she did go back with a heavy heart. She was sure she would never become accustomed to the work and could not imagine herself becoming well enough acquainted with the other girls in the office to speak to them except when it was absolutely necessary. Rather than bother any of the girls asking them questions about the work when she did not understand it she used her own judgment about it and did the work the wrong way.

Now, she says, she has found that she can do the work all right and has discovered that the girls are all extremely nice girls and are only too glad to give her assistance when she needs it. What still bothers her is that she is always embarrassed before her employer. Every time he comes to her desk she says she can feel herself flush and his presence makes her too nervous to answer him intelligently.

She is trying hard to overcome her self-consciousness, but is finding it hard work and wonders if all beginners are as nervous starting out as she has been.

This is an extreme case, I think, as most girls have overcome their self-consciousness after having been working a month. It seems to me that the older girls in the office with this girl could have helped her a great deal by telling her as soon as she started to work with them that they would be only too glad to explain anything about the work which she did not understand. They might have volunteered their assistance and not waited until she asked for it.

The self-conscious girl is decidedly at a disadvantage. She cannot do justice to herself and show that she has ability when the mere sight of her employer throws her into confusion. This is something that the beginner should fight hard to overcome.

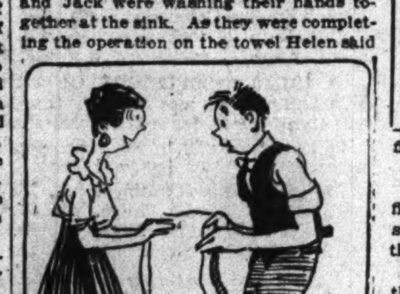
It would be easier for her starting out if she would remember that every man and woman in business had to make a start, and that an employer is always willing to make allowance for a new employé who is unfamiliar with the work of his office, and is especially lenient with a girl who has never worked before.

Does Woman Ever Propose?

Did you ever know a woman who proposed? "The Sunday Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Your name will not be published. Address Doris Blake, "The Tribune," Chicago.

He Added Finishing Touches.

It happened in the kitchen while Helen and Jack were washing their hands together at the sink. As they were completing the operation on the towel Helen said impulsively with a laugh: "Wash and wipe together, live in peace forever."



For answer Jack asked: "Together?" He accepted her blush as the only answer necessary.

That was five years ago. They've been "together" ever since, and now have a golden haired 8 year old sunbeam to add to their happiness. He insists that she proposed, but he admits he added the finishing touches to the proposal.

E. R. T.

Arthur, so Mabel says, blushed, but finally managed to say that he thought she would be the finest Christmas present that he had ever received.

The engagement was announced before the party broke up, the date is set for June, and I am to be maid of honor.

Chose Tapestry Together.

Yes, women do propose. I had found my ideal girl, but had never dared to propose. I told her one day I was about to refurnish my little bachelor apartment.

"I will buy nice things," I said, "that I can use when I am married."

"What will you buy for your living room?" she said.

"Mahogany, done in Spanish leather," I replied.

"O, no," she said quickly. "Get a pretty tapestry—I like it much better than leather."

Then she blushed—but "the barriers were burned." I had her in my arms and we chose the tapestry together.

The Tribune Cook Book

by JANE EDDINGTON

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

THE timely article for today would be on pancakes. March 7 is Shrove Tuesday, which for many years was called pancake day in England. One of the church bells of the day was called the pancake bell.

The pancake was the home made bread of the days when there were no ovens except public ones for the common people, as in some parts of the world today—as, for instance, in the city of Rome. Outside the city in regions where there would not be enough patrons for such an oven a queer deep pan with a cover holding coals is used. It is called "the country oven."

In Ireland and Scotland the home breads of the poor are baked on griddles or girdles, and it is astonishing how many varieties are produced. One of these, the crumpet, is a sister to the English muffin, which also is baked on a griddle, both being thicker and better than our flapjack, although a thinner cake yet, the French crêpe, is elegant when rightly cooked.

But it was undoubtedly a happy day for the health of a great mass of the people when the famous Scotch porridge was adopted by a larger portion of the world for breakfast, taking the place of a raised cake baked in grease. Although grease is not necessary to all griddles, it is commonly used and all too commonly burned. Burned fat produces an acid that is highly irritating to the digestive canal as well as most disagreeable in the house.

If a family has a mind it is remarkable how far it can make cereal dishes, including rice and hominy as well as those of meals and rolled oats, take the place of breads which are not so simple or easy of digestion when of the best, always provided that the cereal is well cooked.

Mrs. H. L. K., Kokomo, Ind., writes: "Won't you kindly publish an article some time on the preparation of the cereals and amounts used in making cereal beverages?"

First let us say what is eminently true, that cereals are cooked for too short a time and made too thick. If the experiment given below is tried something about this matter of unpalatable thickness will be understood, and also a little about the difference in palatability between cooked and half cooked cereals. Directions on packages almost always allow too little water.

There are various ways of cooking cereals, and it is never necessary to stir a meal into boiling water. Every one of the meals may be started in cold water, with more or less of stirring until the boiling point is reached, and constantly after if the cereal is over much fire.

The government and state experiment stations have done a great deal to help people to understand the value of the cereals as food. The last free price list on "Foods and Cooking," which one can get by writing to the superintendent of documents, Washington, D. C., will give the list of publications. The contents of farmers' bulletin 249 is summarized as follows: "Some of the questions considered are the preparation of modern cereal breakfast foods, their composition and digestibility, cooking, the absorption of water by cereals, the relative cost of cereal breakfast foods, and their place in the diet." The price is 5 cents.

Experiment stations bulletin 200, price 10 cents, of seventy-eight pages, as "a course in cereal foods and their preparation for movable schools of agriculture," by Margaret J. Mitchell of Drexel institute. This was published in 1906 and there are newer ideas about cooking, but this contains valuable recipes and a great deal of instructive material on the composition of foods, their digestion, preparation, etc. Only one of the fifteen [illegible] of this is devoted to cereals as breakfast foods. There are some valuable [illegible] on this subject in some recent books the names of which I will give if a stamped addressed envelope is sent.

What Miss Mitchell says about the things appearing on all food subjects is truer today than eight years ago. "Foods," she says, "and the principles of nutrition are being studied to such an extent that in a short time there will be valuable data bearing on the subject that are not yet published."

The oatmeal problem is given below to show how any woman may find out how much liquid she likes in her breakfast cereal, as well as how to cook it. There is no hard and fast rule. Cornmeal, hominy, ground rice, and all the cereal foods, perhaps, are greatly improved in palatability by cooking them in milk, and because milk contains solids it can take up less of the meal than water. Too much salt is almost always [illegible], and, as some one has said, it is carrying coals to Newcastle to eat sugar with a cereal, as people of pampered tastes do. Butter is good with those cooked in milk and a more natural addition.

Three Oatmeal Experiments.

The following experiments are my own, although they are similar to those done in cooking laboratories:

Put one cup of rolled oats into the upper part of a double boiler and add two cups of cold water (most packages say two parts water and to have it boiling). Stir this directly over fire until it boils and has cooked from five to ten minutes, then set in lower kettle and cook for one hour in just enough water to keep latter boiling. Directions on packages say cook thirty or forty minutes, but if you cook this at the same time as the next you will find by comparing the two that even one hour does not cook it enough. With just fire enough to keep the water boiling it will not all boil away, as in careless cooking. Oatmeal cooked thus will be thick enough to hold its shape when turned from a mould, but for some people it is not as palatable as when thinner, or when more of the starch has been cooked to a jelly. Compare with next:

Put one cup of oatmeal into an aluminum kettle with a cover which will clamp down. Add four cups of cold water, cook, and stir until it boils, cover and set over simmering burner turned about as low as it can be turned, to cook for one hour or two, as you choose. If the flame of the simmering burner comes near the bottom of the kettle, the contents will boil out unless the kettle is absurdly large for the work done. As starch burns on readily, it will soon catch to kettle and spoil flavor if there is too much fire. At the end of an hour this oatmeal will be smooth and soft and have none of the starchy taste that the first has. It is really twice as much cooked probably, and over much less fire. For delicate digestions strain out the part that has not dissolved completely. This will be like a thick gruel and can be heated and thinned a little with boiling water if necessary to drink. More than four cups of water can be used at the start if a thinner gruel is wanted.

The cooking of cereals over night in a fireless cooker is an ideal method. Put one cup of oatmeal into a small cooker kettle, add three cups of cold water or a little less, if you find you prefer it of different consistency when cooked, stir over fire until cooked for ten minutes at boiling temperature, cover tight, and put into cooker. If the small kettle is set on a large kettle of boiling water and a kettle inverted over that, the oatmeal will be hot in the morning, but this is of no particular consequence, since it can be easily heated up. A stone is not needed, and if used the procedure must be different. This oatmeal will seem little different from that cooked over a simmering burner.

Barley Water.

Barley water, which is partaken of by invalids, high society, and even by prizefighters, is made by gently cooking barley a long time in enough water to make a considerable quantity of thin liquid. Eight times as much liquid as barley cooked over the simmering burner for three hours, or over night in a fireless cooker, gives a beverage which may be sweetened and flavored, while the solid part is a palatable breakfast cereal and may be used for muffins, etc., as most cooked cereals can.

Cornmeal Mush.

The old hasty pudding kettle was of heavy iron used directly over the fire, as is the polenta (mush) kettle of the Italians and Swiss. The requisite quantity of water was boiled in it and the dry meal stirred into the water with a wooden or mush stick. This required an expert, as the steam would dampen the meal in the hand or it would run in too fast and make lumps. If this method is used today it is a good plan to put the meal on a platter and let it run in slowly while the stirring is constant. This method is hard because as the mush thickens it is likely to spit hot drops which burn the hand.

Farmers' bulletin 565, with many recipes for cooking cornmeal and much information about it, advocates the starting of this mush with a cold liquid, three and a half times as much water as meal, or if milk is used, four or more times as much as meal. It advises four hours' cooking for double boiler, or from five to ten hours in a fireless cooker. It may be cooked, it seems to me, so as to be perfectly wholesome, directly over a tiny bit of fire in much less time, especially in milk. I use two tablespoons only of meal to a cup of milk and start them cold. If cooked in a fireless cooker the meal swells six times usually, and will come out beautifully jellied. In larger quantities less liquid is often required. For a jellied meal add three cups of cold water to one half cup of meal, and if you like it, two even teaspoons of sugar. Cook ten minutes after it boils, directly over the fire, stirring all the time, then put in cooker over night. This will come out like jelly.

Farina, cream of wheat, and other meals may be cooked in the same way as cornmeal.

Reply to Inquiry.

R. N.: It is a problem to make a [illegible] satisfactory menu for people one knows nothing about, to be prepared by those whose skill and equipment are also unknown. You ask, as others do not infrequently, for an "inexpensive meal." I wish you had said just how much per person you wanted to spend. "Inexpensive" may mean anything from 10 to 50 cents. Any fine egg dish, a silver or banana omelet for instance, is suitable for a luncheon at this season. Some dainty hot vegetable and some green thing, like cress for a palatable garnish, with thin bread and butter sandwiches, and nice individual custards of some type will give people a sense of being prettily served and well fed.

LEFT HAND A MASS OF PIMPLES

Started With Water Pimples Between Fingers. Was Swollen. Could Not Put it in Water.

HEALED BY CUTICURA SOAP AND OINTMENT

"My skin trouble started with a few water pimples between the fingers of my left hand. My hand was red and inflamed always and it itched so I had to do something, so I would rub it with a rough cloth until it looked as if it were ready to burst and bleed, and I was kept awake at night with it. It got to be a mass of pimples inside and out, and was swollen, and I could not put it in water nor use it much.

"A friend told me how Cuticura Soap and Ointment helped her so I got them, and my hand was entirely healed." (Signed) Miss Norma Lee, 157 W. Main St., Battle Creek, Mich., Aug. 6, 1915.

Grandmother was deeply shocked over little Hugh's boisterous behavior at the lunch table. Finally, with a disapproving glance at Hugh, grandmother left the table saying that somebody needed punishment. Hugh seemed to ponder over this and presently slipped away to grandmother's room.

"Well, my boy?" said she, thinking he had come to apologize.

"Grandmother," said Hugh sweetly, "if you will be very good now you may come back to the table." D. B.

George was relating at the breakfast table his dream of the preceding night. In the middle of his narrative he became confused, blushed, and stammered, "What did happen next?" Then suddenly his face lighted up and he turned to his father: "You tell it, daddy; you were there." A. M.

My husband and I were discussing valentines when our young hopeful, Daniel, spoke up and said, "O, gee! we had a valentine party at our school and Frederick B— got more valentines than anybody else." I remarked that Frederick must be pretty well liked. Quick as a flash came the reply: "He is; he's the best fighter in our class." H. M.

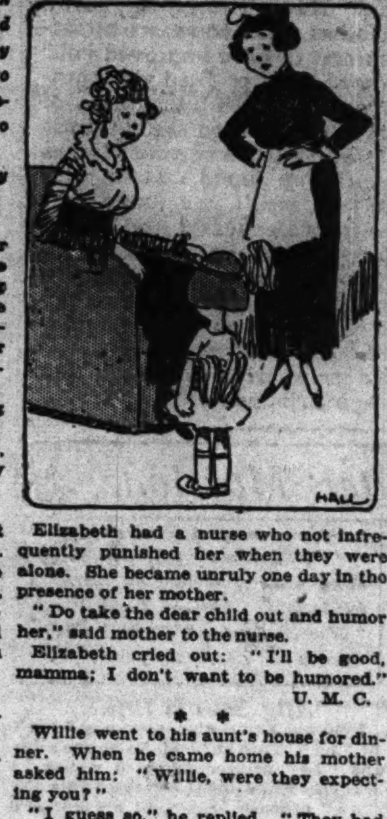
Mary asked her mother if she could have some raisins.

"Yes, you can take a handful," said her mother.

"Well, mother, won't you give me a handful?" replied little Mary. "Your hand is bigger than mine." O. E. L.



Elizabeth had a nurse who not infrequently punished her when they were alone. She became unruly one day in tho presence of her mother.

"Do take the dear child out and humor her," said mother to the nurse.

Elizabeth cried out: "I'll be good, mamma; I don't want to be humored." U. M. C.

Our house being rather uncomfortable on account of the cold snap and our efforts to hurry the furnace having no noticeable effect, I asked little Marion to go over to the register and see if it was getting warmer. She obeyed and soon came running back saying, "Mamma, there's nothing but cold heat coming up." R. H. V.

When I was 10 my brother and I were boarding at the same place where a little girl of 4 was staying with her parents. One evening she came running into the room, saying to me, "Your husband's coming. You'd better go meet him."

"Why, that's my brother, Tiny," I said.

"Then, who is your husband?"

"I haven't any husband."

The little girl looked at me, astonishment and pity in her eyes. "We—ll," she returned slowly, "you ought to have. You're a grown up lady like my mamma." M. L. A.

Margaret was pouting about retiring at her usual bedtime. Her mother thinking to settle things quietly, decided to play upon Margaret's usually tender feelings.

"Dearie," she said, "just think of all the sweet little girls in the world, who would be so glad to have a nice, warm bed to sleep in tonight, and a good, loving mother, like yours, to care enough for them to see that they get the proper rest, so they will grow big and strong."

Margaret, sitting on her father's lap, looked up at him smilingly and said: "Daddy, just listen to mother appreciating herself." C. F.

One day I took my small daughter into a confectionery store for ice cream soda. The proprietor, who was bald but had a long, flowing beard, waited on us. Daughter was so absorbed in looking at him that she neglected her soda and when I called her attention to it she burst out with "Mamma, he's got lots of hair hanging down, but he hasn't any hanging up." Glen is the oldest of five children all of whom have measles. The mother asked the family doctor what he would do if he had five babies.

He replied: "One is enough for me."

Up spoke Glen: "Well, if one is enough for you why did you bring us so many?" Mrs. G. L. V.

One day at school Roberta was asked to cut a tulip out of paper. This she could not do, so her mamma told her to cut out whatever she could. The next day when she came home she said: "I cut out a street car today, instead of a tulip, but I know by the look on teacher's face she didn't believe it was one." N. G. B.

When a 4 year old protested rather vehemently against an admonition of her mother's at table one day her father interposed.

"Rachel," he said, "you had better obey your mother."

"All right," she responded, "I will, but I'll have my own thinks." E. W. C.

Monkey in Her Hair.

I have a huge mop of curley hair which requires a great many hair pins to keep up, and I seldom wear a hat. One day while on a crowded street corner waiting for a car an organ grinder and his monkey stopped near me. Mr. Monk espied my head and made a leap for it. He hung on with all his might, and to my great embarrassment picked every pin from my hair, putting them in his mouth. He then run his paws through my hair, and squeaked with delight until he was coaxed away by a shower of pennies from the much entertained bystanders. E. C.

Dropped Her Pie.

My most embarrassing moment occurred in the office where I work. At noon I usually stepped across the street to a small delicatessen, where I bought my pie.

This day I had my arms heaped with packages. One of these packages contained a piece of lemon cream pie. I reached the office all right, but just as I stepped inside of the door, where the manager had been conversing with one of the head men of the firm, I dropped the pie right at the gentleman's feet. Of course, I stood there in a dumfounded position, with my eyes set on the pie scattered all over the floor.

I finally gathered courage enough to scrape the pie up in a pile, and as I was doing so I happened to glance up, and found the manager stepping to my side to inform me that the colored porter would finish cleaning up the pie. After this had happened the manager suggested that there be a cafeteria built on the upper floor, so the girls wouldn't have to eat their lunch at their desks. B. W.

Met Wife No. 1.

During my first year in the ministry I was called upon one day to officiate at the funeral of Mr. Grey, a stranger, whose body was brought to our city on the train and a service in the chapel at the cemetery arranged for. The widow, who was the second wife, handed me a short obituary sketch in which he was praised as "an ideal husband," and I read it just as she had written.

The following day as I entered a street car, a woman passenger moved to the seat beside me and proceeded to "bawl me out" for reading those words of praise. Her voice rose louder and louder, and when she finished her tirade, the listening passengers must have felt that I had buried the meanest man that ever lived.

She was Mrs. Grey number one and had availed herself of the privilege, attending this funeral the day before. Accompanying her on the car was husband number two, and I honestly believe that woman's lecture was at once the most embarrassing moment of life for both him and me. The Rev. J. C.

Wore Boss' Shoes.

I was employed as a stenographer in the office of a serious minded man. One morning Mr. B. informed me that he would be absent for the afternoon and I decided, as my feet ached badly, to put on an old pair of Mr. B.'s shoes (several sizes too large) to rest my feet.

Mr. B. changed his mind, however, and returned to the office in a very short time and, as ill luck would have it, started looking for his old shoes. That was really a very embarrassing moment to me. F. M. W.

Barked Like a Dog.

There is an unfortunate woman in our town that barks like a dog. Well, one day I went to the country to buy a setting hen. Having secured one, I started for the street car, I got on the car and noticed the poor, unfortunate woman sitting across the aisle, toward the front end of the car.

Whenever this woman would bark the hen would cackle. The car was in a scene of laughter. I wanted to get off, but knowing the next car would not come for an hour, I decided to stay where I was.

I tried and tried to keep the hen from answering her but it was all in vain. So I had to sit in embarrassment for all of a two mile ride. E. C.

Hot Water Each Morning Puts Roses in Your Cheeks

To look one's best and feel one's best is to enjoy an inside bath each morning to flush from the system the previous day's waste, sour fermentations and poisonous toxins before it is absorbed into the blood. Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken each day leave in the alimentary organs a certain amount of indigestible material, which, if not eliminated, forms toxins and poisons which are then sucked into the blood through the very ducts which are intended to suck in only nourishment to sustain the body.

If you want to see the glow of healthy bloom in your cheeks, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, you are told to drink every morning, upon arising, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless means of washing the waste material and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract, before putting more food into the stomach.

Girls and women with sallow skins, liver spots, pimples or pallid complexion, also those who wake up with a coated tongue, bad taste, nasty breath, others who are bothered with headaches, bilious spells, acid stomach or constipation, should begin this phosphated hot water drinking, and are assured of very pronounced results in one or two weeks.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, purifies and freshens the skin on the outside, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the inside organs. We must always consider that internal sanitation is vastly more important than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.

Women who desire to enhance the beauty of their complexion should just try this for a week and notice results.—Advertisement.

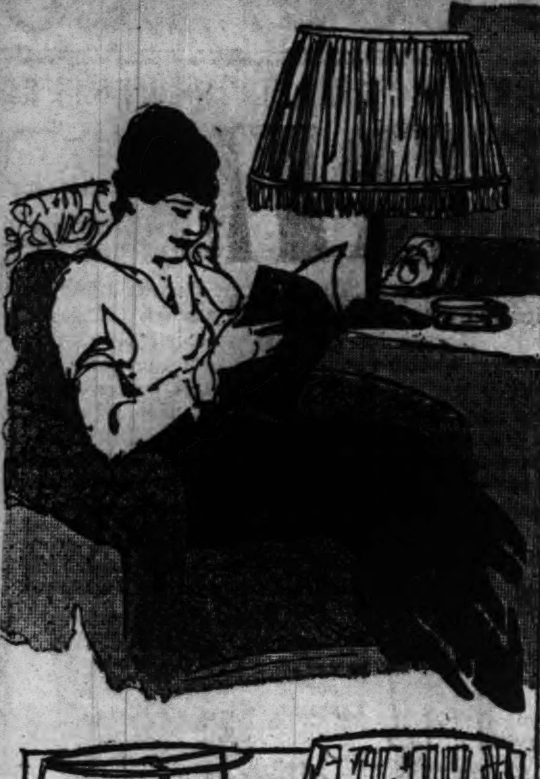
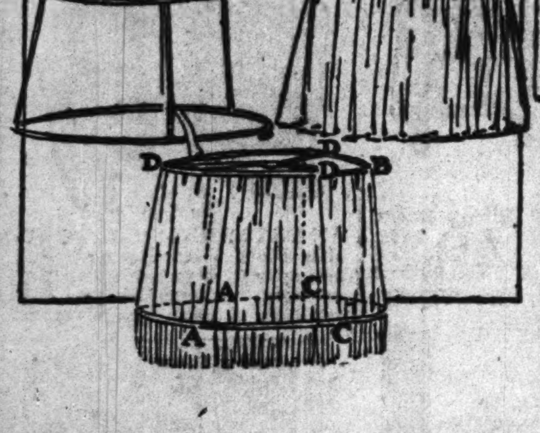
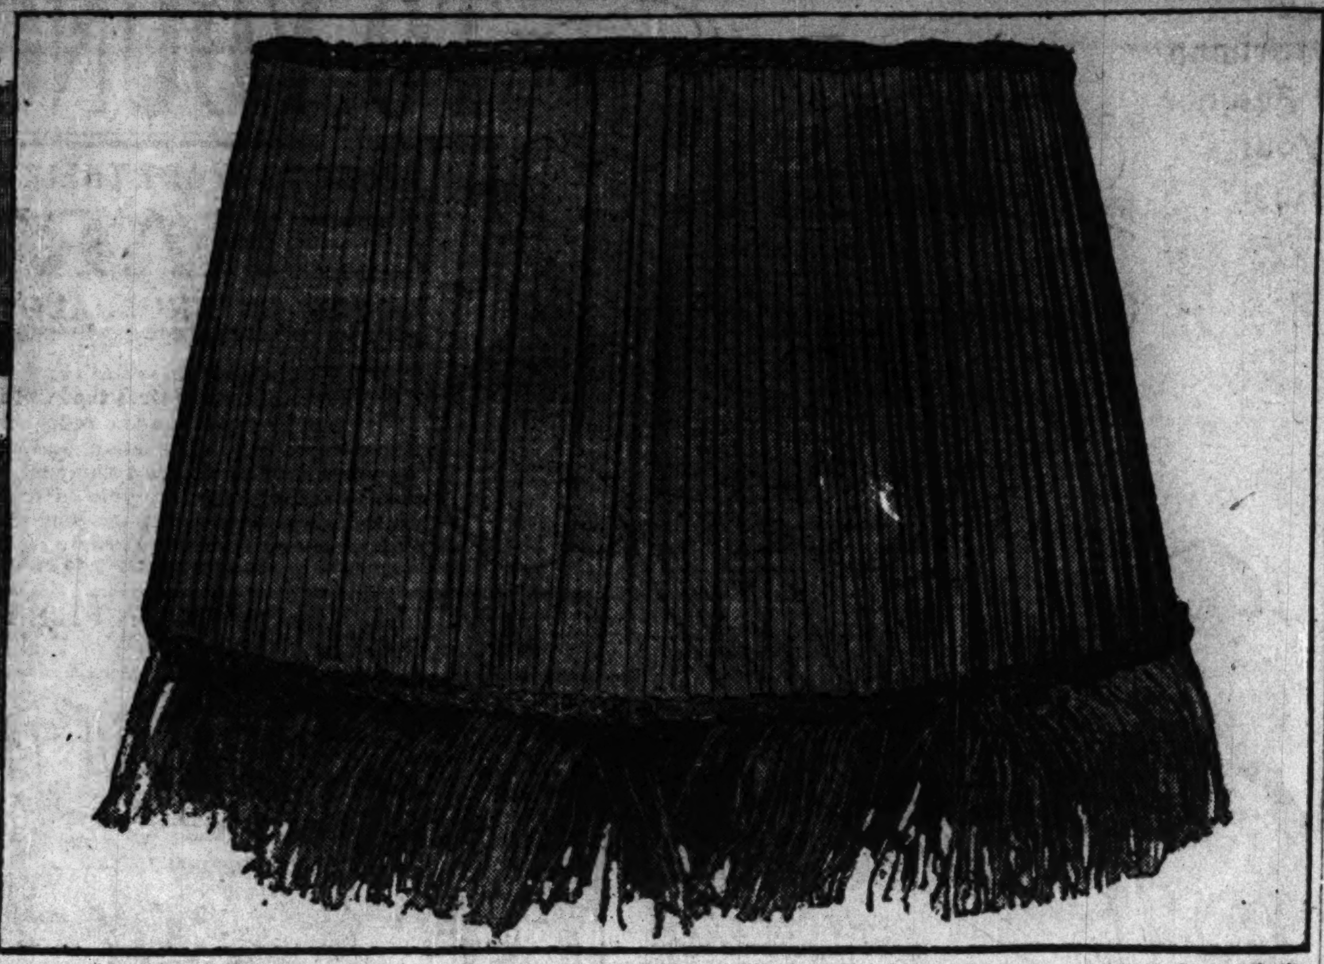
EMPIRE SHADE







DIRECTIONS FOR MAKING AN EMPIRE LAMP SHADE.

Materials required: One yard of 27-inch silk, one yard of white china silk for lining, one and five-eighths yards of fringe to match silk, three yards of gilt trimming from 1 to ½-inch wide.

Select an 18-inch Empire frame on which all wires are straight and the angles made at the juncture of up and down wires and lower wires are perfect. Tear enough 1½-inch strips of the white China or Japanese silk, fold these strips in half, then begin to wind at the joining of up and down wire with down. Wind the top and bottom wires marked "A" and "B." In winding three things must be kept in mind—that the wires are completely covered; that the winding is extremely tight, for in pulling the silk to the top the work begins to slide; and that no ravelings show.

Now cut the silk crosswise into three strips 12 inches deep. Notch each strip half way across at top and bottom. Next pin the strips to the bottom wire placing the selvage edges together at points marked "A." Lay a small fold so as to hide the selvage edges. Pin the notched places at points marked "C." Gather and pin so that gathers are distributed evenly.

Sew at the bottom with small and firm stitches. Then pull the silk to the top, being particularly careful to have all the plaits straight up and down. Pin the gatherings at intervals and sew, making plaiting fine. Now trim ravelings closely at top and bottom.

Divide white silk into two strips 18 inches deep and 27 inches wide, sew to the outside lower edge with edge down. Then draw down and up in the inside. Pull evenly, making small slits at points marked "D" over the top and sew to the outside. Trim closely to the top.

The fringe is sewed to the bottom wires. After that put the trimming on so that no stitches show. Lastly sew trimming around the top.

Clothes Tricks That Have Helped My Looks

That "clothes make the woman" is a truism you can't deny. Haven't you found this out? Haven't you found that a change of color scheme in your clothes made you more attractive? Haven't you found good corsets to have improved your figure? Haven't you found rundown heels profited you nothing but disapproval? Haven't you found the adjustment of your hat made a difference? Haven't you found certain dress patterns trying and different lines in the make of your clothes flatteringly transforming? Haven't you found certain neck dressings ugly and others pretty? Haven't you found that feeling of satisfaction that comes from cleanliness and daintiness and exquisite tidiness of dress? I want to find out just what you have found out by your own experience in regard to the important item of dress and its accessories? The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published on "The Clothes Tricks That Have Helped My Looks." Write your experience on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned. Address Antoinette Donnelly, Chicago Tribune.

Before and After Marriage.

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on marriage disillusions. Address Doris Blake, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." Write on only one side of the paper.

Pose Was Puzzling.

Before we were married I had a way of glancing at him through a fringe of pompadour that I wore, which, to quote his own words, he thought adorable. One evening about six months after we were married my husband sat at a table reading, while I sat opposite sewing. Catching his eye, I glanced at him in this same "adorable" manner. He looked at me in a puzzled way for a moment and then exclaimed: "For the love of Mike, what's the matter with your eyes tonight? You look as if you were cross-eyed."

Improved Since the Honeymoon.

During our engagement my fiancé was most generous in his gifts to me and spared no money in taking me to the theater and concerts. When we started on our honeymoon I had some of my own money with me. I supposed, however, that he would tuck a ten or twenty dollar bill into my purse, as I had heard of bridegrooms doing. We had been gone about a week when I reminded him that he had given me no money since we were married.

"Money! What do you need with money?" he asked, and then handed me a dollar bill.

After four years of married life he has proven the most generous of husbands, but I still am unable to persuade him that there is anything incongruous in the fact that he gave me only one dollar to spend upon our wedding trip.

A Work of Art.

Perhaps I should first tell you that I have red hair and the abominable disposition which seems to always go with it.

The three years previous to our marriage St. Valentine's day had always found me with a corsage bouquet of my favorite flowers in my possession, from "him," of course. The first St. Valentine's day after the great event I watched expectantly, but no florist's car stopped before our little home.

That evening my husband came to dinner with such an illuminating smile on his face I felt sure something was forthcoming, and I was not mistaken. On my plate at dinner I found the ugliest comic valentine I have ever seen, picturing a woman with brilliant hair, several hues brighter than mine, and a rolling pin in her hand. Below the picture was the following verse:

There was a young man had a sweetheart
Who never showed a temper tart.
So he married that girl,
And now things whirl:
Hidden temper is a work of art.

F. H.

After Same as Before.

I did not know whether to say "yes" or "no." Then came St. Valentine's day and "he" deluged me with violets. I was charmed with the dainty offering. In "his" presence that night my brother's wife said with a little sneer: "O, yes, that's all very well, but wait till you've been married ten years, you won't get violets for a valentine—you won't get even a remembrance."

Said my lover: "Indeed, in my home, if I am lucky enough to win this girl, sentiment will never be forgotten."

I was so charmed with his reply that I said the little word "yes." That was ten years ago, and last valentine's day came the shower of violets, which has never failed to come on the 14th of each February.

So you see that sometimes there is no difference between "before and after marriage."

In a Forgetful Moment.

Before marriage my sweetheart was kind, considerate, and thoughtful and gave me all the attention a girl could desire. While on our honeymoon we stopped at a hotel and decided to go out for the evening. My husband took my coat from a hanger and held it out for me to take, but I ignored it and turned around to put my arms in the coat I supposed he was holding, but turned around again to find my coat on the floor.

Marion Harland's Helping Hand. By Marion Harland.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

"As the wife of a homesteader in this lonely country, may I beg of some sympathetic reader literature of any kind? Until one leaves all and undertakes life in the homestead country one never realizes how difficult it is to sustain existence. Literature, music, society, entertainment, variety in any single thing, are of the past and may be of the future, but for the present strict simplicity and monotony obtain. There are times when one's hunger for reading matter dominates all, and that is how I feel just now.

"MARY C."

This heartfelt appeal I trust may touch the hearts of others than myself, and may carry with it some of the force put into it by the writer. I know the generosity of the Cornerites well enough to be sure of applicants for the address of this correspondent. They can hardly do a more kindly thing than endeavor to satisfy this "hunger for reading matter." Most of us have known it, sooner or later, but few have been so unfortunate as to be unable to gratify the longing in some way.

Likes Something by Mail.

"I wonder if the Cornerites would do something to cheer the life of a young girl about whom I know. She is 20 years old and so badly crippled with rheumatism that she is confined to her bed most of the time. Many days she is absolutely alone, as her mother is compelled to go out and work, since her father is in such poor health that he cannot earn enough to support the family. Any kind of pieces for patchwork, ribbons, reading matter, or souvenir cards will be gratefully received by this invalid whose one joy is to get something through the mail.

The Cornerite who refers this request is known to us as one who does many kindnesses to those who turn to the Corner for help and cheer. I hope the case of this young lady may arouse the interest of others of our good workers and that before long she may be cheered by the arrival through the mail of some of the articles which will help her to pass the many lonely hours. In writing for her address ask for that of Nancy D. instead of requesting the signature affixed to the letter. Let me express my own thanks to the writer of the letter for the good deeds she has done to other Cornerites.

Unable to Go to School.

"I am a widow and have two children. They are a boy and a girl, 13 and 11 years old respectively. Both are smart children. The boy goes to work and helps me in making our living. The girl helps, too, but she is craving for an education. She has been to school only once, for a term of three months, yet she can read and write well and loves to draw. She can draw anything she sees and is anxious to learn to draw as a profession. I know she will succeed if she has the chance, but she has never had lessons. Can you suggest or find some way that she can have her long craving for learning fulfilled? I am unable to send her to school for lack of everything, so I write this in the hope that you will find a solution. My boy is my only support, and I wish I could send him to a good school, but wishing and worrying don't help.

"MRS. R. C."

I should think there might be many who would be interested in the writer and in her children and lend them a hand toward the education of the boy as well as the girl. In the hope that this may be the case I print her letter and will supply her address on application.

Washing White Clothes.

"I make these suggestions for the white clothes of A. L.: Let her try washing them in the soft water and using hard water to blue them in. This is said to help keep the natural color in colored clothes, as well as to help whiten white things. I use one cup of javelle water in the big boiler of water I have to boil my clothes in, before I wash them at all, and put in lots of soap and a tablespoonful of borax. This preparation will do for a large family washing, but is not good for delicate colored things, as it fades them. It saves a lot of rubbing, as much of the dirt drops out in the boiler, and does not rot the clothing at all. My remedy for ants is a tried and true one: Get at a drug store 5 cents' worth of tartar emetic, mix a pinch of it with a little sweetened water, place where the ants are gathering, and in a few days you will be free of them. Save the remainder of the powder for future use; it keeps for years. Your Corner is surely doing a world of good; we all enjoy it. OLD PRACTICAL."

And much of the good of it comes from just such helpful contributions as the above. We are grateful for all of them and for such kindly words of praise.

No Word from the Mother.

"Will you kindly let me know if the little girl's eyes have been entirely healed? The plea was in a summer number of the Corner, from the mother, who asked for prayers for the child. W. H. W."

The correspondent who asked prayers for the little girl did not give her address, and we have never heard if the child's eyes were helped or not. Sometimes our prayers are answered in a different way from what we ask, but the reply comes no less directly from the love of our heavenly Father than if our petitions were granted precisely as we would have chosen for ourselves.

Supply Is Exhausted.

"Mrs. A. L. S. states that she has quantities of reading matter, paintings, etc., she will gladly send to appreciative persons who will pay postage. Please give me her address. MRS. J. R. S."

Unfortunately the supply offered had been exhausted before the above letter was received. I have placed the writer's name and address on file. Is there not some one who can send her some of the things she asks?

Needed in a School.

"I am writing from an industrial school to ask if there is not some one who will be kind enough to donate a second hand Greek testament and a typewriter to us. The testament is for a young minister who is unable to attend school, but wants to advance in the ministry.

"MRS. M. E. R."

I am not at all sure that the typewriter can be secured, but it seems likely to me that the second hand Greek testament may be contributed by some clergyman or theological student who is anxious to help on the good work of education.

Many Letters to Answer.

"Some months ago I asked for the address of F. W., which you very kindly gave me. It was about thirty days from the time her letter appeared in the Corner before I wrote. Her letter appealed to me forcibly, and I'll confess it was a selfish motive that prompted me to write her, more than a desire to send her reading matter. I sometimes write fiction stories. In this woman's letter I saw a beautiful plot, and wrote in an effort to secure more material on which to work. Knowing she was possibly not near a stationery store, I sent both paper and postage for a reply, also offered to send her some of the magazines I have. Doubtless she has had a lot of reading matter sent her, and, as my letter was late, she probably did not care for more. I would like so much to hear from her, and if she does not write me I hope she will write another letter to the Corner soon. L. C."

We have had other letters complaining of lack of response from F. W., and I print the above in order to accompany it with an explanation. F. W. has had more than fifty letters and parcels sent her, and although I do not for a moment question her delight in receiving such a generous response, I must point out that such a batch of mail involves much writing in reply. Time must be allowed her to answer the most pressing letters, and I have no doubt she will in due season communicate with all those who accompanied their letters or gifts with addresses and postage for reply. It will not do to put her down as careless or unappreciative because she is a little slow in writing. Personally I wish to thank the many who were so ready and free in their response to her appeal.

Verb in Quotation.

"A question has arisen as to the verb used in the following quotation: 'All is not gold that ——.' Please tell me what the verb should be. C. C. B."

"All is not gold that glitters," or that "glistens," is the form in which the phrase is most frequently heard. Has any one else seen it phrased differently?

Would Gladly Share.

"In the Helping Hand there are requests for many things which I have and would gladly share with my brothers and sisters who can use them. I have religious literature, music—dance music, arranged for violin, cornet, and piano—some songs and studies, silk pieces, reading matter, etc. 'JUST ME.'"

This generous offer is sure of early acceptance. I wish to express my own appreciation of the kindly and charming part of the letter which was addressed to me individually. It did me good.

How to Make Bead Portieres.

"In answer to E. H. C.'s query about portière beads I wish to say that the following is the way I make them. Cut a pasteboard pattern into triangular shape, one and a half inches long and three inches wide at the widest place. Roll it with a hatpin, beginning at the widest place. When almost rolled put paste on the small end and stick it fast. In stringing the beads I put four glass beads—two silver and two gold—between two of the wall paper cigars [or beads], five on the end of the string, and any number at the other end to make the right size to slip on the pole. In cutting out the wall paper you can cut a good many at a time if a number of pieces are laid together and pinned. I have cut out as many as seven at one cutting. Does any one know how to keep bathroom nickel from becoming green? I have not been successful in keeping it off toilet and nickel under the bowl. MRS. I. R. S."

Thank you for the directions. Can any one advise about cleaning the nickel?

Sympathy for the Aged.

"I would like the address of Mrs. H. K., who asks for the harness and the reading matter. I am sorry to say I can't give her the harness which would be such a help to her, but I am going to do what is in my power and send her a magazine now and then, and maybe something else. I am only one of the multitude who ring a clock each day, and can do little to help, but that little I want to do to those who need it. I have seen and am still seeing the seamy side of life, and I know how hard it must be for people in old age to have their misfortunes. I agree with you that youth has its tomorrow and its renewed strength, while age lives in the past and waits for the end, and I am sorry for such persons. R. H."

Another helper with a sympathy for the old. I hope that through her efforts or in some other way the harness which would be of such assistance to Mrs. H. K. may be secured.

Seeks Missing Brother.

"I hope some of the readers of the Corner can help me to find my brother. He left my home some fourteen years ago to go west, and I have never heard of him since then. He is tall, has blue eyes, and is about 38 years old. His name is Hiram Jasper Kirkpatrick, and he is sometimes called Hi Kirkpatrick. My two sisters are dead, and I am here all alone and would like very much to find my brother if he is living. I lived in Palmyra, Mo., when he went away. E. E. K."

Other wanderers have been found through the agency of the Corner, and I hope the lost brother may be discovered by its means now. I will give the address of the sister on application of any one who is able to put her on the brother's track.

For Her Baby Boy.

"I am a little mother with the sweetest baby boy in the world and I trust to be able to support him and myself. If the mother who had the leggings for a year old boy still has them I would be glad to return postage for them if she would send them to me. I have three nice wool bands for a tiny boy—two of them have never been worn—that I'll mail to any one who will pay postage. MRS. T. T."

I am sorry to report that the leggings have been given away, but some one else may have a pair to give outright, or in exchange for the bands offered. I regret also that it is impossible to ask for paid positions through the Corner. On reflection I am quite sure good and sufficient reasons will be seen for this. Therefore, it is impossible to print the request for work of this "little mother," but I will keep her address and give it to any one who wishes to correspond with her and see what can be done to assist her in securing the kind of employment she wishes.

Not Too Busy to Help.

"I want to tell you that the correspondent who offered China lily bulbs and silk pieces not only sent me a generous supply of the bulbs but also a fine bundle of silk and velvet pieces for the old lady for whom I asked them, and a short time later sent another bundle she collected from among her friends. The old lady could scarcely believe that a stranger would have taken so much trouble, but she doesn't know the Cornerites. I may have other things to offer after a little, but I am a busy woman. My husband is practically blind and my older daughter suffered a stroke of paralysis some time ago. In addition to this I care for my husband's mother, an old lady of 85, but I try to find time to pass on a bit of cheer to others worse off than I am and to remember that the time is short here in comparison with that 'over there' where we will have our loved ones again in perfect health. M. E. B."

I have used only part of this letter. The rest of it consists of requests for the names of those who have asked various favors through the Corner. Such a helper as this is well worth having and I am glad to print her letter to show what is the spirit of those who make the Helping Hand deserve its name. The addresses asked for have all been sent.

Proposes an Exchange.

"I have always watched your Corner with interest, but have never asked for a favor. I am a young milliner whose salary will not allow me to indulge in many luxuries. I should like to know if there is any one who will exchange dancing lessons for millinery work? I have not lived in the city long and think that I could make acquaintances much more easily if I did not always have to sit by and watch others dance into popularity. Good luck to you and the Corner. K. G."

This correspondent proposes an exchange which seems to me unusually attractive as well as novel in feature. The good wishes of the Corner reciprocate the feeling expressed in the concluding sentence. Our lively correspondent may not dance into popularity at once. Let us hope for much innocent fun and good health for her in the success of the project.

Cards for Shut-Ins.

"If you could send me the names and addresses of some shut-ins or invalids who would like to have some Christmas cards I would be glad to send some. I have much sympathy for any one who is sick and especially for elderly people.

"MRS. E. O."

Unfortunately this letter came too late to print it in season to get the addresses for Christmas cards, but I am sure there are shut-ins and invalids who would be cheered by such cards, no matter at what season they arrived. I will keep the address of Mrs. E. O., and send it in response to applications inclosing stamp for reply.

Begs for a Violin.

"I am a poor crippled woman with no help in the world for supporting myself and my little crippled son only as I go out to work by the day. It takes every cent I can earn to pay our rent and living, and then it is a poor living sometimes. My little boy is 8 years old and he is not strong enough to go to school, so that he has never been. He is anxious for a violin, an express wagon, and a tricycle. I thought possibly some one had an old violin that no one wanted any more and would be glad to pass on to one who would appreciate it. I have a friend who says she would give the boy lessons if he had the violin and he certainly has a talentt for music and begs for a violin.

"MRS. I. P."

I hope there may be some one who can help the child. At the same time, and with no desire to appear unsympathetic, I cannot help feeling that other instruction should be bestowed upon the child as well as teaching in music. A knowledge of reading and writing is fully as important as the training of his musical talent, and I trust that the printing of this letter may lead to some one giving help in this line also. I hold the writer's address.

A Book of Long Ago.

"Can you favor me with the address of a coin and stamp collector? I have a number of old private property revenue stamps of the war of the rebellion and also old coins, etc. Is there any value to the book called 'The Seasons,' printed in Boston, Mass., over a hundred years ago? It has the old fashioned long 's' in the printing. J. F. W. B."

No stamp for reply came with this letter of inquiry, and as we are not able to give addresses in the Corner I am unable to respond to it on this page. It would save both the writers and the editor much trouble if that stamp proviso were always complied with when an answer is expected which cannot appear in print.

Offers a Bible.

"In a recent issue of the corner I observe that a girl asks for a Bible. If you will kindly send me her address I will be glad to supply her with a Bible. E. F."

I regret much that this correspondent's failure to send me the signature appended to the request for the Bible makes it impossible for me to supply the name and address desired. I will, however, put E. F.'s own name and address on file in the hope that if the original seeker for a Bible does not see the offer it may be noticed by some one else who will be glad to take advantage of it.

Wants Piano Lessons.

"I wish to ask if any one would be willing to give me a few lessons on the piano. I would be grateful for them. Also please send me the address of L. B., who lives on a ranch. I would like to send her letters, postals, etc. E. H. L."

The address of this correspondent will be given to any one who thinks it possible to put her in the way of securing the music lessons she desires. I hope she will be able to make her offer of letters, postcards, etc., to some one else, since L. B. is already supplied with all the correspondence she can manage.

Wants Music for Beginners.

"I write to ask if some one has a music roll and some music for beginners that I could get for my little girl. I am a widow with three small children and am anxious for my little girl to take music lessons and am unable to buy music for her myself. MRS. J. W. W."

Can any one grant her request and send her some beginners' music, even if the roll cannot be supplied? I will give her address to any one writing for it and inclosing stamp.

MOTHER! LOOK AT YOUR CHILD'S TONGUE

Give "California Syrup of Figs" If Cross, Feverish, Sick, Bilious, Constipated—They Love It.

Watch Children Now! Guard Against Colds, Grippe, Sore Throat and Sickness by Keeping Liver and Bowels Free from Poisons.

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish; stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has the grippe or a sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is ofttimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50 cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. See that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Don't merely ask for Syrup of Figs, but ask for "California Syrup of Figs." Remember, "California."—Advertisement.

Get a 25 Cent Bottle! Freshen Your Scalp! Stop Falling Hair! Remove Dandruff! Grow Lots of Wavy, Glossy, Beautiful Hair—You Can!

If you care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life, has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff; you can not have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its luster, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter; apply a little as directed and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually—why not now?—Advertisement.

AMERICA'S PERIL Within and Without

A Story Full of Action Every Minute!

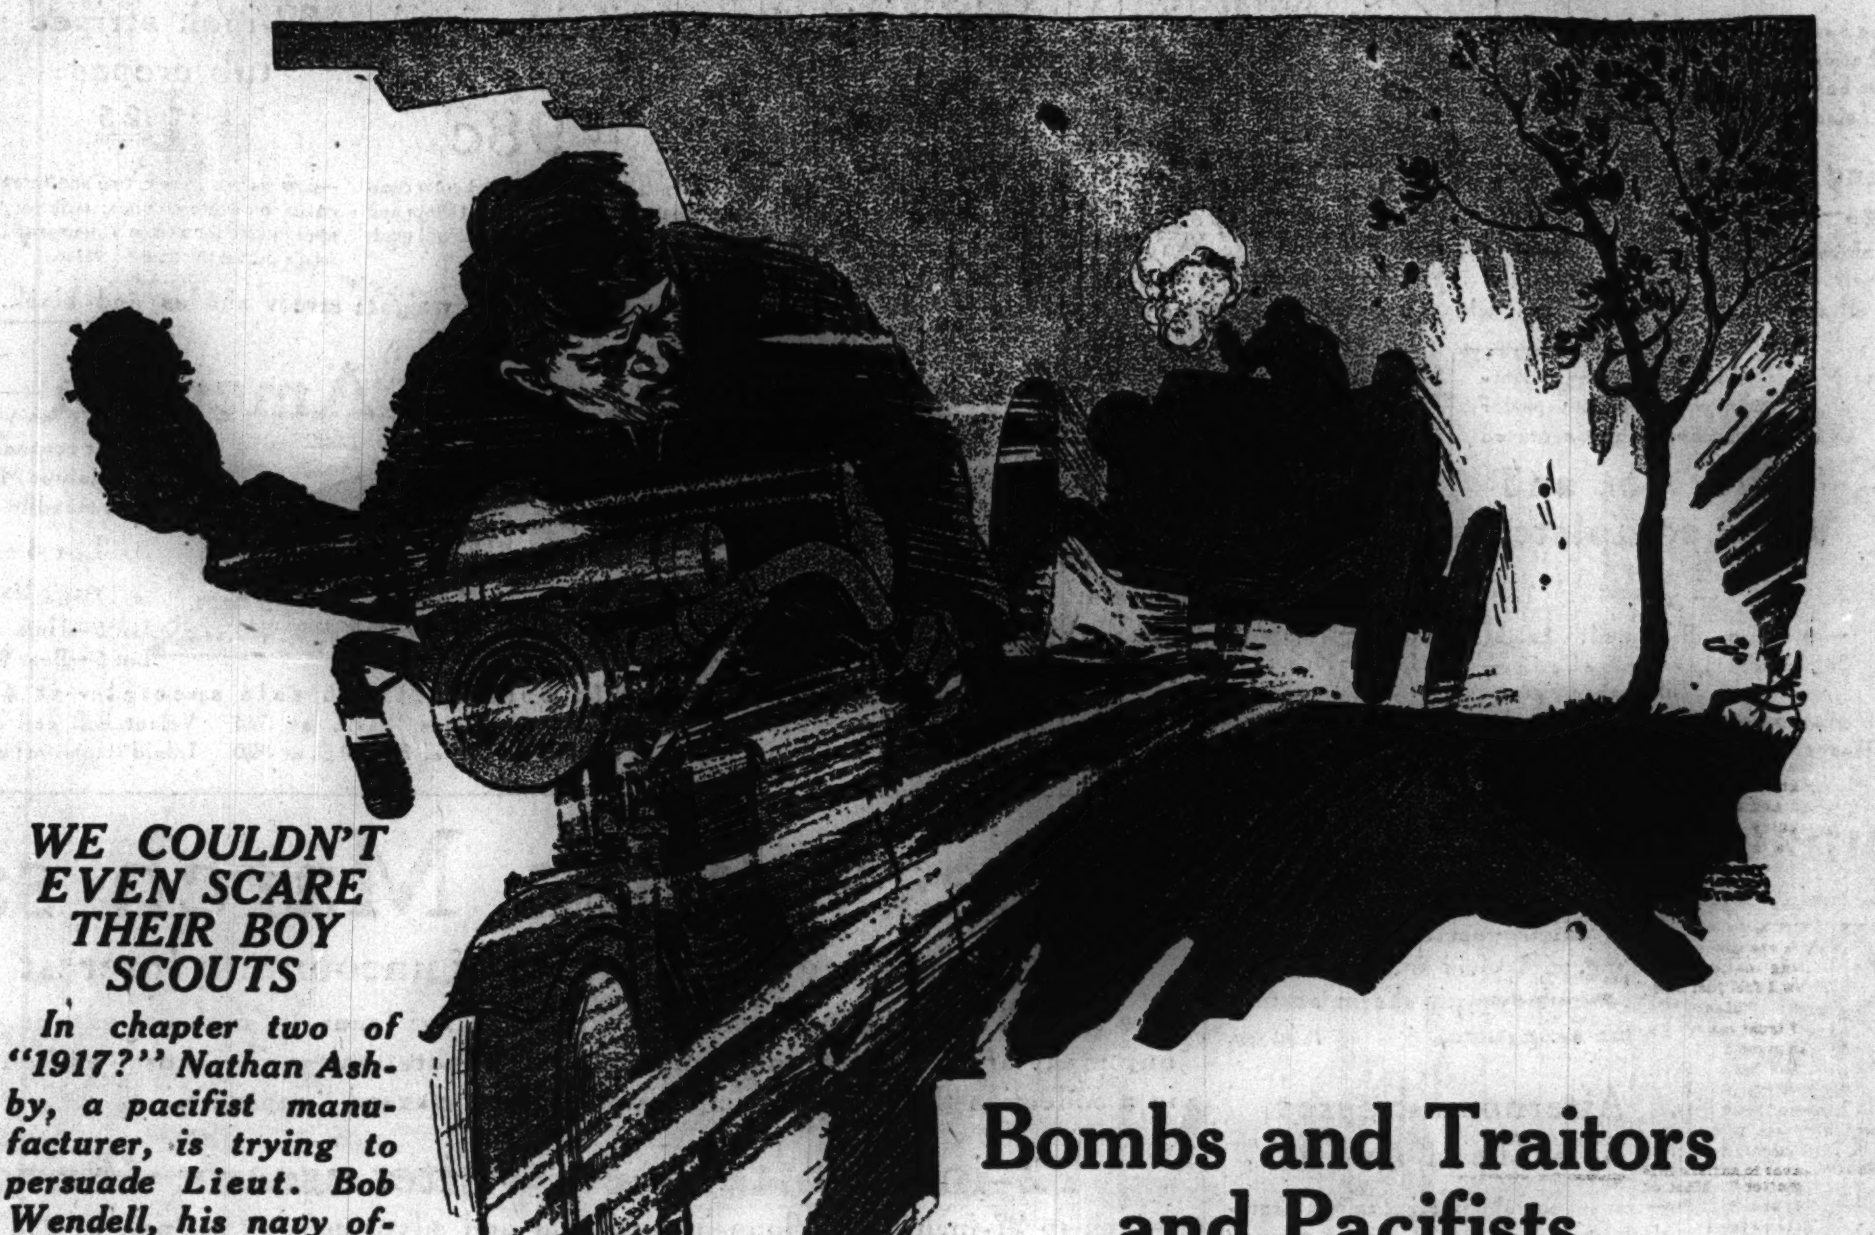
The first installment of Edwin Balmer's remarkable story of America's peril from a united enemy from foreign shores and from treacherous agents of the foe within its own borders begins on pages 4 and 5 of the color section of TODAY'S SUNDAY TRIBUNE. The second installment, illustrated, will be found on pages 4 and 5 of NEXT SUNDAY'S TRIBUNE.

In the first installment the reader is taken through the adventures of a scout cruiser caught at the mercy of a powerful fleet and sunk in the Atlantic Ocean while attempting to wireless the plans of the invading armada to Washington. How the gallant captain of the scout cruiser died is told in the second installment. On board the scout were two civilians—one of whom was Banland, a congressman who had voted against preparedness. He spends his last moments in the water with Barrett, the commander, who raves in delirium as they make their last futile battle against the deep.

"It's all right, Banland," he cried. "Don't bother about us. It's all right. I've seen your postoffice in Virginia. I was telling Marston so only today. It's quite pretty, and in twenty years the village may grow up to it. So don't bother about me, Banland. . . . But if our radio reached the shore—we don't know that, Banland; before they torpedoed us—but if we warned 'em may your soul go to heaven instead of to hell. Mr. President, they were twenty-two dreadnaughts, as I made them out, four of the Zeus class and six of the Trajan, and a damned pretty postoffice, if I do say so. But Mr. Hanlon shouldn't have stuck. Let me go, Banland; you see, he had absolutely no chance at all, and he knew it, but he gave us a tenth of a knot more. I tell you he gave us a tenth of a knot more than the ship ever made before, and he stayed there to the end. Banland, I knew the figures once, but I've forgotten 'em. Forgive me. What does a damn fine postoffice cost out in—say in Virginia?"



WE COULDN'T EVEN SCARE THEIR BOY SCOUTS

In chapter two of "1917?" Nathan Ashby, a pacifist manufacturer, is trying to persuade Lieut. Bob Wendell, his navy officer son-in-law, to quit the service and go into business. In this he is backed by Jim Ashby, his son, who argues violently against the possibility of war. He says:

"It takes two to make a quarrel; that's a devil of a bromide, Bob, but you force me to pull it. The only reason in God's world they got war in Europe was because both sides wanted it and were all ready for it and didn't know what to do without it. We don't want to fight, and, down at the bottom, they don't want to fight us."

"Why not?"

"Well, in the first place, they don't dare to."

"They don't dare to! O, God!" Wendell, in his exasperation, kicked his chair against the house as he got up. "In the name of all that's rational, what have we got in this country to make their boy scouts think twice about taking us on?"

At the very time this peace argument is being made two spies are at work upon a new infernal machine in the pacifist's plant, where the bombs are being made secretly without the Ashbys' knowledge.

Lieut. Wendell gets hold of one of the bombs and, suspecting two employes, Emloe and Ingouf, catches them at work in the plant in the night. He meets Jim Ashby, who is in his eighty-mile-an-hour car. The suspected machinists depart, supplied with bombs, on fast motorcycles. Wendell and Ashby pursue them in the auto and a fight ensues.

Bombs and Traitors and Pacifists

Fight in wild night flight—the wild flight, pursuit and running fight with bombs and guns is told as follows in next Sunday's Tribune:

"Eighty the speedometer showed, and Wendell, clinging to the sides of his seat, cried Jim on. He gave the car all he had, knowing no more than that Bob must believe that the overtaking of Ingouf and Emloe that night was worth Bob's life and his own; and the riders of the motorcycles made it plain that their errand was worth any risk. The car had begun to gain upon one cycle, although the other still kept ahead. The rider of the slower machine—Ingouf—realized he was losing and seemed to be working his controls to give him in some way more speed; but that motorcycle could go no faster, and the car came upon it closer and closer.

"'Look out!' Jim and Bob each cried the warning to the other at the same moment.

'"A round object—metallic from its glint in the moonlight as it fell and rolled in the road—dropped or was flung back from the motorcycle. Jim, swerving his wheels so that they would not strike it, dashed over the object while it was still rolling. And the car was barely over it—it was not ten yards by—when an explosion rocked the air. Jim, his arms and legs all tense, his eyes staring ahead, held the car on its course.

"'Go on!' Bob cried to him; and he saw, without looking around, that Wendell had a revolver in his hand now and was aiming it. 'Keep on; I'm going to fire!'

"The revolver roared twice, spitting its smoke before Jim's face; the rush of the air cleared the smoke, and Wendell fired twice again. The car was coming up fast upon the motorcycle, and the rider no longer tried to escape; instead, he slowed, leaped off his machine, and turned, metallic missile in hand, to fling it at the car pursuing him.

"'Don't slow! Go by!' Bob commanded, firing again and once more as the car rushed by. Ingouf stooped at the first of these shots and, having fired his missile, drew back his arm. The last was fired in front of Jim and across him, but he was by Ingouf before he could see what it did; he was still steering the car at seventy miles an hour when he heard, behind him again, the detonation of an explosion, and Wendell, shouting, was telling him to stop.

"He brought the car up as short as he could; he leaped down to the ground after Bob, who was running back beside the road, reloading the revolver as he ran. The motorcycle which had been ahead stopped far down the road; the rider—Emloe—jumped off and stood staring back. Jim watched him and, when he made no move, Jim grabbed a steel bar from his tool box and followed Wendell. He caught up with Bob, who had stopped and crouched fifty yards short of the spot where they had passed Ingouf. The man's motorcycle, lying on its side in the road and with the engine still running, marked the place; Ingouf had disappeared.

"'I ought to have got him with that last,' Wendell said; and as he spoke Jim was not ashamed that his breathing was coming hard. 'But we'd better make sure. What's Emloe doing now?'

"Jim looked about. 'He's riding again; he's going away.'

"'Then we must get Ingouf!'"

Comment by Mme. X

Backward Glance Over a Long Social Season.

By Mme. X.

LENT is at hand—upon us, in fact, next Wednesday. It is the time of the year when, if ever, we take spiritual stock of ourselves. Is it worth while, this life as we live it? If we agree with the parable of the miraculous mill, the answer is no.

The legend runs that all old women who should pass through the hoppers of this miraculous mill were promised that they should come out of it restored to their long lost youth. The only price they had to pay for this seemingly priceless boon was that each should live her life over again exactly as she had already lived it. No one would consent to do this. The mill fell into ruin and decay.

To most of us the winter has whizzed by. To a few of us it has dragged slowly and painfully along. In a backward glance over the three and a half months—for the social season was longer than usual this year—certain events stand out more clearly than others, certain marked tendencies arrest the thoughtful observer.

One of the most brilliant and financially successful great public balls ever given in Chicago was the Spanish ball which took place at the First Regiment armory in December, the proceeds of which were devoted to the Chicago Lying-In hospital. The ball was devised and organized by Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank and her band of efficient women, among whom were Mrs. John Carpenter, Mrs. Joseph Fish, Mrs. Morris Johnston, and Mrs. Joseph Coleman.

Record for Single Charity.

This entertainment, which set a high water mark for artistic design and achievement, netted about $21,500 for the Lying-in hospital, expenses being about $5,000.

This is not, perhaps, the most ever made by any public charity ball in Chicago, but it is the largest sum ever so raised for any one philanthropic enterprise. In the old days of the charity balls at the Auditorium, when a half a dozen or more institutions shared the profits and Mrs. Potter Palmer was at the helm, if memory is not in error, there was one ball that netted $26,000. But those were the days when the boxes were auctioned off and Potter Palmer, Marshall Field, Arthur Caton, George M. Pullman, and other rich and public spirited citizens bid against each other for first, second, and third choice of boxes. Sometimes the bidding would run over $2,000 for first choice.

These auctions were great social functions. The late N. K. Fairbank was the best auctioneer in that golden age. The present president of the University of Minnesota, who was formerly Prof. Vincent of the University of Chicago, was a brilliant auctioneer, while Joseph Wilkins was a popular conductor of these auctions.

But the old custom of so disposing of boxes was abandoned a decade ago, and the smart, dashing costume charity ball of today, with its ring of boxes at uniform prices, has taken the place of these old fashioned city parties where every one went who could pay $5 for his or her ticket.

Events with Benevolent Aim.

Most of the other conspicuous social events of last winter were linked up with benevolent purposes. The afternoon in November in Mrs. Potter Palmer's picture gallery, when Miss Marie Van Vorst and Myron T. Herrick spoke and various grand opera artists sang, netted over $12,000 for the American ambulance at Neuilly.

The Italian grand opera gala night, with which the opera season closed, raised about $7,000, which was divided between the Italian Red Cross work and Mrs. Thomas Nelson Page's relief work at Rome.

The Polish afternoon a week later at the Auditorium, when Paderewski gave his great speech on Poland and followed it by a Chopin recital, poured nearly $35,000 into the coffers of the Polish relief fund.

All of these entertainments were conspicuous for the prominence of the organizers as well as for the records made for attendance and financial returns.

Much Gayety at the Casino.

So much for the principal philanthropic entertainments engineered by Chicago's social leaders. Under the combined leadership of Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman, president of the Casino, and J. Allen Haines, chairman of its entertainment committee, this enterprising club has provided much gayety and really capital and original diversion for the delectation of its members this winter. Its clever burlesque fashion show; the interesting evening with the war fan, Frederick Palmer; the delightful after dinner songs from Dalmores (the choicest evening of all); the youthful and lively cabaret; the noisy and friendly Washington's birthday luncheon—all were smart, well done festivities.

The two Assembly balls were, as always, the most stately and imposing affairs of the season, while the Butchers and Bakers and Candlestick Makers' dance was the best and most charming of these annual events.

If a change has come over the spirit of society—and to the thoughtful observer this is apparent—it is in the direction of a greater seriousness, a certain sober steadiness, which does not interfere with dancing and dining and card playing, but seems to accompany these pastimes like a silent handmaid. Although there was as much dancing as ever this winter, there was much less talk about it and no new steps to distinguish the winter. You never hear the tango mentioned. It is either one-step or fox trot.

None Idle Now.

This altered spiritual aspect is as if, after the shock of the war which staggered us all last winter, we had recovered our equilibrium and were once more riding the gale on an even keel. Some of the women, who a year ago were frantically knitting socks and mufflers everywhere, are this year organizing and running shops. Others are diligently applying themselves to taking the stiff courses in Red Cross first aid training.

Whatever is being done—and activity along these lines is perceptible in every direction—is much more thoroughly considered and more capably accomplished than similar undertakings a year ago. Perhaps we are all unconsciously training for some supreme national test which lies behind the veil of the immediate future. In any event, idleness, leisure, spare time are not on the cards of any Chicago society woman today. As one of the most strenuous and conspicuous social leaders said recently: "No woman has any business to look rested at this season of the year."

Fits Up Hospital Room.

Apropos of the various Red Cross first aid classes, that organized under the auspices of the medical corps of St. Joseph's hospital celebrated its recent successful graduation by presenting to the hospital a perfectly furnished room, a most charming affair, in which any patient fortunate enough to be sheltered might well want to have a long convalescence.

Mrs. Marshall Clark and Miss Clara Cudahy were appointed as furnishing committee and did their task with great taste and completeness. The walls are painted a delicate rose tinted cream color. The furniture is of the same hue, with a Saxon blue stripe added to it. The chairs are upholstered in striped silk of white and this same blue. Similar blue and white silk covers line the glass tops of the tables and bureau. A lamp, with a rose pink shade, window curtains of white muslin, and blue jute rugs complete the room furnishings. Not quite, however, for Mrs. Marshall Clark painted a wonderful tray for the sole use of the patient in this room, which room is further fitted out with china to match and a thermos bottle.

On the outside of the door is this inscription: "The first class trained in St. Joseph's hospital in American National Red Cross first aid." A red cross is painted under this and on the bottom of the tray.

Class to Take Other Courses.

The sisters of St. Vincent de Paul who run this hospital belong to an old and distinguished order. It was founded by a remarkable French priest, St. Vincent de Paul, who was prominent in the court of Louis XV. of France. He was of the world worldly; a brilliant courtier, a clever and, for his time, cultivated scholar who tutored the children of the highest nobles and paid compliments to the beauties of that gay and pleasure loving monarch's intimate circle.

A light shone in upon St. Vincent de Paul in which he saw the misery about him and he used his influence to unite the great ladies of France into the first body of women ever organized for systematized, well ordered philanthropy. They were known as "the ladies of St. Vincent de Paul," a lay order which still exists. Some of this original band, however, formed the order of the Sisters of St. Vincent de Paul and adopted the habit worn today, of a gray-blue with its becoming white "cornet." Even now this order makes its own dye and weaves the material from which the flowing gowns are made, after the pattern adopted in the sixteenth century.

The members of the class in Red Cross first aid which recently graduated at St. Joseph's are going to take the second and third courses. Mrs. William Conger was made president of the class of twenty-six which included Mesdames Hugh McBirney, Arthur Small, Marshall Clark, Robert Holt, William Hubbard, Harry Shearson, Oren Taft, Francis Johnson, R. R. McCormick, Orville Babcock, and William P. Martin, and the Misses Clara Cudahy, Grace Witherspoon, Josephine Johnson, Margaret Enders, Virginia Pope, Lolita Armour, and Elmina Carry.

The last two were the youngest in the class and were most enthusiastic students. Miss Johnson deserves perhaps most credit, as twice a week she rose at 6 in the dark, cold winter mornings to come in from Racine to this class, while close seconds were Mrs. Babcock, Mrs. McCormick, and Mrs. Martin, who left Lake Forest the same days at 7 a. m. to attend this course.

So interested in this class was Col. Gorgas, the well known sanitary chief of the Panama canal construction, that he got his wife to start a similar class in Washington.

Improvements at Nurses' Home.

Speaking of hospitals, the woman's board of the Presbyterian hospital is giving a tea tomorrow afternoon to show the latest additions to the nurses' home, improvements made possible by Mrs. A. A. Sprague's generous gift of $110,000.

Thirty years ago this hospital cared for 241 patients a year and had property valued at $58,000. Now it cares for 7,500 patients annually and has property and endowment amounting to $1,658,000. This great advance has been largely made during the presidency of Albert M. Day and the incumbency of Asa Bacon as superintendent.

With that irresistible tendency to recover balance which is characteristic of the human race, the husbands and intimate men friends of the members of the class on public speaking are now proposing to form themselves into a class or band of public listeners. It may take some training to teach this valiant band to sit steady and silent under the flood of oratory which may be the outcome of Prof. Nelson's ten lessons. The public listeners must also learn when to applaud and make other demonstrations of alert attention and comprehension, but once the combination of public speakers and public listeners is perfected—well, the world would better sit up and take notice.

The class in p. s. proposes to go forth immediately to carry two messages to listening multitudes; one is to arouse interest and coöperation with the work of the committee raising money to help support the fatherless children of France, so that the future of the French race may be in a measure assured. From all over the city and surrounding country come appeals for speakers to come before various groups of men and women to explain the objects of this committee and the needs of the French.

Plan Big Suffrage Parade.

Later many of the members of the p. s. class will make a vigorous and widespread campaign to enlist the sympathy and active coöperation of women in all walks of life in the great suffrage parade on June 7, which will march to the doors of the Republican convention at the Coliseum and ask for a suffrage plank in the party's platform.

When they come to the leaders of the party it will behoove these leaders to remember that already 4,600,000 women have the right to cast a ballot for presidential electors and there is nothing so impossible for the average male politician to foresee or control as the whitherness and whyness of the women's vote. Party lines are not sacred in the eyes of the average woman voter. They look far beyond these lines to the immediate effect of any proposed legislation on the welfare of those who compose their households.

Suffragists and their leaders are planning to come from every state in the union to take part in this parade.

The Illinois Equal Suffrage association, the Political Equality league, and the Chicago Equal Suffrage association are the three principal suffrage organizations which have the parade in hand. From the last named association such well known leaders in action as Mrs. James W. Morrisson, Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, and Mrs. Jacob Baur are to be on the general "steering committee," while scarcely less active will be Mmes. Medill McCormick, Tiffany Blake, Augustus Peabody, Morris Johnston, Arthur Ryerson, George Higginson, and Charles Hamill, the Misses Marie J. Roget, Suzette Ryerson, and Virginia Pope.

Chicago never has had a great big suffrage parade such as have been epoch making events in New York, Boston, and Philadelphia, and now we're in for it.

Mrs. Austin Niblack

With the coming of Ash Wednesday this week the many fashionable activities that have occupied society during the season will give way to the more restful and wholesome pastimes of the early spring. The bridle paths on both the north and south sides of the city are already filled during the warmest hours of the days with equestriennes, whose ruddy coloring and genuine enjoyment proclaim the delight of that healthful sport.

Mrs. Austin Niblack, who before her marriage in the early fall was Miss Helen Cudahy, is among the earliest of the north shore riders already in the saddle and can be seen almost any day about the bridle paths of Lincoln park and the Lake Shore drive. Mrs. Niblack rides both astride and with the old time side saddle, and her costume includes a most charming tall silk hat that fits her red-gold head firmly in most becoming fashion.

Welfare Society Out for Funds for Baby Stations

By Inez Travers.

BABY week is upon us and the woman's auxiliary of the Infant Welfare society is promoting a campaign to raise $25,000 within the next two weeks to save some of the baby stations, which may have to be closed because of lack of funds. On account of the great number of conferences the nurses are necessary at many of the stations to help the mothers. None of these mothers should be turned away, yet they will have to be unless the general public is willing to help keep the stations open.

No amount of money is too small to help the babies. Any contributions may be sent to any of the officers of the auxiliary, at its headquarters in the Monroe building.

Almost every one has heard of the Infant Welfare society and knows of the wonderful work it has done in the last three years to help reduce the infant death rate in Chicago. The society establishes and conducts stations to help mothers in the care of their babies. Twenty-one stations are located in the congested districts of the city.

The object of the society is "to keep the well baby well" by teaching mothers how to feed and care for their infants. The Infant Welfare society bespeaks the cooperation of the people of Chicago, and looks to them for financial support sufficient to fit unfortunate babies to take their place in the ranks of "better citizens."

The Woman's auxiliary report for the last year shows that the year has been the most efficient in the three short years of its existence. The membership now numbers 2,000 and there are twenty-one centers, each supporting or partly supporting a station. The auxiliary has raised large sums for the care of the babies and supports two assistant nurses, one of whom does much pre-natal work.

During the holidays 6,000 children were made happy and 7,000 new garments were made and given to the nurses at the various stations for distribution.

To quote directly from the report, the auxiliary is "a group of women aroused to the need of birth registration because they realize that the lack of it often costs a baby's life; alive to the necessity of living wages because they have found a starved mother; working persistently for better housing and better sanitation because they have investigated and find it is not possible to live as some people have to live and be decently human."

Through the General Federation of Woman's Clubs an appeal has been made to affiliated clubs all over the country to help in promoting a nation-wide campaign for the welfare of the baby. Already hundreds of organizations have responded and signified their willingness to cooperate in spreading a knowledge of infant needs.

The officers of the Welfare society are: Lucius Teter, president; Dr. Frank S. Churchill, vice president; George L. Emrich, secretary; Earle H. Reynolds, treasurer.

Mrs. Edward P. Welles is president of the Woman's auxiliary.

Hair Often Ruined By Washing With Soap

Soap should be used very carefully if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless) and is better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy; it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.—Advertisement.

"GENUINE ECONOMY"

The real pleasure you will derive in sewing on one of these splendid dress forms will prompt you to make all things you now buy or have made. Gowns, shirtwaists, underwear, etc., everything you have always supposed were difficult to make, you can make with perfect ease if you have an exact duplicate of yourself to sew on. You will save the small cost of the form in one or two things you make, and wonder how you ever got along without its help. Then why undergo the awful bore of fitting yourself alone or spending valuable time at your dressmaker's?—your "Nature Form" will do all these things for you. Arms, bust, skirt and poise, an accurate duplicate of you. Adjustable to any change in flesh or corset, collapsible into small space, handsome in appearance. No tortuous process to obtain one. See them at our public display room. Suite 906, No. 35 E. Washington St. Nature Form Company.

Pathéphone

Another Great Invention

Again the ingenuity of Pathephone inventors has stolen a march on other phonographs. Another common phonographic disadvantage has been solved and kept out of the famous Pathephone. Is it any wonder that this truly remarkable machine has amazed the Phonographic world and stepped right into the front rank of public favor?

Now, for the first time, you can hear your favorite selection played without that metallic "twang"—hear it in the full, rich expression and technique of the living artist, in its soft, mellow, full tone value—an achievement impossible with any Phonograph except the Pathephone.

Have you ever wondered just why all Phonographs sound metallic? It's simple, yet never before overcome.

In every machine there is a "Tone Amplifier," which enlarges the sound before it passes through the Sound Chamber to you. These "Tone Amplifiers" in all other machines are of metal. That's your answer! Purity of tone is impossible.

In the Pathephone we use a solid wood block as a "Tone Amplifier." This ingenious idea enlarges the sound, at the same time preserving faithfully the softness and purity of every note, bringing them forth into pulsative, living reproductions of the original voice or instrument.

Private Demonstration

We want you to hear some of your favorite selections on the Pathephone. Come in this week. Learn more about this wonderful invention. See the Pathephone genuine Sapphire Ball which eliminates needle changing and renders 60 per cent more tone value than any other machine. Find out about the Pathephone Violin Wood Sound Chamber—the Tone Control Lever, the wide Arch-Shape Groove Records, and other advantages that have made the Pathephone indisputably the world's leader.

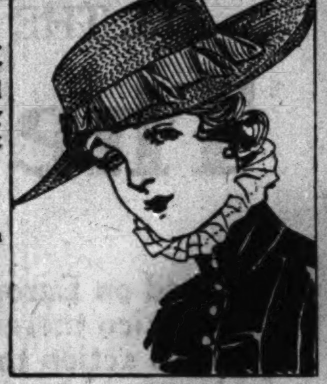
A Challenge in Style and Price



Here are some of the best values we have ever offered in our entire history:

Right now a new hat is what every woman needs most. We're tired of our old winter things. We're tired of our winter suits, of our winter coats. In short, we are tired of our old winter selves, because we know how terribly good looking our new spring selves are going to be. And the one thing that makes you know it is spring is a spring hat.

Look at these values:

Let The Tribune Help YOU

THE unprecedented growth of The Tribune in recent years has been due largely to the expansion of its SERVICE to its readers.

For generations The Tribune has led in news service; but in recent years such departments as the Friend of the People, Dr. Evans, Antoinette Donnelly, Jane Eddington, Henry M. Hyde, Doris Blake, Marion Harland, etc., have greatly enlarged its sphere of helpfulness.

During the year 1916 The Tribune received 284,069 letters from readers seeking the assistance of these experts.

But The Tribune's greatest service to readers is found in its advertising.

The Tribune set an example to the world by purifying its advertising columns. At great financial sacrifice loan sharks, quack doctors, merchandise fakers, and other advertisers—long accepted by publishers as necessary evils — were excluded from its columns.

Tribune advertising was made dependable —honest— genuinely serviceable to readers.

During the Year 1915 The Tribune printed 13,765,965 lines of advertising.

This is The Tribune's greatest SERVICE to its readers. For one cent daily and five cents Sunday, Tribune readers have access to the world's greatest market place—the advertising columns of The Tribune.

News of the Religious World

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

ONE THOUSAND loaves of bread are to be given away this evening at the Immanuel Baptist church, Twenty-third street and Michigan avenue.

The Rev. Johnston Myers, the pastor, intends to use the bread as an illustration of the text of his sermon. The text will be printed on tissue paper which will be wrapped around each loaf. The loaves are miniature in size and were donated to Dr. Myers by the Schulze Baking company for this service. Each person present will receive a loaf.

Dr. Myers for several winters past has fed thousands of homeless men out of work. At the service this evening, he says, he desires to let the well to do as well as the jobless know what is the significance of bread.

A community campaign in the interest of evangelism will begin today under the leadership of the Rev. Benjamin Fay Mills, assisted in the direction of the music by Dr. Philip H. Wolfram. Five Rogers Park churches will unite. The meetings will be held in the Rogers Park Congregational church, North Ashland and Morse avenues, twice daily. At 3 o'clock today Mr. Mills will speak on the subject, "Why have you sent for me?" At 7:45 his subject will be, "The Great Initiation." The Presbyterian and Methodist Episcopal churches will unite today at 10:45 o'clock at the Methodist church, Greenleaf avenue and Ashland boulevard, in a union service. The Rogers Park Baptist and English Evangelical Lutheran are the other two coöperating churches.

The Ven. Hudson Stack Archdeacon of the Yukon

The Ven. Hudson Stuck, D. D., archdeacon of the Yukon, will be the speaker for the first four days of Lent, Wednesday to Saturday, at the Majestic theater, 22 West Monroe street, under the auspices of the Protestant Episcopal church. Dr. Stuck travels by dog sled in caring for the churches under his charge. He has the distinction of having climbed Mount McKinley, Alaska. On Friday he will speak before the Chicago Geographic society. The Lenten services will begin at 12:10 each day and close at 12:30. The speakers for succeeding weeks during Lent are the Rev. Z. B. T. Philips of St. Louis; the Rev. Irving P. Johnson of Faribault, Minn.; the Very Rev. H. P. A. Abbott of Cleveland; the Rev. T. W. Powell, D. D., of Toronto; the Rev. George Gunnell of Toledo, and the Rt. Rev. C. P. Anderson, bishop of Chicago.

The Desplaines Camp Meeting association, which is under the control of the Methodist Episcopal church, has begun a canvass for $25,000 with which to improve the camp grounds near Desplaines, Ill., and to introduce in connection with the camp meeting recreational and social service features. Frank B. Sinex has been put in charge of the money raising. An improvement committee of which the Rev. E. B. Crawford, pastor of the Garfield Park church, is chairman, has been appointed. It is expected the funds will be raised by the time of the next camp-meeting in July.

Several denominations have set apart special periods for self-denial in behalf of missions. The Baptists will begin their week of self-denial today and continue until March 12. The Presbyterians have designated March 12 to 19, and the Methodists April 16 to 23. All denominations recognize the seriousness of the missionary situation in foreign lands, especially in view of the withdrawal of missionary forces furnished heretofore by some of the nations now at war.

Three pre-Easter Sunday school rallies, one on each side of the city are being held. Tuesday evening the north side rally will be held in the Belden Avenue Baptist church, Belden avenue and North Halsted street. Last Thursday the south side rally was held in the Woolley Memorial Methodist Episcopal church, Fifty-sixth street and Indiana avenue. Last Friday the west side rally was held in the Sacramento Boulevard Methodist Episcopal church, Adams street and Sacramento boulevard. Luncheon was served at 6:30 at each rally. The addresses are intended to assist Sunday school teachers, superintendents, and pastors in making decision days effective.

The Chicago Rabbinical association will meet tomorrow at 10 a. m. at the Stratford hotel. Rabbi Felix A. Levy will read a paper on "Egyptian Obelisks."

The Rev. Samuel A. Eliot, D. D., of Boston will speak this evening at the Sunday Evening club in Orchestra hall on "Dynamic Forces in American Life."

Dr. Eliot is the son of Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard university and for forty years its active president, and is himself an author, minister, and public official. Like his father, he is a leader in the Unitarian church, having been secretary and later president of the American Unitarian association. He is on the editorial staff of Hibbert's Journal, London.

The Leavitt Street Congregational church is being served by the Rev. Guy D Yoakum of Berkeley, Cal., and the hope is expressed that he may be induced to remain permanently in Chicago.

Heavy Figures

Tall and Short
Successfully Fitted in Gossards

Tall Heavy Figures

ABOUT one out of every twelve women is tall, and sooner or later she finds herself too heavy. Her corset fittings become a problem. Her weight is seldom equally distributed, much of it being at the shoulders—lower back—thighs—diaphragm and abdomen. To reduce or distribute this flesh so that the figure looks smaller and symmetrical is one of the many things certain Special Gossard corsets will do for you. There are probably more tall, heavy figures wearing Gossard corsets than any other two makes combined. You should see for yourself to-morrow what this wonderful corset will do for you. Many models—some listed below.

One special Gossard model for this figure, medium high bust, long wearing material, at.......	$2.00
Two special Gossards for this figure, long wearing batiste material, each at..............	$3.50
Five special Gossards, medium low and high bust, in pink, pink striped and plain white figured coutil materials, each at..................................	$6.50
Four special Gossards, silk batiste and coutil materials, of exceptional beauty, each at.......	$12.50
Special imported brocade material model, hand trimmed, an extreme value at....................	$25.00

Short Heavy Figures

THE proportion of short heavy figures is slightly larger than that of tall, heavy figures. This type is very difficult to corset with the old-style corset. Gossard front-lacing corsets have for fourteen years been the favorite of an army of short, full figure women. Her flesh at back always rests in the corset—her bust is never raised when seated—her corset does not slip up on her body—her hips and thighs always look smaller—her back is flatter—and she is comfortable no matter what she may be doing. It is a common thing to see the hip line reduced 3 inches. Still more common to see the figure look from 10 to 25 pounds lighter.

Since a trial fitting does not obligate, we urge you to see the special Gossards for your figure to-morrow. Every Gossard fitted by a trained expert.

Gossard Corsets

Five special Gossard models that will fit practically every variation of this figure type, medium and long skirts, low bust, ample fullness under arm and in front at bust, each a wonderful value at...............	$3.50
New Gossard model for this type already enjoying a large sale, the equal of any $3.00 corset, specially priced at................	$2.00
Three new models in figured materials, each ideal for this figure type, each having special features, special values, each at.....	$8.50
Four special Gossards in long wearing materials of exquisite design, each at.....................	$6.50
Other special models for this figure at $2.50, $15.00 and...........	$25.00

WASHINGTON SOCIETY by MME. Z.

Wilsons Guests at Marshalls' Second Reception.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—[Special Correspondence.]—Last week this column took occasion to commiserate the president and Mrs. Wilson on being so exalted [illegible] they couldn't go to pleasant parties [illegible] the Marshalls), which were not given [illegible] for them. This week, in spite [illegible] comment, they showed up smiling [illegible] the Marshalls' second reception on [illegible] night.

[illegible] the Wilsons were by no means alone [illegible] up smiling at that reception. [illegible] one else who was not there the [illegible] Monday and a good many who [illegible] did likewise, including some of the [illegible] staffs of the "central powers." [illegible] Marshall must have followed the [illegible] House lead in asking the allies to [illegible] first party and the central powers to [illegible] second.

[illegible] Bernstorff was not there, but Von [illegible], counselor of the German [illegible], was in evidence, as was Baron [illegible] of the same embassy, and [illegible] Zwiedinek, chargé d'affaires for [illegible]-Hungary, and the Turkish chargé [illegible] Mme. Hussein Bey.

[illegible] Wellington Koos were also among [illegible] diplomatic contingent, and as usual [illegible] center of a sort of benevolent in[illegible], especially Mrs. Koo, and the [illegible] ambassador and Mme. Suarez-[illegible].

[illegible] latter are about to return him for [illegible] vacation, on the ground of the [illegible] health, and certainly Mon[illegible] he looked tired to death, and [illegible] moved the whole evening from [illegible] where he established himself as [illegible] as he had greeted his hosts. There [illegible] sat, and watched the dancers and [illegible] with acquaintances who dropped [illegible] the chair alongside of him as soon [illegible] it was vacated. Washington likes [illegible] Suarez, and it likes Mme. Suarez, [illegible] is going to miss them.

[illegible] Countries Economizing.

[illegible] regretted is the closing of the [illegible] legation, and the official [illegible] of the Pezets. They have [illegible] here a long while, as Mr. Pezet was [illegible] consul general here before he [illegible] minister, and they have entertained [illegible] and been conspicuous and popu[illegible] figures in capital society.

[illegible] is a measure of economy on the part [illegible] the Peruvian government, which was [illegible] even harder than most of the South [illegible] governments by the panic [illegible] followed the breaking out of the [illegible] war, and has been retrenching [illegible] every possible direction. It has already closed most of its legations, this one and the Brazilian being about the last to feel the ax.

Whether the minister and Mme. Pezet will leave Washington in the near future is a question. They will, of course, go up to Boston for the wedding of their son, A. Washington Pezet, who, having been an attaché of their legation here and a popular Washington beau ever since he finished school, is being mean enough to marry a Brookline girl, Miss Helen M. Leghorn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Richard Leghorn of Brookline, Mass.

Since I am on the subject of the dear departing and departed I must not forget the joy with which Mrs. Garrison's friends pounced on her when they found that she was in town for a few days. She arrived "all unbeknownst" toward the week, and registered at the Shoreham, along with her intimate friend, Mrs. George Leary of New York. She had only come to pack up and close her house and really hadn't time to be entertained, but she had to make time for a rush of luncheons and teas. People would not take a refusal. So she did her packing in snatches, between bites, and went off on Wednesday, promising that she would be back later, "just to visit," and accept some of the hospitality she was obliged to refuse now. She was one of the most sought after guests at the Marshalls' reception on Monday night.

In Chicago Over Sunday.

The Marshalls, by the way, are also off for a little breathing spell. Starting on Saturday they plan to spend Sunday in Chicago and a few days in Indianapolis, and get back to Washington in a week or ten days.

At the White House they are expecting little Miss Mary Ellen McAdoo during the coming week, to spend a month or two with her grandfather, while her parents are in South America. The international high commission, which was created by the Pan-American financial congress, which met here last May, is to meet at Buenos Aires on April 3 to take up various matters of international finance, particularly the question of more uniform laws. Mc. McAdoo is chairman of this commission and he is going down to preside at its meeting. Mrs. McAdoo, of course, goes along.

They are to sail next Wednesday or Thursday on the United States steamship Tennessee, I believe, and as Uncle Sam's battleships are not ocean greyhounds, they will be about three weeks going and three weeks coming home, which will not leave them a great deal of time to see South America.

The White House was the scene on Friday night of the last of the season's big receptions, that to the officers of the army and navy. With all of the honor guests in full dress uniform the army and navy reception is always a brilliant one, though this year there were not so many of the military and naval diplomatic attachés present as usual, and one missed the brilliance of their uniforms. It is always an open question whether the diplomatic reception, which opens the White House season, or the army and navy reception, which closes it, is the more glittery, brilliant affair.

The only other formal affair in which the president and Mrs. Wilson had part was the dinner which Secretary and Mrs. Redfield gave in their honor Tuesday night. Practically all the guests invited to meet them were from out of town, so completely have the cabinet dinners this season broken away from the boresome custom with which they started, of each of the cabinet asking all of the cabinet to meet the President and Mrs. President. They are actually getting to be rather enjoyable functions, from all accounts. Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Pool of Chicago, by the way, were among the Redfield's Tuesday night guests.

Why Women Read Percy Hammond

Every modern woman wants to be posted on the latest theater news.

Whether she goes to the theater twice a week or twice a year, she wants at least to know about the latest plays and the newest players.

She wants to be able to talk intelligently about them.

Before she goes to see a "show" she wants to know what sort of a play it is and what sort of players play it.

She wants to know the comment of clever critics on it, for then each scene and player has a doubled interest for her.

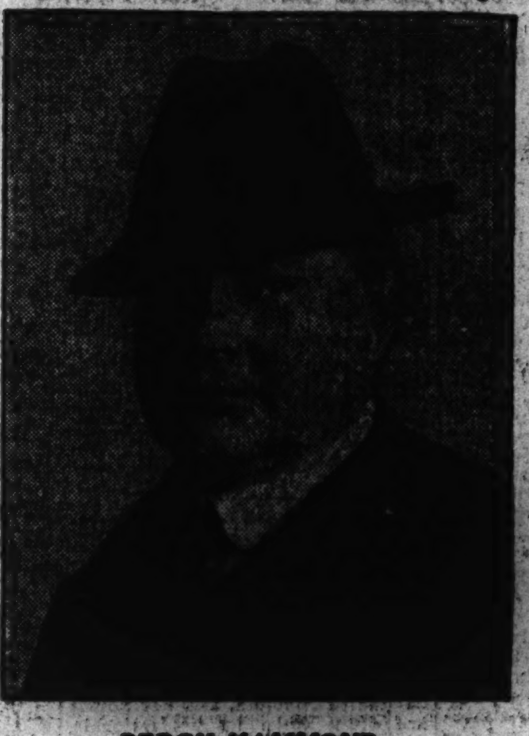
That's why so many thousands of eager, active women who take a rounded interest in the things of life read Percy Hammond's brilliant notes on plays and players every day.

And in reading Percy Hammond they get a great deal more than just the news of theaters.

For Percy Hammond is more than just a critic—he's a tonic.

He writes real literature that sparkles with flashing wit and humor. His shafts of satire stimulate your brain cells. He writes nothing that is cut and dried and dry. His style is Percy Hammond's own.

You miss a most delightful enjoyment every time you miss a Percy Hammond article.



PERCY HAMMOND
The Tribune's Dramatic Critic

And you're missing half the benefits and pleasure that come from seeing plays and players unless you read Percy Hammond's comment first.

You owe it to yourself to make your life as well-rounded as you can—to keep posted on the really interesting things about you—to be thoroughly conversant with the various offerings which genius and the highest talent place before the public in the drama. Therefore—

LIFE DREAM OF ENDLESS LANES OF COZY SPECIALTY SHOPS IN ONE HOME IS REALIZED IN CHICAGO

Modern Promenade of Fashion and Service Lures Women to Heart of Loop.

NINE BLOCKS UNDER ONE ROOF.

Experts in Various Lines Offer Rare Bargains in New Beauty Spots of City.

(By Mrs. Delany Fisher)

We live in the age of specialization. The family Doctor, who pulled teeth, sawed bones and dosed the entire family, is succeeded now by the Dentist, Surgeon, Brain Specialist, the Doctor who treats eyes and ears, in fact, a separate Specialist for almost each organ of the body. When we travel we insist on special trains that make the fastest time possible. Our children are fed on specially prepared milk. There are special systems for lighting our homes, specialists who cook certain foods for us, specialists who treat our scalps and in the final analysis the highest degree of shopping efficiency for women is the exclusive specialty shop.

[illegible] when returning travelers to Chicago spoke with regret of the many little shops for intimate buying of women's specialties they found in European or Eastern cities, that we did not possess, but that was twenty years ago. Now, in Chicago, we have some of the most complete and up-to-date shops for women's needs that were ever planned or found in any quarter of the globe.

What the smart little nooks and corners in the streets off Fifth Avenue in New York are to Eastern women, and the dainty quarters in the Rue de la Paix to the Parisienne, so to the Chicago women is the Quarter of Little Shops. The tallest building on State Street, on the most valuable business block in Chicago, is the Stevens Building, which runs from 17 to 25 North State Street, and through to Wabash Avenue. And this is the center of the Quarter of Little Shops.

Twenty-five years ago Charles A. Stevens, who was then a young man, opened a small specialty silk store in an upper room of the old Central Music Hall. He was then, and is yet, a specialty shop man, and is probably today the greatest specialty shop man in the world. During all these years he has dreamed, planned and studied how to associate or bring together the experts or real artists of ability and the people who demand their products, without taxing the expert with too great a rent and without taxing the consumer with too great a journey to reach the expert.

This unique building solves the problem, and within its twenty-two stories and the numerous arcaded show windows are housed clever individual shops, which in their atmosphere reflect the simplicity and elegance so eagerly desired by women of taste. In almost every instance the specialty shop to be found in this building is the abode of an expert in his particular line, who loves his merchandise and takes the keenest interest in any article offered for sale.

Besides the numerous small shops which cater to the many needs of womankind, here are to be found luxurious quarters allotted to the most exclusive women's clubs in Chicago. One floor is devoted entirely to the Chicago College Club, which, as its name implies, comprises a membership of several hundred of the most exclusive women of the Middle West, the alumnae of the various colleges—an organization which corresponds to the University Club for men. The College Club is on the seventeenth floor.

On the floor above are the club rooms of the world-renowned Eleanor Association, which occupies the pioneer position among the clubs exclusively for women workers, whether business or professional. Their quarters contain, as do those of the College Club, dining rooms, a little theater, and quiet, restful nooks and corners in and around the big, cozy living rooms.

At 1633 is the Brownleigh Club, a very charming little private dining club, presided over by Miss Margaret H. Brown, who creates a homelike atmosphere that makes a restful ease, enhancing the value of her very excellent cuisine.

Perhaps the most interesting place in this building, outside of the shops, is Room 932, where the Vogue Magazine, which is dearly loved by all the smart feminine world, have fitted up beautiful quarters as their Western home. Here are welcomed their friends, who may recline in their charming rest rooms, look over current numbers or any back numbers of the magazine, and secure here any of their patterns.

At 902 on the same floor are the offices of the Clyde W. Riley Advertising System. This is the concern that turns out the most elaborate theater programs in the world—marvels of color decorating and print possibilities.

On the same floor with the Vogue Headquarters, at 910-912, is the Lane-Bryant Shop, which provides smart apparel for large women. This particular corner of the busy hive caters to a need in women's wear, that has never been fully supplied by any other establishment, to my knowledge. Large women, whether in proportion or not, have always had great difficulty in finding any variety of raiment. Where they have been fortunate enough to secure the size, their choice has been restricted because of the numerous sizes necessary to be carried in the average assortment supplying women's wear. This little shop looks after the wants of only the extremely large woman in size, but offers her every opportunity of selection in color, design or style, so that she has all the choice of her slim sister.

Millinery of the original type, waists and the small accessories of women are all exploited in the dainty pretty salon where Katherine C. Pudor has sway, in Suite 1433.

Mrs. Read has her interior decorating office here and shows some rare old mahogany—Mrs. Seymour features the small belongings of women's and infants' wear.

Margot's most attractive quarters are at 1212, and truly reflect the owner's slogan — "Personality in Clothes and Home." The clear creamy walls, the dull neutral tinted rugs, hangings and curtains, all in the tones of tan and brown, are only lighted up by occasional glints of gold in the sconces and candelabras. It all serves as a foil for, and to bring out in strong relief, the peculiar personality and distinctive types of those who have the happy fortune to have Margot design their frocks and bonnets.

Everybody has read about the Old Curiosity Shop around which Charles Dickens wrote such a wonderfully fascinating story. That was located in the heart of Old London. A most interesting Old Curiosity Shop right in the heart of Chicago is at Room 1324, where you can find Antique Jewelry and Mosaics, Cameos, Bronzes, Ivories, Brass Candlesticks, Copper Pots and Kettles, China Ware, Porcelain, Russian Samovars, Sheffield Ware, Royal Worcester, Capo del Monte, Sevres, Old Vienna, Delft, Marble, Old and Rare Books, Paintings, etc. Visitors come here from all over the world to see what is considered the most complete collection of cameos in the world.

At L. Norma Hay's "Chic Shop," Room 1326, you will find smart and alluring fashions in afternoon gowns from Eastern centers at popular prices. Also advanced spring styles in tailored suits at $25. And the hat that is just the thing you have been searching for you are sure to find in Kathryn Jensen's Millinery Section in the same shop.

The small hats displayed in this shop are extremely smart in their style; also sailors, tricorne, and a variety of novelty designs with high turned sides, trimmed with flowers, fruit, ribbons, and novelty straw flowers.

Marguerite, the famous dressmaker, won the Gossard trophy last season and rumor says she will repeat the performance again. She made the wonderful black leather dress which Ethel Hill wears at the tea dance at the Bluebird Room. Marguerite is probably the most original member of the Fashion Art League of America, and her gowns are often worn by professionals, who find their daring conceits much to their liking. Her new home in the Stevens Building is a luxurious tier of rooms at 1702. Rooms of different periods and most enticing gardens set with growing plants and splashing fountains provide a background that fitly sets off her splendid gowns.

Just think of a whole shop full of beautiful waists. Edwards and Lee, at 1128, have blouses so delectable that they fairly beckon from their window to passing femininity to come in and be adorned. Really excellent values are found here in all the approved models of the latest vagaries of fashion's whims.

Le Beau Monde, as it is called, is the rendezvous of the smart set for frocks and frills. Gowns and blouses and chapeaux of a magnificence that is astounding—all are found here. The Misses Moynihan are the owners and they fit you out not only with the outer wear, but corsets and lingerie of a fragility quite in keeping with the luxury of their outer garments.

One hardly needs to introduce Negrescou and the Wiggery at 1314, because this master in the hair world has already built his trade up in other locations, but his quarters here at 1314 are more complete than any previous ones and there is an air of quiet that is conducive to the success of his hairdressing experts while occupied with the problem of enhancing your scanty locks.

Colangelo, The Ladies' Tailor at 1412, has his hands full taking care of an extensive list of patrons who appreciate the fine points of his tailor mades. There may be some who do not know the excellence of his work, and for them this is written.

A quaint, pretty millinery shop called The Nifty, is at 1230, presided over by Marie Oxx. Wonderfully clever Parisian touches adorn the hats here on display and, with the windows ultra chic, give one no reason to lament the long distance from the Champs de Elysees.

Robert Staedter, the old renowned furrier, beloved of Chicago's Smart Set, is quartered in 1302-06, and is bringing out all his old friends and making many new ones. Since furs are now as much a part of Summer clothing as Winter, Mr. Staedter finds the once dull season in the fur world now quite a brisk time and has been compelled to add to his already roomy quarters.

Grace Meeker, at 1425, specializes on interior decorations and has some exceedingly clever ideas in furniture for sun parlors. Her collection of old mahogany is well worth more than a brief visit.

Rosenberg Bros. have a very up-to-date fur shop at 1416, where they accomplish miraculous things with discarded furs, and almost make you believe they are brand new when they have finished reconstructing them.

"The Tribune's" New York Theater Letter.

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—There was a play produced at the Cort theater last week that is either one of the worst melodramas ever written or one of the best burlesques ever staged. At this writing the verdict has not been returned and the jury is said to stand six and six.

"Pay Day" is the title, and two rather unknowns, Oliver Bailey and Lottie Meaney, are the authors. A "talking motion picture play" is the program classification, and while the form would seem to stamp it as a frank attempt to make fun of the average moving picture scenario, the fact that originally it was a serious play, written, accepted, and played as such under another title, leaves the question open. But, good farce or bad melodrama, "Pay Day," forty-eight hours after its production, is the most talked of incident of the season. Even the experts of the press, who are presumed to know a hawk from a handsaw in the theater, admit they are puzzled. No one of them seems willing to invite the [illegible] of the producers by frankly accepting the play as a melodrama, or to assume the full responsibility of calling it a burlesque.

"Pay Day" is written as a play within a play, or rather a scenario within a play, something on the "On Trial" order. The prologue finds the [illegible] Vincent Serrano discussing rather heatedly with the appealing Irene Fenwick, they being actors, the advisability of his accepting a part in a screen drama, the scenario of which has just been submitted to them.

Vincent does not care for the idea. Irene is much in favor of it. As they start to read the script the stage is darkened, a typical movie screen is lowered, and the action of the scenario is begun—first in pictures on the screen and later by the actors themselves. Vincent is the double dyed and dastardly villain, probably the worst villain ever born of any man's imagination, and Irene the sweet young innocent who is the object of his principal machinations.

The story itself is quite as impossible as any the screen drama presents. Irene falls in love with the crafty Vincent; he induces her to steal $1,000 from her employer, a physician, and then has her sent away for two years to get her out of the way. Once out of prison, she strikes his trail with vengeance in her heart, a vengeance fanned to bitterest hatred when she discovers him married to a lady who is both rich and fat.

Vincent, however, is not to be foiled so easily. So he murders his fat wife, puts a string of her pearls in Irene's pocket, locks her in with the corpse, and calls the police. This time Irene 's sent up for life.

But Sing Sing walls do not long a [illegible] make for her. Out she pops a year or two later, and this time completes her revenge most horribly. Taking from the laboratory of her old employer, the doctor, a quantity of leprosy germs, she arranges a meeting with Vincent, who has taken advantage of the situation and married again.

Irene frightens his young wife away, passes a few of the germs on to him, and then calmly announces that, pay day having arrived, she will now have the complete satisfaction of taking him with her to the leper colony on "Molaki, the island of abandoned hope," where, we assume, movies do not corrupt nor second wives break in and steal.

To laugh or not to laugh was not the question with the first audience. Being more or less sophisticated, and taking delight in showing it, this audience decided to laugh about the middle of the second act. After that "Pay Day" was a good deal of a riot.

But whether succeeding audiences will laugh or not it is impossible to say. There is a chance that, like "Robert Macaire," having been produced as a drama, "Pay Day" will turn out to be an excellent comedy.

The big playgoing public, however, is rather literal. It does not care much for the subtleties of managers or the jokes of authors. Therefore we are forced to doubt if "Pay Day," either as melodrama or travesty, will be more than a four weeks' wonder.

There is a story back of the production of "Pay Day" floating up and down Broadway, which, if true, illustrates again the difficulties of the playwright. "Pay Day" was first called "Her Price," and was tried on tour with Emma Dunn featured as the heroine.

At that time it was good old fashioned melodrama, without any moving picture frills to disguise it or stamp it with novelty, and, as old fashioned melodrama, fairly successful. It was not, however, considered good enough for a metropolitan test, and so was brought in for repairs.

It seems, accepting the gossips' word for it, that some months ago Bayard Veiller, the author of "Within the Law," had an idea for a big melodrama of New York life which, being written in twenty-four scenes (and recently sold to Klaw & Erlanger, by the way), made frequent use of the moving picture screen as an aid to the drama, even as Thompson Buchanan had done in "Life," but much more elaborately.

Veiller read this play to several managers. They all commented upon the skill with which the thing had been builded. Now comes "Pay Day," which is "Her Price" in altered form, with the moving picture scheme added.

And the question naturally arises: Was the idea "lifted" from the Veiller script, or, being released and floating tremulously upon the Broadway air, did it just naturally find lodgment in certain cranial reservations? Echo, in this instance, being a discreet sprite, has so far refused to answer.

They honored "Billy" Crane at a dinner Sunday night because he has been acting for fifty-three years, come next April. There were four or five hundred guests and two or three hundred of them represented the theatrical aristocracy of the country. Actors, managers, playwrights, authors of books, authors of screen dramas, designers of scenery, makers of wigs, and composers of songs. The rest were literary or commercial.

Mr. Crane has by degrees advanced to that proud eminence that can hold but one man at a time. He is now the dean of the American stage. Having been a comedian all his life, he assumes the honor gracefully and apologetically.

He blushed for the compliments with which they showered him. Blushed when Daniel Frohman mentioned him as among the curious exhibits of the profession in that he had been content to live with but one wife for forty-five years.

Blushed again when President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia university congratulated him upon being that most wonderful of all God's creations, a human being capable of reaching the mind through the heart, and added him to the beatitudes by saying, "Blessed be the funmakers, for they shall inherit the earth."

He laughed when George Ade referred to him as one comedian who did his training in the library in place of in the gymnasium, a custom inspired by the "Southern California School of Art."

And he must have thrilled when Henry Miller, approaching his peroration with a clutch of the throat and real tears in his eyes which fell whither they listed, referred to him as a member of that group of aristocrats who once upon a time held the standards of acting at the highest point they have ever reached in this country—Booth, Barrett, McCullough, Sheridan, Thorne, Coghlan, Mayo, O'Neill, Robson, Jefferson, Goodwin, etc.—"an aristocrat in the true meaning and definition of the word; an aristocrat by virtue of a long and distinguished service, not only as an actor but as a producer, for he has brought to the stage some of the best of plays from some of the best authors, and whether farce, comedy, or plays in a more serious vein, they have been always sane and, to his eternal credit, always sanitary."

This really was the keynote of the proceedings—that Mr. Crane not only had lived fifty-three active years on the stage but that he also had remained "sane and sanitary," and was able now to look every man with whom he had had any dealings straight in the eye and invite him to retire to those climes famous for a lack of climate and a sociable society.

It had been prophesied that on this occasion Mr. Crane would announce formally his retirement from the stage at the conclusion of this season's work. But he evidently had no intention of doing so. He has completed his seventy years, he has all the money he and Mrs. Crane will ever need, and there are no small Cranes awaiting the surplus.

"But," as he explained it, "so long as my health is perfect and my work is my pleasure I shall not retire."

Then he added, with a snap of his jaws, as though framing a reply to those who were forever reporting his probable passing:

"When the time does come for me to retire, I hope I shall know it before you have to tell me."

Here and There in the Theaters.

By Percy Hammond.

MISS ETHEL BARRYMORE, having been criticised by an irreverent reviewer recently, turned upon her tormenter in a two column retort and extinguished him. He was not, said she, a dramatic critic, but an ex-reporter of baseball games, and his opinions, however inoffensive concerning athletics, were an impudence when applied to matters of art. She regarded his remarks as Richard Mansfield once did the appearance of Montgomery and Stone in evening clothes—as "damned effrontery." Miss Barrymore was so thorough in her chastisement that the critic, a large, honest, inexperienced person named Heywood Broun, crept under his judgment seat and refused to come out until his journal, the New York Tribune, had reluctantly transferred him back among the gymnasts.

But not before Collier's Weekly had entered the controversy in behalf of the hurt reviewer. It referred umbrageously to Miss Barrymore as "an actress" and said that Mr. Broun's withdrawal left American journalism without a dramatic critic worthy of the name. It deplored the bereavement and the condition resulting therefrom, and it made many hearts heavy pondering the rueful plight of the drama, deprived of its critic.

Stung by these contemptuous aspersions, several of the younger theatrical reporters started out the other night to discover a drama to criticise. With shows they were familiar, but their encounters with the drama had been so infrequent that they feared they would not recognize it if they saw it. They were all liberal fellows, not like the logician who complained that a sonata was not a syllogism, but eager to find something that, combining character, action, effective construction, illusion, and literary quality, would classify as drama. By "literary quality" they did not mean the rhetorical bombinations of "Experience," but the quality that would say "ain't" if "ain't" were the true thing to say. They returned from their expedition, having seen many amusing shows, but only one entertainment that could possibly be the subject of a dramatic criticism.

This, you will say at once, is "The Ohio Lady," because it is the composition of two of America's most excellent men of letters, Mr. Booth Tarkington and Mr. Julian Street. Both are scholarly and urbane. Mr. Street's sophistication is a sincere and masculine variant of the usual shrill and falsetto affectations of the New York story writers, and Mr. Tarkington's deep knowledge of living is embodied in such admirable products as "Penrod" and "The Turmoil." The collaboration suggests a significant American play, you imagine, and you are further encouraged by its selection of a theme—the story of the wholesome girl from the middle west small town thrown into conflict with the evil and dissipation of life in New York City.

"The Ohio Lady," however, is merely a servile frameup, loud, excessive, impossible, and ineptly done. Most of the characters are caricatures, most of the incidents distortion. New York is no more to blame for "The Ohio Lady" than Jerusalem is for "Ben Hur," to adapt one of Frank Colby's constrained attitudes. You look, for instance, at George Tewksbury Reynolds III. in the Olympian person of Mr. Eugene O'Brien, and you know that nothing could be more remote from life or a satire of life than this incredible snob's absurd ignorance of the difference between Idaho and Ohio, unless it be his precipitate regeneration.

I was about to proceed with this dramatic criticism of "The Ohio Lady" when the news reached me that last night the sable doors of oblivion closed upon it as a theatrical entertainment. It failed, of course, not because it was a bad play, but because, in spite of first night enthusiasm it was a bad show. The heroine was unpopular because she was such a glutton for insult, seeking to be affronted in everything she did. The hero was unpopular, though well acted by Mr. O'Brien, because he was so impossible a cad. And the young woman about whom the conflict raged was the ultimate syllable of all that is unpleasant and unworthy. So it seems that the Messrs. Tarkington and Street when they wrote a bad play they wrote an unsuccessful one. Which, it may be, is better than writing a bad play that is prosperous.

Nijinsky, it is officially announced by the Metropolitan opera house management, is to come to the United States in time to take part in the return engagement of the Ballet Russe in New York. Burns Mantle, some weeks since in a Sunday feuilleton in THE TRIBUNE, intimated that such an outcome was more than merely likely. The postmortems on the Chicago engagement of the Diaghileff troupe were equally divided as to whether Nijinsky's absence or the scale of prices was the cause of the small attendance.

Irvin Cobb, whose adventures to date in the theater have not been happy, is to try again—this time in collaboration with Roi Cooper Magrue. They will make a play from one of the Cobb stories.

Avery Hopwood, whose farce called "Fair and Warmer," is one of the definite hits of the season in New York, has written another, "Just for Tonight." It is of the lend-me-your-wife school of comedy.

Raymond Hitchcock, when he comes back from London, will be under the Dillingham management.

Miss Grace George plans to add a fifth play to her repertoire, and to revive "Divorçons" also. She expects to come to Chicago for a special engagement of at least four weeks.

The members of the Comedie Française of Paris plan to make a tour of the principal American cities next autumn by arrangement with the government of the French republic. Both classic and modern dramas will be produced, and the visit, so 'tis said, is in gratitude to America for its contributions of money and sympathy in the present war.

Laurence Housman, poet and the author of "Prunella," is on these shores to make a lecture tour, talking about suffrage and the drama.

As to a Civil Service Heaven for Music Makers

By Eric De Lamarter.

GLENN DILLARD GUNN, a courageous and generous propagandist for American music, is not at all to be envied. He has done the remarkable thing in assembling a symphony orchestra, and another in assembling guarantors and audiences. But he is not to be envied. In this series of special concerts he limits his programs to music written by Americans, whereas his orchestra would win a quicker friendship with the staples of the repertory—and suffer far less for the sins of the composers. But he is not to be envied. He is at the mercy of the crops, and not all who sow much garner in great riches.

There is loud call for the musical equivalent of the experimental theater directed by Prof. Baker of Harvard university. Mr. Gunn's concerts are that by sheer necessity. But, judging from the program of his concert of Thursday evening last, he is the victim of this necessity. For too few of the composers he has befriended, during the last three seasons, have proved the possession of sufficient craftsmanship for public test. The equivalent of that "experimental theater" must be dedicated to things more nearly fundamental.

There is a failing characteristic of our educational methods, a failing rooted in our unreasoning faith in the ideal of democracy. Not all who wish to write have any business writing. The latent power should be revealed or stoically laid out to die in the music school. And that is one matter in which the "school orchestra" ignores an important argument for its usefulness. It makes "ensemble" sense and general musicianship by study of classics within its powers, of course; but who other than fond relatives wants to hear those classics played in public? This study class (for that is what the school orchestra really is) should serve the theory department for practical demonstration, as well as the fiddle department for experience.

There are exceptions to this general observation in one or two of the schools, but not enough to signify.

The opportunity is here, at that. The bare announcement of a series of "Lyric Pieces" by Carl Hillmann, a member of the first violin contingent of the symphony orchestra, to be played by the small orchestra at the Art Institute this Sunday afternoon, contains several sermon texts. For Mr. Hillmann, overmodest and sincere, made a special study of this group of a dozen players and wrote with the limitations of a small ensemble—not the gigantic, complex symphony orchestra—in mind.

So has he done in times past. A couple of seasons ago his Serenade for the Chicago Wood Wind Choir came to performance, and a highly successful essay it was. Why? Because he studied a circumscribed medium, cut and fitted his inspirations, criticized his product in rehearsal, and turned out a finished article. His violin and piano sonata went through the same process, and his "Romanza" for organ and cello (or some such combination) and his lesser little pieces. He employed a me-

Playbills of the Week

Blackstone—"Rio Grande," a play by Augustus Thomas. The playwright in this, the management is insistent in explaining, returns to the style he exhibited in "Arizona"; and the new work is described as the first of its kind since that successful melodrama, although Mr. Thomas himself, regarded both "Colorado" and "The Ranger" as of the "Arizona" milieu. Miss Lola Fisher, Richard Bennett, Robert McWade, and Miss Amelia Gardner are of the cast. First time this evening.

Chicago—"Town Topics," the revue on which Ned Wayburn spent $100,000 of money earned in Salt Lake City by somebody else. As a spectacle it is said to prove the expenditure. Cross and Josephine, Bert Leslie, Miss Trixie Friganza, and Peter Page are of the company. First time this evening.

Powers'—"The Chief," with John Drew. This is the first of the several plays by Horace Annesley Vachell to be acted in Chicago. Mr. Drew, in it, is called upon to deal gently with the foibles and frailties of others; so it would appear that his employment is not unusual. Miss Laura Hope Crewes is his principal associate. First time tomorrow evening.

Palace Music hall—"Overtones," with Miss Helen Lackaye, is held over as the chief feature of the new week's bill. Miss Gerstenberg's little fantasy is credited by the management with having been a factor in last week's big attendance in the Palace. Newcomers tomorrow will be Miss Anna Wheaton, Harry Cooper, Houdini, Harry and Eva Puck, and Miss Beatrice Herford.

Majestic—Mrs. Langtry, a performer whose traditions carry back through two generations, comes tomorrow to head the new bill. She and two men will be seen in a short piece called "Ashes." Others will be Miss Lillian Shaw, Marshall Montgomery, Vasco, Miss Ruby Helder, and F. V. Bowers.

dium small enough to permit experiment. Therefore his one orchestral work to come to performance (at Ravinia park about two summers back) had the surety that bespoke practice.

The principal ailments of the scores heard at Mr. Gunn's concert were the lack of facility in accomplishing orchestral effect, the inability to sustain the long structural spans of the scores, and the lack of "dash and go." Two of these virtues—nay, necessities—may be acquired in smaller forms, and the third (that of orchestral effect) seems to be one part study, one part revision under the lash of some experienced one's profanity, and one part gift of the indolent gods.

To accomplish these things, the incipient composer must have chance to hear, to criticize and to be criticised. Criticism is not always pleasant, but it is salutary—as we who have lived in the home of professional orchestra players know gratefully. There is something mighty consoling, for all that it often is exquisitely painful, in the direct comment of a cellist in bedroom slippers and shirt sleeves, a stump of a cigar polluting the air, to the tune of a cuckoo clock wheezing the hour of midnight! Generally it is truth without cussedness or gentleness.

This, of course, is the ideal environment of the young composer, and not all may find it. But it made Haydn's technique, and Mozart's, and Beethoven's, and Richard Strauss', and it will make technique for others.

Now, the conductor of those Art institute concerts, and Arthur Dunham of the Sinai temple concerts, have been heard to urge composers to "write something especially for us." So far as programs indicate only Mr. Hillmann has accepted the compliment and the challenge. Yet here were the inestimable advantages of hearing and hearing criticised tentative masterpieces! That a composer should be able to write a tone poem in the vein of Scriabin because he has written a successful rondino for two clarinets, oboe, and flute does not follow, of course; but it is as sure as the law of the Medes and Persians that he is not able to write such a tone poem unless he has mastered just those ingredients of the orchestra.

Haydn poured out the greater portion of his riches in scores utterly midget beside the tyro's first efforts of today. There exist several works by Saint-Saëns, for example, written exquisitely for what might be termed a "chamber orchestra." Art and size, let us all chant again in chorus, are not necessarily correlated, calling Wagner's "Siegfried Idyl" to witness, and Richard Strauss' "Ariadne auf Naxos," and the "Heldenleben" one's serenade for wind instruments which began his vogue.

The American composer's heaven on earth would be some sort of a place like the MacDowell studios at Peterboro, N. H., with opportunities to hear played incipient sonatas, trios, quartets, sextets, octets, etc., with a blissful end in symphony and opera. It doesn't exist and it probably never will exist. But those ingredients are scattered about the countryside—bursting with invitation (some of them!) and offering, good or bad, invaluable chances for discoveries.

After all, a small orchestra such as that I heard last Wednesday evening in a "movie" theater in Jackson, Mich., is of artistic use in the world. It ought to be educational, as well. Its two fiddles, clarinet, cello, piano, and "traps" are an ensemble, twin sister to the home orchestra in whose ranks Haydn lived, and not so distantly related to the Flonzaley quartet. There's nothing "high brow" about a "movie" orchestra, but its possibilities are inexhaustible. Many a noted choral conductor "cut his teeth" on a village choir.

Most conductors become bald, not from work, but from anxious hours spent in reducing chaos into order. Mr. Gunn has some affection for his hair, and he surely has been good enough to the American composer to merit a little consideration.

PUTTING THEM ON THE PAN.

Tell me not that only women rip each other up the back,
That the female of the species does the dirt,
That the feminine persuasion go for character abrasion
And the Trousers are more pious than the Skirt—
For the men are just as busy putting others on the pan,
And they do it with as energetic will;
And when any flock of fellows gets together for a fan
You can gamble there's a geezer on the grill,
On the grill!
You can gamble they've a geezer on the grill!

Yes, the Hemales are as nifty at the nabbing of the news
As the Daughters of the Distaff ever be,
And at nosing out cadavers in pestiferous palavers
They are positively ghoulish in their glee;
Never skeleton in closet but they rattle out at will,
And they never leave a bone upon a bone.
When you see a secret session get together for a spill
You can bet they've got a sucker on the stone,
On the stone!
There's a poor, deluded sucker on the stone!

"Did you hear that Smith was failing?" "Well, he orta fail, the bum."
"Bum is right." "You bet it's right." "You said a face-full."
"And I hear his wife is friendly with . . . you know him . . . little crumb."
"Crumb's the word." "The word is right." "It IS disgraceful."
"Jones resigned? Har, har; that's funny! . . . He was canned." "He was?" "You bet!"
"Short accounts?" "That's what was rumored. . . . I don't know."
"Wouldn't doubt it. . . . He was crooked." "Like a pretzel—crooked yet."
"Have another? . . . See you later?" "Sure. . . . Adoo!"
Good-bye!
"Don't repeat that stuff I told you. . . . Well, adoo!"

Tell me not that only women stab each other in the back,
That the fair (or unfair) sex has got the floor—
Ipsedoing umbrageous is excessively contagious,
And the men are all infected to the core.
Yes, they love to card a brother, love to lay him on the grill
And in spirit deck his coccyx with a can.
When you see a flock of collars get together for the kill,
Bet your bundle there is some one on the pan,
On the pan!
Bet your bundle they have some one on the pan!

VITAGRAPH'S NEWEST STAR.

THERE'S absolutely no withstanding the movies! Here's E. H. Sothern, foremost Shakespearian actor on the English speaking stage, who recently retired from the theater, saying "Never again, never again!" Now it is announced by the Vitagraph company that he has been secured for a series of four special feature subjects. Mr. Sothern will begin work about May 1 and will continue to work through the summer until the four features are completed. Among the supporting stars will be Anita Stewart, Edith Story, and Lillian Walker. Mr. Sothern is the fifth legitimate player of international fame to enlist under the Vitagraph standard. Before him came Edna May, Frank Daniels, Charles Richman, and Joseph Kilgour.

He's married, girls! Who? Eugene Pallette. To whom? Miss Ann Slater! Yoo hoo!

A bit of news which will be interesting to lots of people is the announcement that Harris Merton Lyon, short story writer, has been signed by Thomas H. Ince for the N. Y. moving picture firm.

To the Universal galaxy of stars has been added Thomas Jefferson, popular in both the spoken and silent drama.

Recently Mae Murray, the Lasky lady, rented a bungalow in Hollywood, Cal. She took possession of it during the rainy season, and immediately acquired several fur rugs on which to sit before the fire. Immediately upon her purchase of the rugs the hot weather came, and now they say that Miss Murray is trying to trade the rugs for cakes of ice.

William Gillette has signed with Essanay and will appear in many of his well known plays, including "Sherlock Holmes" and "Secret Service." Mr. Gillette will begin work on the first of these vurr' shortly.

When Pavlowa made her first picture for the Universal company, she received not only $50,000 and half interest in the picture, but also the promise of a complete copy of the film with the titles in Russian. The Russia copy Mlle. Pavlowa will send to the czar of Russia. She believes in remembering her friends.

FEATURE FILMS OF THE WEEK

"According to the Law."—Five act Gaumont feature with Mildred Gregory in the lead. A woman's debt to her home is the basis of the plot. What the debt is and how she deals with the debt you must learn from the picture.

"La Paloma."—Three part Vitagraph drama featuring Mary Anderson.

"Poor Little Peppina."—Famous Players feature with Mary Pickford taking the part of a wealthy American child who was kidnaped and taken to Sicily and made to work in a vineyard. From that time on little Mary as Peppina has adventures galore. If you are fond of Mary you will undoubtedly be fond of this picture.

"The Blindness of Love."—Five act Metro production featuring Julius Steger. Possibly is distantly related to the "Blindness of Virtue."

"The Dream of Eugene Aram."—Selig three reel special taken from Thomas Hood's famous poem. In it Tyrone Power and little Rey Clarke are featured. One of the most remarkable pictures screened in many a long day.

"To Have and To Hold."—Lasky picturization of book by same name. Mae Murray is featured.

"The Hunted Woman."—Vitagraph picturization of James Oliver Curwood's novel of the same name. S. Rankin Drew and Virginia Pearson are featured.

"The Mystery of Orcival."—Three reel Biograph drama. Here you have one of the most deteckativy detective stories.

"The Silken Spider."—Three reel American drama featuring Vivian Rich and Alfred Vosburgh. Temptation and again temptation forms the text for what is evidently intended for a sermon.

"True Nobility."—Five act American drama featuring E. Forrest Taylor. Tennyson once wrote, "'Tis noble to be good." We surmise that Mr. Tennyson never dreamed that some day his line would furnish the motif for a motion picture plot—which it is.

"Unto Those Who Sin."—Selig red seal play written by James Oliver Curwood featuring Fritzi Brunette. For purple and fine linen a girl sacrifices all.

"What Doris Did."—Three reel Thanhouser drama featuring Doris Grey. What did Doris do? She did plenty. The picture is a deteckative picture and Doris is a busy lady.

Stationary Photoplays.

Castle.—Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday—Extended engagement of Marguerite Clark in "Out of the Drifts." Thursday, Friday, Saturday, and Sunday—"The Black List," Lasky production featuring Blanche Sweet.

Colonial.—"The Moral Fabric," Thomas H. Ince production, featuring Frank Mills; also "Cinders of Love," a Keystone comedy, featuring Chester Conklin.

La Salle.—"Diplomacy," featuring Marie Doro; also a Kleine scenic picture and a Mutual comedy.

Studebaker.—"To Have and To Hold," Lasky picturization of the book; Burton Holmes travelogue, and also an animated cartoon, "Bobby Bump and His Pointer Pup."

Strand.—"A Law Unto Himself," Mutual five reel drama, featuring Crane Wilbur; "See America First," Mutual travel pictures; Strand Topical Review, and also a Strand comedy.

Ziegfeld.—"The Blindness of Love," Metro production, featuring Julius Steger; "The Price of Happiness," Equitable drama, featuring Mary Boland, and also another "Musty Suffer" comedy.

It works like a sprocket wheel

THE SAFETY TREAD ON BATAVIA Security Tires is really like a sprocket wheel, with one high surface after another biting into heavy mud or snow.

Yet these successive high spots aren't raised. The indentations between them are what make them high spots by comparison.

They are really the level surface of the tire—a minimum surface which develops every possible bit of speed because so little of the tire touches the ground.

Is your car tired—or are you? Try BATAVIAS.

Here Is "Sure Fire Stuff" That Knocks 'Em Out of Their Seats in Vaudeville.

PALACE.

Eddie Foy and Six Little Foys:

"Hello, Central. Gimme 1007456789543 New Rochelle. Nobody home? Whaddayamean nobody home? My family couldn't all go out at the same time.

"Hello. Yes. This is papa. Tell mamma I won't be home for dinner. What? She says it will be all right if I bring you home a doll. Well, what kind of a doll do you want? What? Your mother says to tell me I'll know what kind—that I know all about dolls. Well, you tell her I know enough not to bring the kind I know about home.

"Hello, son. How's things in New Rochelle? Say, son, which one is this? Oh, yes. Hello, kid. Load the folks into the car and come on down town. Which car? Quit kidding; you know we only got one car—the truck. Get out of New Rochelle for the evening—that's the only town Columbus refused to discover.

"Hello. Who's this? Oh, you. What? The black chicken laid a duck egg today? Well, don't let the rooster know anything about it."

MAJESTIC.

James Diamond and Sybil Brennan:

"You are the girl of my dreams."

"Aren't you nice and gallant."

"I have had some awful dreams lately."

"My mother was an actress, and I could have been an actress for nothing."

"My father was a minister, and I could have been good for nothing."

"O, you make me tired with your nonsense. Men don't know anything, anyway. It's the women that know things."

"I know it; that's why we stay out late at night."

"What do you mean?"

"Gosh, we've got to learn something."

"You keep on staying out nights and you'll never go to heaven."

"I don't care; I own the other place."

"You own it?"

"Yes, my wife gave it to me this morning."

"Kiss me."

"Mother won't like it."

"Mother isn't going to get it."

"Don't you know that kissing spreads contagion?"

"Poison me at once, because, darling, I love you."

"You have loved me a long while?"

"Yes, sweetheart; I have loved you and your sister. And I have dreamed that maybe some day you would become my wife, and we could move into a nice flat, and take your sister as a boarder."

Charles E. Evans and Helena Phillips:

"Did you see anything of my razor?"

"Yes, it is over there on the dressing table. I used it to sharpen my pencil this morning."

"What is the second number in the combination to this safe?"

"Is the second number necessary"

MAJESTIC.

Leona Thurber and Harry Madison:

"I have a terrible cold. I was visiting a friend the other night, and she served some draft beer."

"But how did you get your cold?"

"I sat in the draft."

"Have you any nice fresh farmer's eggs?"

"No, only hen's."

"What is butter today?"

"Same as it was yesterday—butter."

"Fresh. And what are prunes?"

"Prunes are raisins with inflammatory rheumatism."

Avon Comedy Four:

"How much does the doctor charge for a visit?"

"Five dollars for the first visit and $3 for the second."

"Hello, doctor, here I am again."

"What do you smoke?"

"I smoke stogies. My brother smokes fish."

"How much coffee do you drink?"

"About twelve saucers full."

"Why don't you drink it out of a cup?"

"I can't. The spoon always hits me in the nose."

"Keep your mouth open and say fish."

"Herring."

"Aren't you going to pay me for my advice?"

"No; I'm not going to take it."

A Million Dollar March Sale

BUYING POWER

THIRTY-TWO of the largest furniture stores in twenty-eight of the largest cities in America used their combined Buying Power to secure bedrock prices upon what is undoubtedly the greatest single furniture purchase ever made in the world. They made of standard furniture and, by doing so, they secured for their tens of thousands of customers lower prices than have ever been heard of before.

A Million Dollar Purchase

Some of the cities represented in this great Buying Organization are—

New York Detroit Chicago Toledo St. Louis
Indianapolis Cincinnati Milwaukee Sioux City
Columbus Trenton Worcester Springfield
Pittsburgh Kansas City Dayton Davenport
Buffalo Bridgeport Newark Fort Wayne

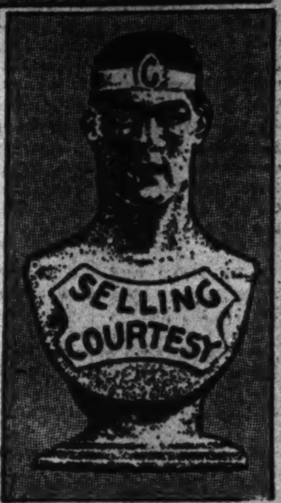
IN all of these cities this great sale of standard furniture, at prices far below any that have ever been made before, is now going on.

Here in Chicago, in the Spiegel Four Stores, carload after carload of this fine furniture is coming in and we are offering it to you on credit at prices lower than you can possibly buy it for cash.

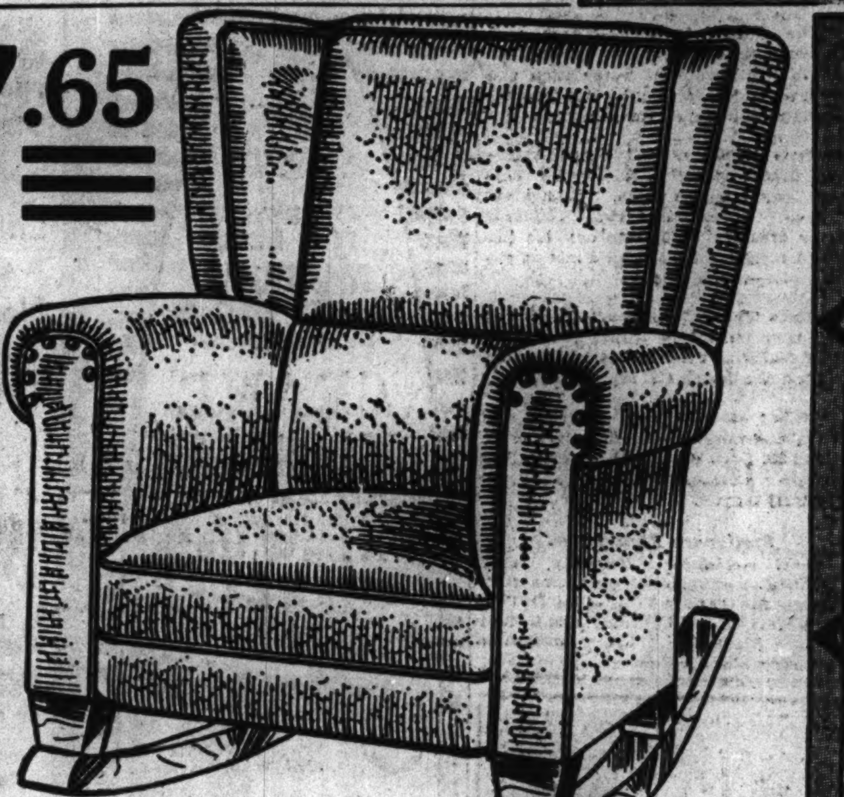
This is a most amazing example of Buying Power. And we want you to know that our Selling Courtesy goes with it.

Your credit is good. A dollar or two in cash is all you need. Come and look through this enormous stock. You will receive every courtesy whether you are buying or not.



SELLING COURTESY

A Million Dollar Special Luxurious Arm Rocker for Tomorrow Only $7.65



THAT is what our Million Dollar furniture purchase is going to do for you tomorrow. Eighteen car loads of these luxurious overstuffed rockers were bought and divided among our twenty-eight furniture stores. One of these car loads was allotted to us.

VAUDEVILLE WIT

PALACE.

Vaudeville—Joe Laurie and Aleen Bronson:

"Why, you impudent boy, I have a notion to slap you in the face."

"Let's go swimming."

"Let's go swimming? What's that got to do with it?"

"Didn't you say you had an ocean? Let's sail boats."

"Notion! Notion! Notion."

"I heard you, I heard you. If you don't want to swim, let's go wading."

"I said a notion."

"Oh, well, that's different. I take back my invitations."

"What do you do?"

"Who, me? I'm a census taker. If you have any left I'll be forced to take 'em."

"Well, you need 'em."

"My father is a millionaire."

"He is?"

"Yes, he is, and a rich one."

"Oh, look at that deck of cards I found in your coat. I'll bet you are a gambler."

"I suppose if you found a nickel in my vest you'd say I was a conductor."

"You're single, aren't you, girlie?"

"No, I have been married about a year."

"Oh, well, why didn't you say so? I gotta work different now."

McVICKER'S.

Bernard and Shaw:

"Where are you bound for?"

"I'm going to order a tombstone for my rich uncle who died last week."

"What did your uncle die of?"

"Malaria."

"There's only one thing will cure malaria—that's whisky and quinine."

"Where can you get it?"

"The whisky and quinine?"

"No, the malaria."

"I just saw you come out of a saloon."

"I was merely partaking of a little stimulant by the advice of my doctor."

"Who is your doctor?"

"I'm the doctor."

"Do you know that last year in this country over sixteen hundred million dollars was spent for liquor? That's terrible!"

"You're right. Something ought to be done to reduce the price of drink."

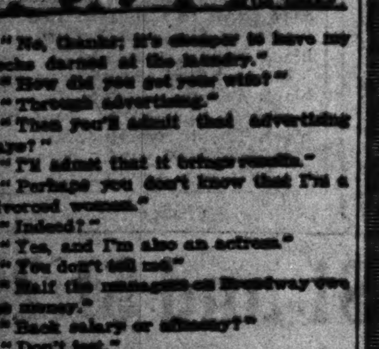
"Is there a single thing you can say in favor of liquor?"

"Yes, they say a glass of whisky will break up a cold."

"Yes, and six glasses will break up a home."

"I haven't got a home. I'm a widower."

"You ought to get married again."



"No, thanks; it's cheaper to have my socks darned at the laundry."

"How did you get your wife?"

"Through advertising."

"Then you'll admit that advertising pays?"

"I'll admit that it brings results."

"Perhaps you don't know that I'm a divorced woman."

"Indeed?"

"Yes, and I'm also an actress."

"You don't tell me!"

"Half the managers on Broadway owe me money."

"Back salary or alimony?"

"Don't jest."

"Did your husband leave you much?"

"About twice a week."

"No, no! I mean did he leave any property?"

"Nothing but a pair of suspenders."

"O, well, they'll help support you."

PALACE.

The Sharrocks:

"C'mon, c'mon, show a little speed. It's gettin' so that whenever you walk it looks like your feet were about to take root and grow in the ground. [Buckling up her dress while she is squirming.] Say, what kind of a dance is this? Are you one-stepping or fox-trotting? If you gotta do a dance while I hook you up, hesitate. Women are a wise bunch, believe me. Here you can't even dress yourselves and you want to vote."

"Well, I'm gettin' tired of going along from day to day without hittin' the grub wagon regular."

"Say, you et this mornin', didn't you? Didn't I blow you to coffee and?"

"Yes, you blew me to coffee and sinkers."

"Sinkers? What's sinkers?"

"Say, you oughta know what sinkers is. You lived on 'em all last winter."

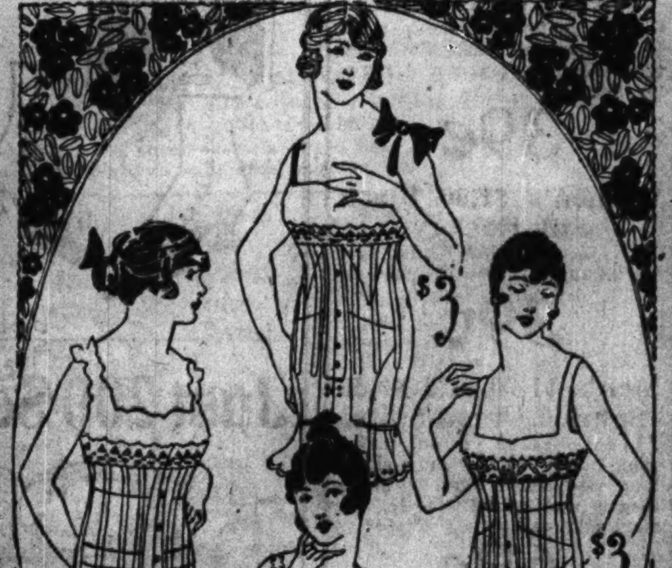
Celebrated Rengo Belt Cors n the

An enormous stock, in a large variety of the latest styl pring 191



A GREAT many women have learned t[illegible] the names of The Fair and Rengo Belt [illegible] sets. There is a feeling of mutual admi[illegible] in such an association. It means th[illegible] Rengo makers like to have The Fair feature their corsets because it gives them a big outlet in the City of Chicago—and the Fair enjoys the distinction equally as much, in placing before the women of Chicago corsets of such dependable quality and such desirable and up-to-date styles.

We think so well of Rengo Belt corsets that we guarantee every pair to give satisfaction. When a pair does not meet with our claims, we gladly refund your money.

When we give prominence to any brand of corsets, we must first be positive that the corsets are fully worthy of that prominence—that the styles conform to the newest fashions in suits and dresses—that the qualities are dependable. Rengo Belt corsets conform to these requirements.

learned to lim Rengo Belt Co mutual admirati means that

YOU probably realize that we are becoming more and more enthusiastic each year. Quite so! Many more women have formed the Rengo Belt "habit" during the past year, and thus we feel that the corsets are deserving of every praise that we can extend. Rengo Belt Corsets, although originally made for the stout figures, are now shown in models of good, desirable, strong corsets suitable for average women—corsets that will be worn with a feeling of absolute satisfaction.

Come and talk corset matters over with one of our expert corsetieres. You will not be coaxed to buy, but will be advised conscientiously. Third Floor.

The new Rengo Belt models are here. You will find that they meet every possible demand—that they improve your figure and improve the looks of your gown. We will gladly show you some of the new numbers, even though you do not intend to buy. ALL CORSETS ARE FITTED FREE.

Each advertiser in The Chicago Tribune benefits from every battle that The Tribune has fought and won.

The stalwart support of Lincoln by Medill, the fight for sound money and McKinley, the great news scoops such as that of the Battle of Manila and the capture of Stensland, the Lorimer exposures, the campaigns against loan sharks and medical quacks—its crusade for national preparedness and aggressive Americanism—all these are reflected in the confidence of Tribune readers in what they read in The Tribune.

The Tribune, again and again, has been tried and not found wanting. It has been a success for 68 years.

NEW YORK SOCIETY. By MME. Y.

Lent Welcome to Hard Working Society Folk.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—For once in the history of society, its members are welcoming Lent. They have worked so long and hard in this most extended of seasons that they are what we sometimes describe as being "all in."

There was a time, several weeks ago, when even a father thought it was a jolly thing to look in at an entertainment. Debutante parties had almost the advantages of a circus, which gives the mature the opportunity to chaperone. The father of the debutante would be obliged to go to the big ball of the evening in order to escort his daughter home. It was noted that he sometimes came a little early and remained a little late. His contemporaries were there on the same mission, and all of the younger people were awfully nice to him. Now he is inquiring if it isn't all right for Laurette, the maid, to escort the young girl home. He cannot keep up the pace much longer, and neither can mother, or daughter herself.

People are flocking to the south to get away from a prolonged season—and the south, not realizing what was about to happen to it, is not quite prepared. There are not enough hotel rooms up and down the coast of Florida to accommodate the New Yorkers who are refugees of the social season. Those who have never before in their lives been subjected to anything less expensive than $20 a day for a bedroom are now quite glad to crawl into a cheaper room in a cheaper and hitherto undistinguished hotel.

Mrs. Gurnee Munn

Seven private cars arrived in one day at Palm Beach from New York and Tuxedo. Recently ten tracks were filled with private cars in the grounds of the Royal Poinciana. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney arrived with a party occupying three cars. Their houseboat, the Captiva, was waiting for them in Lake Worth, and they went immediately on board. A clever idea that, to take your own living quarters with you. I was telling you two or three weeks ago of the sad plight of Otto Kahn, who telegraphed for twenty rooms in the most expensive hotel, and could reserve only four.

Something Doing Every Minute.

It cannot be urged, however, that the 400 in fleeing New York is having much luck in getting away from social activity. There is something going on every minute in these southern capitals of fashion, and by way of providing a rarity, the elements themselves took a hand, and sent a little hail storm. A dance was scheduled, with E. Clarence Jones as host. It took place in Cocoanut grove, and the guests came with fur wraps on. They called the function the polar bear party.

Everything that takes place is recorded in the films. You will probably have an opportunity at the moving picture theater round the corner to see for the price of 10 cents everything that the rich and great are now working at to keep themselves amused during this arduous March. The most expensive moving picture ever made for one performance only has just been completed at Palm Beach. Needless to say, men and women of fashion are back of it, and—what is more of a novelty—are in it, too. Ten thousand feet of film have been taken, half of which doubtless will be destroyed when the actors see themselves acting.

Mrs. Gurnee Munn, who was Miss Wanamaker, is the principal actress. You will remember that she had moving pictures made of her wedding, which took place a short time ago. She is said to be an excellent performer. At least one producer has made her a handsome offer in the way of a salary, if she would appear professionally.

J. Alexander Leggett of New York wrote a scenario, the whole plot of which is laid in Palm Beach. It is said to be a thrilling story, with polo playing, swimming feats, an elopement and rescue in an aeroplane, and a fashionable wedding as incidents. Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs and Russell Colt are in the cast, as well as Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Armour of Chicago.

The wedding scene with the breakfast following has just been made. The hour at which it was taken was 11 in the morning. Society people committed the indiscretion of appearing at that time in evening clothes. The men, who always are more disturbed over their costuming than the women, when not acting, wore polo coats over their evening togs, and looked embarrassed.

Forecasting Summer Styles.

After the one performance the films will be destroyed in Cocoanut Grove in view of the men and the women who posed for the scene. O, yes—unimportant omission—I almost overlooked to say that these gallant men and women are working very hard indeed and it is in the name of charity. The sum realized will be devoted to the American ambulance in Paris.

Mrs. John Astor, who has been passing a number of weeks at the Ritz, has sailed for her home in London on board the Nieuw Amsterdam. Meantime her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Vincent Astor, is one of the most eagerly watched young women at the southern winter resorts. She is at Palm Beach, and gossip has it that she and Mrs. Hamilton Wilkes Cary are forecasting the summer styles. They say that whereas sports clothes have been so fashioned at Newport and other fashion centers, this year the dainty, ladylike lingeries will be worn.

These two leaders of fashion appear on the porch of the big hotel every day in the most delicate of embroidered and edged and beribboned creations. The other day Mrs. Astor wore a pink organdie and a wide brimmed white hat, shaded with a pink parasol. Think of it, you who are shivering under the March lake winds. Mrs. Cary wears gowns in the mornings of handkerchief linen, elaborately embroidered. The other day she introduced a new kind of sweater. It was of Jersey cloth, dark blue and white striped, made long and with a full pleated cape collar at the back. It was belted at the waist line.

Mrs. Gurnee Munn is given to wearing sport suits of glove silk. She has one of pale blue with an extremely short skirt. The coat is loose and belted with a stitched band of silk. It is edged at the throat with a narrow band of beaver. Usually she wears a small, round hat of white trimmed with a pale blue bow. One of her coats is of peach colored crêpe of a heavy weave. It is belted with a heavy sash of the same material.

Mrs. Frank M. Kindig

Mrs. Frank M. Kindig is one of the members of the Daughters of Indiana who will have charge of the meeting on Tuesday when Miss Mary Washburn, the sculptress, will talk. Mrs. Laura E. R. Fisher will read from the "Blue Bird." Mrs. A. D. Dorset will give a literary review.

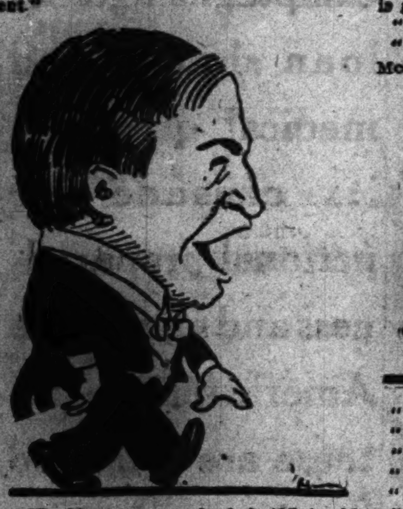
They Laugh at this in Vaudeville

PALACE.

Joseph E. Howard and Ethelyn Clark:

"I would like to marry you, if you have no objections."

"Well, none that I can think of at present."



"Would you scream for help if I should kiss you?"

"Would you need help?"

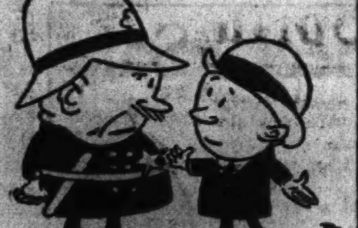
McVICKER'S.

Pipifax and Panlo:

"A hobo just sold me this police whistle for a nickel. I'll blow it and see if it's any good. [Blows whistle.] Yes, the whistle is good, all right."

"Did you ring?"

"Bless my heart, if it ain't my old friend McGinty!"



"Officer McGinty, if you please."

"I didn't know you were a policeman."

"O, yes, a regular policeman."

"I can't believe it."

"Have you change for $10?"

"Why, yes."

"Give me that! How dare you have money?"

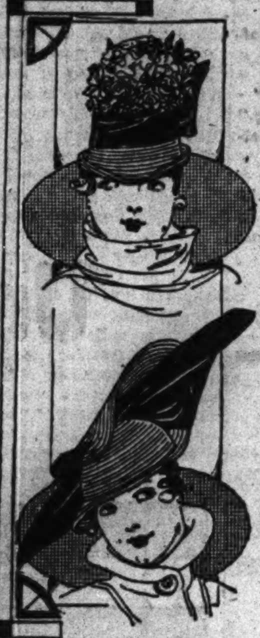
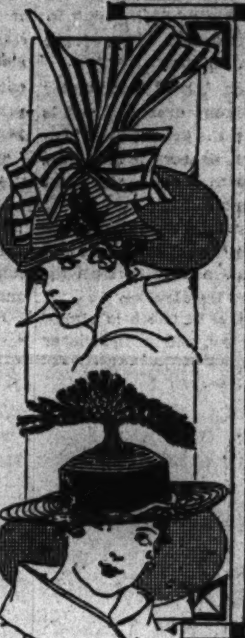
New Spring Millinery Modes

Second Floor—State Street





A visit through this great trimmed hat section will be rewarded with glimpses of the new glories of Paris millinery. Here are reproductions which cannot fail to bring exclamations of admiration from all who see them. They're made of fine glossy braids, lacquered straws, fine dull effects—trimmed in styles that are too numerous to tell of, with the wanted goura, flowers, ribbons, fruits, etc., you'll find the very newest styles depicted in this group; not at 12.50 to $15 as you'd expect to pay, but at the low price of.............................. 7.50

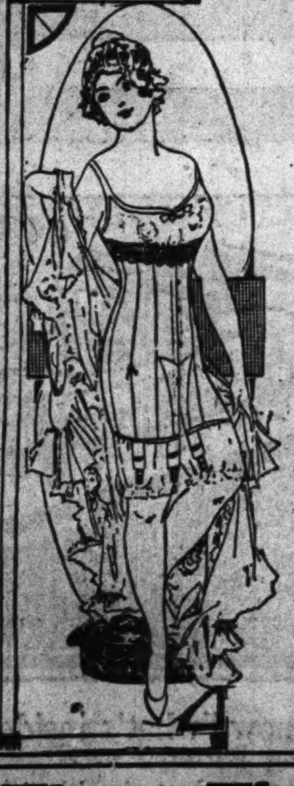
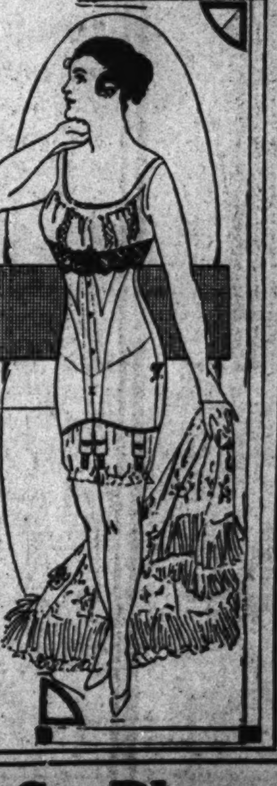
Which Corset Are You Going to Wear This Spring?

Third Floor—Center





Ask most women and they'll not be able to tell you, for most women for some unaccountable reason continue to buy their corsets haphazardly to their own great discomfort, impairment of good looks and good health—never a day passes now but at least four women stop in and tell us how grateful they are to us for persuading them to have our corsetieres fit them properly—especially so those women who were fitted to Nemo Corsets. Why don't you let us fit you, too? Please remember that for this fitting service, conceded to be the very best in all Chicago and recommended by many of Chicago's leading physicians as well as modistes, no extra charge is made—and now we want to tell you more about the famous Nemo Wonderlift Corsets to be found here in a complete variety of sizes in each of the styles.

First we ask you to think of one of the days when you haven't a single ache or pain, you look and feel years younger than you do on the many days when you have that nervous, dragged-down, worn-out feeling. How much would you be willing to spend to be rid of those backaches, headaches and the other aches that line your face and make life a burden? Would 5.00 seem too much?

The Self-Help Nemo Wonderlift Corset, at 5.00, can help you to make every day of your life one of your "well days." Do you ask how? Simply by the way it supports the internal organs. Every organ held in its natural place. No pressure on nerves or blood-vessels. Complete hygienic and comfortable support without bandages that wrinkle and slip out of place.

Are You a Thin Woman? Many thin women think they have nothing to support. They have exactly the same internal organs as their stout sisters and are in greater need of support, because their organs are nearer the surface and more easily affected.

The Nemo Wonderlift Corset is made for extremely slender women with prominent hip-bones and concave abdomen, as well as for large women with quantities of flesh, and women of medium build whose flesh is evenly distributed. Choose from these three distinct models which we carry in all sizes:

Nemo Corsets No. 554—for short stout figures...........................
Nemo Corsets No. 555—for taller stout figures...........................
Nemo Corsets No. 556—for slender to medium figures...........................
} $5

If today is one of your "well days," you probably will put the Nemo Wonderlift Corset out of your mind; but in a few days when your back and head ache and you feel so wretched that you almost wish you had never been born, you will begin to think about the Wonderlift again. Why not come to our Corset Store tomorrow and let us show you wherein the Nemo Wonderlift Corset is entirely different from any Corset you have ever worn? Once more we say, don't delay. See the Nemo Wonderlift Corset tomorrow.

Gossip of the Auto Trade

By L. M. Steffens.

ANOTHER world's record has been established—not on a racecourse in a high speed contest but by a safe and easy trip over the new Pike's peak auto highway, highest and most wonderful of the earth's motor roads, to the top of Pike's peak.

Construction of the highway began last May under the direction of Eugene A. Sunderlin of Colorado Springs, and Nov. 1 marked the virtual completion.

It is twenty feet wide, permitting of double track all the way, while all of the sharper curves are from twenty-six to fifty feet in width and superelevated. Masonry parapets and curve guard rail walls protect the precipitous points and all bridges are of reinforced concrete of the ballasted dock type and located on tangents only, and may be seen 300 feet away.

Automobile supply stations are also located at convenient points, while up to date windmill or gravity tank and hose water stations are spaced every third mile. Local and long distance telephone stations have been installed in miles 1, 6, and 12 and at the summit.

The builder was fortunate in having disintegrated granite for surfacing material close at hand for the entire distance. The average grade has been held to 6 per cent with a maximum of but 10 per cent, so that any machine may climb to the summit with ease, the greatest rise in any one mile being 515 feet in mile 2, and the minimum is 135 feet in mile 15.

The highway offers ideal conditions for a hill climbing contest, and it is the intention of the builder to promote such a contest in September of next year for the Penrose cup, donated by Spencer Penrose of Colorado Springs, through whose public spirited action in pledging his financial support the "world's highest highway" was made possible.

Under the auspices of the United States Rubber company more than 200 employés of the company met in the auditorium of the Y. M. C. A. west side branch, New York. H. B. Price, vice president of the company, made the introductory speech, and he was followed by Maj. Axel Ames, eighth coast defense command, who spoke on "Coast Artillery"; Capt. Kenneth Gardner, Seventh regiment, "The Infantry"; Lieut. Col. Frank H. Hines, Second field artillery, "The Field Artillery"; Lieut. Robert W. Maloney, First company signal corps, "The Signal Corps"; Commander Charles L. Poor, commanding naval militia, New York, "The Naval Militia of New York."

Many months ago the United States Rubber company declared itself in favor of military and naval preparedness. At that time Col. Samuel P. Colt, president of the company, announced that the great organization of which he is the head wished to encourage the enlistment of its employés in the various state militia organizations. The company announced to all of its more than 50,000 employés that those who became members of the national guard would be given all the time that their military duties required of them. The company would give them their regular vacations and would pay them for all time spent in state camp for rifle practice or any other militia duty.

A. M. Andrews of Andrews & Co. has been appointed chairman of the Sun Motor Car company's finance committee.

"The automobile has solved many problems," said T. E. A. Barthel, vice president of the King Motor company. "The growth of the industry during the last year has been beyond expectations. The future no one can predict. Automobile manufacturers have laid their plans for the coming year on huge production figures. With the large number of American made automobiles for this country and the expectation that the foreign demands the coming year will be greater than ever, the automobile industry is counted upon as advancing the business of the country generally. For the automobile today is a financial investment."

New York towns and counties placed contracts for nearly 200 miles of concrete streets and roads last year, and 110 miles of these were completed during the year. Contracts were let in thirty-two counties for paving sufficient for 244 miles of sixteen foot paved surface. It is expected a much larger mileage will be put down this year. There has been a notable change of views toward permanent surfacing on the part of road authorities during the last two or three years. They realize it is more satisfactory and economical to build roads that will stand up for many years under changing traffic conditions than to go on putting down types of pavements that wear out in two or three years and cost $500 to $800 a mile per year to keep in repair.

W. G. Pancoast, Baker Rauch & Lang sales manager, says of all the problems confronting the electric car manufacturer, that of speed was hardest to solve. Since electrics became popular conveyances many people have had the impression that speed could not be made a distinguishing feature of an electric car. Yet as far back as ten years ago electric cars were driven faster than a mile in fifty-eight seconds. And now the new Rauch & Lang models of the Baker Rauch & Lang product have redesigned motors which give greater speed than has heretofore been possible in an electric car for general use. This speed means that the electric car may be driven twenty-seven miles an hour, which is much faster than the traffic regulation of any city will allow. This new motor also makes hill climbing at a faster rate possible.

Leaving Sixty-eighth street and Broadway, New York, an Apperson light eight seven passenger touring car completed a nonstop run to Boston and return in 16 hours and 9 minutes actual running time, making the 488 miles on high gear and arriving back in New York the same day. The car, a regular Apperson eight cylinder stock model, was driven by William Robertson of New York and carried three other passengers for observers and checkers. The motor was run continuously before, during, and after the run for a total of twenty-six hours, and no adjustments, replacements, or repairs were made. No tire trouble was experienced. While the elapsed time from start to finish was 22 hours and 19 minutes, the actual running time was but 16 hours and 9 minutes—an average of thirty miles an hour. The gasoline mileage was approximately thirteen miles a gallon.

Kansas is to allow one day out of every three off the sentence of every prisoner who labors faithfully and cheerfully upon the public roads. Road work is to be organised at once, and the plan has the enthusiastic support of J. K. Codding, the warden, who in former years did much to better the condition of Kansas prisoners, and who has just been reappointed to office by Gov. Capper. The municipality for which the work is done is to pay the state $1 per day per prisoner. About 50 cents per day will be used in feeding and caring for the prisoner, and the other 50 cents will be paid the prisoner or his family.

An early buying of cars and the present stringency of the material market will bring about a shortage of cars long before the 1916 selling season is over, is the prediction of B. W. Twyman, general manager of the Interstate Motor company of Muncie, Ind.

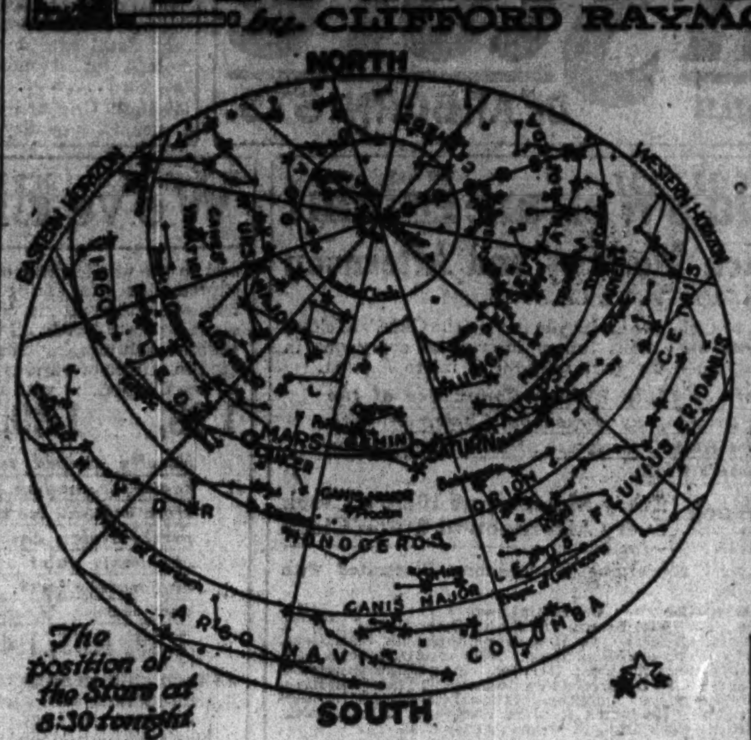
ASTRONOMY

by CLIFFORD RAYMOND



The position of the Stars at 8:30 tonight

ABOUT 8 o'clock tonight Arcturus comes up in the east. By 9 o'clock Spica, the radiant of the constellation Virgo, has arisen. By 10 both are sparkling fairly high in the sky and these two gems of the spring and summer are in full view.

At 8 o'clock Orion, the brilliant winter constellation, has gone overhead and is descending. Sirius, the great winter brilliant in the south, is nearer the meridian, but also past it, with Procion, the lesser dog star, following it.

Capella, the fine winter star, northward of Orion, is dipping towards the west and under it Aldebaran in Taurus, with the misty Pleiades and the Hyades.

By 11 o'clock Rigel in Orion is almost on the western horizon and all the winter stars are sinking, but in the east Vega, the great summer sun, is up.

In these few hours of a March night now can be seen in the sky all the progress of spring and summer which shows slowly in the vegetable processes of the earth. The tokens of winter are disappearing; the tokens of summer are appearing.

The firmament discloses the march of the seasons within the space of a few hours. One may note the sky in the early hours of evening and find it set in its winter aspect, and, looking at it again at midnight, see what the spring and summer nights will find in the heavens.

Pines are budding and balsam shows the return of sap, but the snow flurries continue and the migration of adventurous birds has not begun, but Arcturus is above the horizon. The snow plow still clears the streets, but Orion is disappearing below the horizon.

No sign of spring is seen, and the east wind vexes, but Vega late in the evening shows itself. Regulus passes the meridian before midnight. Cassiopeia turns north around the pole star, and the Big Dipper comes under the pole.

Arcturus, the early herald of spring, is the easiest star in the heavens to find. It is off beyond the curve of the handle of the Dipper. Follow the line of the handle and project it on in its indicated curve until it arrives at a dazzling brilliant.

That is Arcturus and when it arises in the early evening the meadow larks have come. When early evening finds it half way to the meridian the hermit thrush is pausing on its way north, and when 8 o'clock finds it almost overhead the wood thrush is singing in the afterglow of sunset.

Vaudeville Wit.

PALACE.

Andrew Tombes & Ball Lynn in "The Bride Shop":

"Have you traveled far?"

"Sure. Look at the mud on my shoes. I understand you are something of a linguist."

"Yes, I speak several languages."

"Well, why don't you speak one of them?"

"All right, Ohio."

"That's no language; that's a state."

"No, that's Chinese for good morning."

"All right, it's my turn now—Philadelphia."

"Well, what does that mean."

"That's American for 'Good-night.'"

"What have you got there?"

"I have here the woman's national dress."

"What is it?"

"It's a nightgown."

"But why national?"

"It covers a multitude of shins."

For Motorist and Motorcyclist

By High

I have been interested in a safety valve that would regulate the pressure of tires when they become heated from fast driving on the road and contract an excessive amount of air from friction. If any one has invented such a valve and has proved it practical I would appreciate a detail description of it. J. L. D.

For the last fifteen years various individuals interested in tires have been working vigorously to market a valve that would insure the automobilist regulation of air pressure when driving at a high rate of speed. Although the majority of these valves have not proved satisfactory to the average automobile owner and tire manufacturers have given up the idea, R. E. McKee, who is not a tire manufacturer or salesman, has invented a valve that will not only regulate the excessive amount of air pressure but will warn the driver when his tire is punctured. His valve takes the place of a dust cap and when attached opens a valve in the tire so air can pass through the safety valve while the tire is inflated. The valve is set for the pressure essential to the tire and when inflated beyond its normal pressure the valve escapes the excessive air until the right pressure is reached. When the tire is underinflated the valve signals the driver by a little whistle, which is in conjunction with the valve, and will continue to blow until ample air is placed in the tire. When the tire is punctured while on the road the valve warns the driver by either flashing a red light on the dash or by blowing the whistle.

I intend making a trip from Chicago to Cincinnati, O., about June 10, and ask if you will kindly furnish me with information as to the best route and probable condition of the roads. I should also like to know where it would be possible to secure a road map which might be followed on this trip. EARL MULTOG.

I would advise you to take the route south from Chicago through Hammond, Dyer, Crown Point, Thayer, Aix, Francisville, Rensselaer, Remington, Wolcott, Lafayette, Mulberry, Frankfort, Mechanicsburg, Lebanon, Royalton, and Indianapolis. This route is known as the Dixie Airline and the roads are good gravel all the way. From Indianapolis go south through Hawthorne, New Palestine, Carrollton, Fountaintown, Morristown, Gwynneville, Arlington, Rushville, Connersville, Everton, Bloomington Grove, Brookville, Cedar Grove, Harrison [Ohio], Miamitown, Dent, Cheviot, and Cincinnati. This route is good gravel to Harrison and from there on is macadam. The eastern half of this trip is of exceptional interest and is a beautiful stretch of country road. The total distance from Chicago to Cincinnati is 312.4 miles. You can purchase a detail map and route matter of this trip from either the Automobile Blue Book company or King's Official Road Guide.

No Advance In Price

The price of the big, powerful Overland Six (Model 86) will not be advanced.

Prices of other Sixes are advancing. Prices of Sixes recently announced on new models, are higher. In fact, comparatively figuring, prices of practically all Sixes are now far in excess of the Overland.

On the basis of present prices of raw materials a Six of the Overland quality would have to sell at a much higher price.

But due to a little foresight in purchasing we escaped having to pay premiums for raw materials—hence the price of the Overland Six is not increased.

This in spite of the fact that prices of all steels are up from 100% to 150%; that the price of aluminum has gone from about 20 cents a pound to over 50 cents a pound; that the price of copper has more than doubled; that tires and other accessories have had a sharp advance.

We cannot guarantee that this present price of $1145 will hold indefinitely.

The serious condition of the material market makes that impossible.

But the quality is not lowered; and for the present price is not advanced.

Just compare the size, power, flexibility and quality of the Overland Six motor; the length of the wheelbase—the seating capacity, the finish, the equipment, the comforts, the conveniences and improvements of the Overland Six with all others and you'll find no valid reason for paying more than $1145 for a six cylinder automobile.

Deliveries now.

United States 'Chain' Tread Tires

Dig-in and Suction

The 'Chain' Tread Tire has the two necessary features to prevent skidding and slipping, particularly on wet pavements—the dig-in and the suction.

The height of the chain above the surface of the tire gives the dig-in quality.

The cup-like shape of the links gives the necessary suction to hold to the road.

'Chain' Treads are the most efficient moderate-priced anti-skids in the world.

"What's Inside?"

Do you know "what's inside" your Starting and Lighting Battery?

Do you know that short circuiting the most prevalent of all storage battery troubles and one of the most expensive battery damages to repair is caused by the breaking down of the delicate wooden separators which allows the plates to touch each other?

Do you know that the Vesta Battery contains the only improvement invented in recent years that positively prevents short circuiting under every ordinary condition? This improvement is called the

VESTA

Indestructible Isolator

The Vesta Isolator rigidly locks the plates of the battery apart. No amount of jolting, road shocks or severe electrical load can move them. Consequently the plates cannot rub the delicate wooden mats and wear them out. The result is a battery that lasts from two to three times as long.

The Vesta Indestructible Isolator is fully covered by U. S. patents. It is only found in Vesta batteries. No licenses have been issued to other battery companies to make it.

Investigate it fully before you turn in your old battery for a new one. Write or call for new free booklet "What's Inside." It tells all about the "inside-unseen" superiority of the Vesta Battery.

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

by FANNY BUTCHER

Last week's best sellers in a leading Chicago bookstore:

WAR.

"Fear God and Take Your Own Part" (Doran), by Theodore Roosevelt.

FICTION.

"The Real Adventure" (Bobbs-Merrill), by Henry Kitchell Webster.

"Those About Trench" (Macmillan) by Edwin Herbert Lewis.

"Felix O'Day (Scribner), by F. Hopkinson Smith.

"Life and Gabriella" (Doubleday-Page), by Ellen Glasgow.

"The Side of the Angels" (Harper), by Basil King.

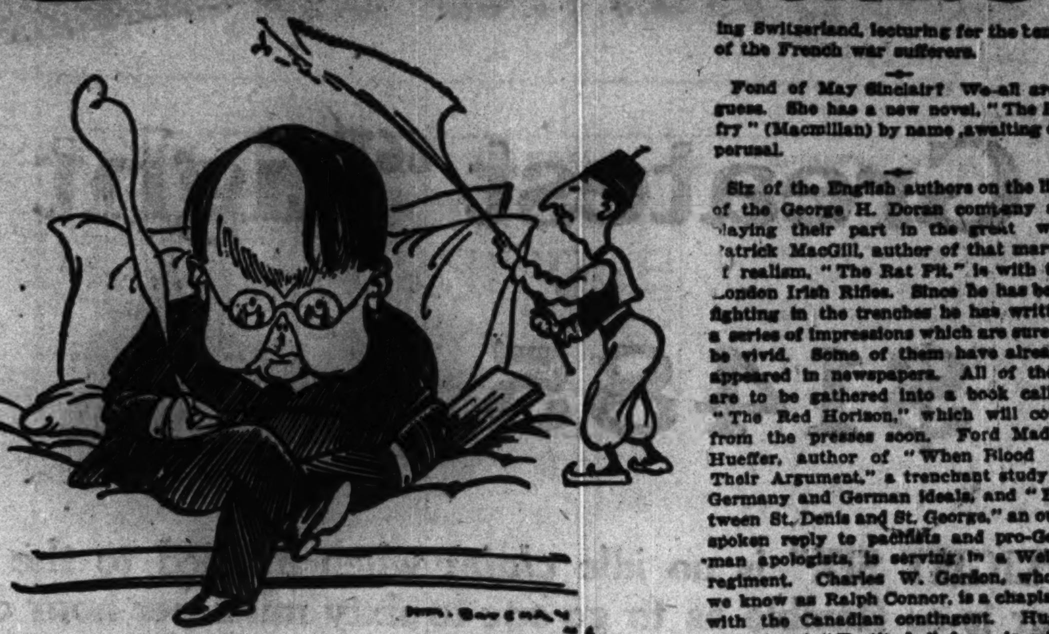
"The Bent Twig" (Holt), by Dorothy Canfield.

NONFICTION.

The Collected Poems of Rupert Brooke (John Lane).

ONE OF THE BILDADS OF ZOG.

"BILDAD, THE QUILLDRIVER" (John Lane), is the tale of the scrivening adventures of one Bildad, son, grandson, great-grandson, as far back as tradition goes, of the leather dressing Bildads of Zog. With a loathing for the family trade in his heart and his nostrils, he became a secessionist quilldriver. It's all very humorous. There's no end of official "atmosphere" in it. Devotees of William Caine say he belongs among the modern English literary peers. I'm not a devotee. So I can't say. H. M. Bateman has done some jolly illustrations for Bildad. And for good measure he did a caricature of the author to send to his literary friends and enemies which I know you'll enjoy as much as I do.



CARICATURE OF WILLIAM CAINE BY H. M. BATEMAN

David Grayson has been one of the pseudonymic mysteries of the last few years. A few folks have known who he was, but mostly his identity has been shrouded in all sorts of sentimentality about a recluse whose forced seclusion sweetened an otherwise arid life. Some foolishly averred that he was a sort of apotheosized farmer, too shy and gentle to accept the popularity that had come to him. The question has been growing more burning lately since a man in the west allowed himself to be congratulated on the books, so his publishers finally persuaded David Grayson to admit his identity. He is in real life Ray Stannard Baker. Never would have guessed it, would you? He felt that his own name which he had used for special articles should be reserved for that purpose, and he just hit upon David Grayson for fiction. He is now one of the editors of the American magazine, in case you want to locate him.

Barry Pain, who has written some of the cheeriest of stories, has chosen thirteen of them for a volume which is uncharacteristically called "Collected Tales" (Stokes), which is published in this country. Mr. Pain, who has long been connected with London Punch, is working in connection with the coast patrol service in England.

There will soon be a new and cheaper edition of Brander Matthews' two volumes, "Shakespeare as a Playwright," and "Moliere," from the Scribner presses.

An interesting lawsuit is pending in New York. Magistrate Joseph E. Corrigan of New York has filed a suit against the Bobbs-Merrill company and George Bronson Howard asking $200,000 damages for alleged libelous matter in the chapter, "Justice a la Corrigan" in Howard's book, "God's Man." Can an author make such a flimy disguise for a character and expect it to protect him from the libel laws? On the other hand, is our literature to be shorn of all its "originals"? It's a nice question.

More than 250,000 copies of Helen Hunt Jackson's "Ramona" have been sold, and it is still selling at the rate of many thousands a year, especially in California. I suppose that half of the visitors to San Diego come home with a copy of it. It has been made into a movie which is, according to press notices, delighting Los Angeles audiences and which [illegible] soon be with us.

Gratitude on the part of Butte, Mont., to Gertrude Atherton for coming out to study it before she put in into "Perch of the Devil" (Stokes) has recently expressed itself in the naming of a new residence district for her. Atherton place advertises "desirable lots near the lake," "lots near the car line," "reasonable terms," and other commuting delights.

This is the way they can talk, those best selling novelists. Rupert Hughes says about "Clipped Wings" (Harper's) his newest novel: "Charles Frohman asked me to make a play out of it and was very flattering. But I didn't get around to it." Honest!

For children, for all of us whose hearts quicken with the joy of spring, there is a useful little book called "Our Early Wild Flowers" (Scribner's), which describes with illustrations, some in color, all the spring wild flowers of the northern states. Harriet L. Keeler knows the flowers as well as we wish that we [illegible] can now, with her help.

Charles Belmont Davis, whose newest [illegible] is "Nothing a Year" (Harper's), says that he got his start in the writing world when he was asked to take the place of his brother, Richard Harding Davis, left vacant on the New York [illegible] when he became editor of Harper's Weekly. With that encouragement C. B. wrote a short story and sold it to the [illegible] for $50. Then he was forever [illegible] scribe. Even his consulship in [illegible] didn't cut off his career. He's [illegible] by trade now.

Jack London's latest addition to a five foot shelf of London culture is "The Acorn Planter" (Macmillan), which is described as "a California forest play." [illegible] of the clash between the war [illegible] who declares that war is the only [illegible] life and the ideals of the acorn planters to make life more abundant. In the epilogue there is a celebration of the [illegible] of war and the triumph of the acorn planters.

"Green Mansions" (Knopf), W. N. Hudson's romance of the tropical forest, is now available in a new edition. The publisher refuses to give out any information concerning the book, but he sends this statement about it from the pen of John Galsworthy: "Now that Tolstoi is gone I could least dispense with W. H. Hudson . . . probably the most acute, [illegible] minded, and understanding observer of nature living. I would that every man, woman, and child in England were made to read him; and I would that you in America would take him to heart. He is a tonic, deep refreshing drink, with a strange and wonderful flavor; he is a mine of new interests. As a simple narrator he is well nigh unsurpassed; as a stylist, he has few, if any, living equals." I, for one, shan't miss "Green Mansions."

All cables from B. W. Huebsch, the publisher, who is still in Europe with the Ford permanent peace board, have been held up by the British censor and he has been forced to keep in touch with his office by wireless via Berlin.

Didn't you love the Brownie books when you were a youngster? You'll probably be as surprised as I was to learn that Palmer Cox celebrated his seventy-fifth birthday the other day. Mr. Cox averred in an interview, meanwhile smiling, that if there had even been a German translation of the Brownie books and if the kaiser and the other imperial leaders had been brought up on it and really absorbed its message—that the Brownies never cause pain—they could never have sent their armies into Belgium.

Charles Rann Kennedy declared not long ago in an interview: "The war, I believe, will do away with the tommy-rotten objection to 'message' in literature. Don't misunderstand me. Of course, we all object to the stupid 'story with a purpose' in the Sunday school sense of that phrase. We don't want literature used as a sugar coating around the illuminating lesson that God loves little Willie because he fed the dickie birds, and didn't say 'damn.' Yet we want literature to awake again and be as always in the great days—a message. Literature must be a direct message from the heart of the author to the heart of the world." It must be pretty discouraging to Mr. Kennedy when he remembers the copies of "The Terrible Meek" that he autographed and sent to the crowned heads of the world with the unmistakable message that war is wicked.

"What is Eugene Brieux doing these days?" asks a correspondent. "He loomed so brilliantly upon our horizon for a while when Richard Bennett was shocking us with 'Damaged Goods,' but I don't remember seeing anything about him for months." The French Academician is—or was a week or two ago—touring Switzerland, lecturing for the benefit of the French war sufferers.

Fond of May Sinclair? We-all are, I guess. She has a new novel, "The Belfry" (Macmillan) by name, awaiting our perusal.

Six of the English authors on the lists of the George H. Doran company are playing their part in the great war. Patrick MacGill, author of that marvel of realism, "The Rat Pit," is with the London Irish Rifles. Since he has been fighting in the trenches he has written a series of impressions which are sure to be vivid. Some of them have already appeared in newspapers. All of them are to be gathered into a book called "The Red Horizon," which will come from the presses soon. Ford Madox Hueffer, author of "When Blood Is Their Argument," a trenchant study of Germany and German ideals, and "Between St. Denis and St. George," an outspoken reply to pacifists and pro-German apologists, is serving in a Welsh regiment. Charles W. Gordon, whom we know as Ralph Connor, is a chaplain with the Canadian contingent. Hugh Walpole of "Fortitude" fame is with the Russian Red Cross. A. A. Milne—the "Happy Days" man—is with the Royal Warwick regiment. Oliver Onions, whose "Mushroom Town" I hope you didn't miss, is working with might and main in the army service corps.

At the conclusion of a recent lecture somebody asked John Masefield to read the short poem of all his writings which he liked the best. After some hesitation he said that he always liked best the poem which he had just finished. With this as his explanation he read this sonnet from his new book, "Good Friday, and Other Poems" (Macmillan):

Go, spend your penny, Beauty, when you will,
In the grave's darkness let the stamp be lost.
The water still will bubble from the hill,
And April quick the meadows with her ghost;
Over the grass the daffodils will shiver,
The primroses with their pale beauty abound,
The blackbird be a lover and make quiver
With his glad singing the great soul of the ground;
So that if the body rot, it will not matter;
Up in the earth the great game will go on,
The coming of spring and the running of the water,
And the young things glad of the womb's darkness gone;
And the joy we felt will be a part of the glory
In the lover's kiss that makes the old couple's story.

PROGRESS
KEWANEE SMOKELESS BOILERS

Don't Burn Up Your Dough!

If you want a lot of your profits to go up the chimney in thick, black smoke, don't buy a Kewanee Smokeless Firebox Boiler. But if you'd like to save the "dough," install that boiler and, incidentally, you can stick out your tongue at the smoke inspector.

The Kewanee Boiler Company was the first to put on the market a down-draft smokeless boiler for heating purposes. At that time experts said "they wa'nt no sich animal" and "it couldn't be done." But just the same we have not only saved countless thousands of dollars for the people who have used the boiler but also, nearly every concern in the United States, that makes heating boilers, is making a so-called down-draft smokeless boiler. Couldn't be done, eh?

The Kewanee Boiler Company has become famous for its all-steel smokeless boiler and they are burning, without smoke, the cheapest grades of soft coal. Think what a saving this means to you if you own a big building which uses lots of coal. With some other style of boiler you've got to buy expensive smokeless coal. With the Kewanee, you can burn anything you like and there will be no smoke.

Why not write The Old Man Behind the Boiler and get his personal dope on the subject? He's been making boilers ever since he was knee-high to a grasshopper.

PAIGE
The Standard of Value and Quality

COME, brother—wake up. Sniff the air and you will find that the thrilling breath of spring is already there.

Look about you. Sense the newest—the freshness—of it all. See how the laggard step of the crowd has quickened into a full swinging stride.

See those cars "break" at the traffic officer's whistle—watch them come down three or four abreast at the "getaway"—hear the shrill, merry note of the sirens and the good natured chaff of the drivers.

This means Spring. This means the "open season." This means Touring at its best.

Surely, you are not going to be "left behind" this year. Surely, you are not going to keep the wife and kiddies indoors when all the world is hiking far afield.

Perhaps, you already know it—but what you need is a big, handsome, sturdy Paige "Six-46".

Nothing less will completely satisfy you—nothing more is necessary for any man no matter how wealthy he may be.

So, don't hesitate—don't procrastinate.

Tell the stenographer that you will be "out" for a short spell and hustle right over to the Paige dealer. Tell him your troubles—and let him prescribe.

The TRIBUNE'S WEEKLY ALMANACK

MARCH

March.

SOON now begins that period of illusion feebly supported by fact, which in this region we call spring. Ours are the bleak places of the east wind. The budding, flowering processes cannot go placidly and consistently in scented warmth, but must suffer interruption and change.

Spring to our experience is a conquest and not a soft, yawning awakening. The rising sap does not take verdant form in conditions fitted for its resurrection, but struggles against discouragement and hard, chilling circumstances. Therefore we are given drama and not mere pageantry.

The meadow lark sings from a field of snow; the chickadee begins its spring song against a bank of snow; the robin in the white oak has its feathers ruffled by the east wind; the hermit thrush finds that frost still glazes over the ground which it needs soft for its feeding.

The hepatica blossoms, but the hard oak resists the impulse of the sap and shows only the brown leaves to which it held during the winter. The blue bird is indomitable to sing from a fence post in a cheerless field.

The willow catkins blossom and the hard maple comes to bloom when the streams may yet run black by white banks. March will be soothing and blustering, warm and chill, with coaxing days and forbidding days; song sparrows will come and grackles will work the rusty hinges of their notes.

March is all of winter and nearly all of spring.

Has Bran Helped You?

If you have experienced the healthful effects which follow the use of Pillsbury's Health Bran you should write a letter about it and strive to win one of these

103 Prizes

CONTEST NO. 1—For the best letters on "How to Use Pillsbury's Health Bran," containing practical suggestions for its use in pies, bread, muffins—especially muffins—cake, rolls, pancakes, etc. Many housewives have developed recipes better than those published on the package. We want your favorite for use in our new Cook Book.
First Prize, $10; Second Prize, $5; 25 Prizes of $1 each.

CONTEST NO. 2—For the best letters on "How to Advertise Pillsbury's Health Bran," containing practical suggestions for newspaper ads or other methods of sales promotion. We want IDEAS—not finished ads.
First Prize, $10; Second Prize, $5; 25 Prizes of $1 each.

CONTEST NO. 3—For the best letters on "Actual experiences with Pillsbury's Health Bran as a Laxative and Health Builder."
First Prize, $10; Second Prize, $5; 25 Prizes of $1 each.

CONTEST NO. 4—For the best letters from a child on "What Our Grocer Says About Pillsbury's Health Bran."
First Prize, $5; 20 Prizes of $1 each; Special Prize of $5 to grocer named by child winning prize in Contest No. 4.

Remember that these letters will NOT be judged on a basis of penmanship, grammar, or literary excellence. What we want is more good RECIPES to be published in our new Cook Book on Pillsbury's Bran—GOOD IDEAS for use in advertising Pillsbury's Bran—and actual EXPERIENCES of those who have used Pillsbury's Bran as a laxative and health builder. Recipes, ideas, etc., submitted in this contest become the property of the Pillsbury Flour Mills Co.

Letters must be written on one side of paper only—should not be unnecessarily long—and must be mailed to

Pillsbury Health Bran Contest
Room 514, Tribune Bldg., Chicago

on or before April 1, 1916. Winners will be announced on or before April 16, 1916.

If You Have Not Experienced the Beneficent Effects of Bran—Delay No Longer. Invest 15c in a Package of

IT'S ROUGH BUT "IT WORKS"

America's Greatest "Light Six"

$1485

AMERICA'S GREATEST "LIGHT SIX" is no idle claim when applied to the Haynes "Light Six." What other car is so flexible as to go one to sixty miles per hour on high? What other car runs under all conditions, from 15 to 22 miles on a gallon of gasoline? What other car can pick up a speed of 30 miles per hour in seven and a half seconds from a standing start? What other big car will average 8,000 miles to a set of tires, and 400 miles to a quart of oil? THE HAYNES MOTOR, WITH CYLINDERS 3½x5, WILL DEVELOP MORE POWER THAN ANY OTHER MOTOR OF ANY MAKE OF EQUAL BORE AND STROKE. How could there be greater efficiency? Get behind the wheel of the Haynes "Light Six," and you will quickly understand why it is called America's Greatest "Light Six."

America's Greatest "Light Six"

Here's a car you're proud to own. Placed alongside of cars of the very highest price consideration the Haynes does not suffer by comparison. Compared with cars in the same price class, it gets a wide margin of preference.

It's great to drive a car so graceful and thoroughbred in appearance that you smile with pride every time you step in for a drive. There is real pleasure in owning a car that will do more than the other fellow's—a powerful car that is so easily controlled that any woman can drive it—a car that will pull through hub-deep mud and up the toughest hills on high without shifting gears.

Specifications and Prices

"LIGHT SIX"
(Model 36)
Five-passenger touring car or three-passenger roadster. Weight 3000 lbs. Wheelbase 121".

(Model 35), $1495

The "Light Six" and "Light Twelve" motors are interchangeable. All models are completely equipped, including seat covers, moto-meter, ammeter, and all accessories.

Let us demonstrate the Haynes to you—actually SHOW YOU WHAT IT WILL DO. Last spring and summer more people wanted Haynes cars than could get them. The same will be true this year. But placing your order now will insure delivery of your car when you want it.

America's Greatest "Light Twelve"

This beautiful new car is Haynes quality throughout. Behind its twelve purring cylinders you get a joy of driving you have never before known—just one long sweep, up hill, down hill, everywhere, with no vibration. It is a light-weight car containing a powerful, smooth running twelve-cylinder motor which actually develops seventy-five horse-power.

This Master Motor is of the high-speed type, with valve-in-head construction and removable cylinder heads. Aluminum pistons are used. The design is simple and all parts are readily accessible. The motor is light, weighing but little more than the "Light Six" motor. It is powerful yet economical—absolutely the last word in automobile engineering.

PARCEL POST AND EXPRESS.

EGGS AND BUTTER

You buy in the store are never less than 15 days old and most times older. In buying from me you are sure to get considerably fresher goods of a superior quality. All eggs that are not laid by my own hens are gathered in three times a week from reliable farms and selected for their freshness. Although I guarantee that my eggs and butter must give satisfaction, still my prices are most reasonable. Packing and express charges are relatively higher on small than large orders. I therefore suggest to have some friends or neighbors, if possible, order with you and thus get the benefit of lower charges.

With express charges prepaid by me, my cash with order prices are:

On orders amounting to $2 and less.... ....Eggs, 27c doz.; butter, 38c lb.
On orders running from $2 to $4.... ....eggs, 26c doz.; butter, 38c lb.
On orders running from $4 to $7.... ....eggs, 24c doz.; butter, 33c lb.
On orders above $7....eggs, 23c; butter, 33c.

Goods that leave Flanagan in the evening are delivered to you the next morning. My goods are so packed that they can be shipped in all kinds of weather.

A. MILLER,
Flanagan, Ill.

OUR LAST AD.

It is our desire to convey to you the elaborateness of our apartments, their location, etc., and with this done, we sincerely believe they will rent so readily that further advertising would prove useless, hence the above "OUR LAST AD."

To begin with, our apartments having been ERECTED BY OURSELVES, are of the better sort, and we court the most CRITICAL INSPECTION.

Located as they are, but 3 blocks from the lake and from the Loyola station of the N. W. elevated, in the heart of beautiful Rogers Park, is in itself a most desirable feature.

We have 4, 5, and 6 room apts., all with large sun parlors, which with concessions bring the rentals to $39.00 for 4 rooms, $48.50 for 5 rooms, and $53.50 for 6 rooms. These apts. are JUST COMPLETED, and the choice of the most beautiful wall papers are left for your own selection.
In addition to other novel features we will enumerate a few here: White enameled metal medicine cabinets with plate glass shelves, pedestal lavatories, cut glass door knobs throughout, piano finish mahogany woodwork, silver gray dining rooms, large cabinet gas ranges, beautiful lighting fixtures, white enamel bedrooms. We know that an inspection of these apts. will bring you to the conclusion that they are the kind you have been seeking, and until now have been unable to find.

Come out at once. Delay on your part will only mean the loss of the choicest apts. With the lake and its beautiful beaches but 2 blocks east, coupled with express service both ways all day long, could a more desirable location be found? Buildings located on three corners of Glenwood and Albion-avs. Office in the buildings.

FOR SALE—
WEST IRVING PARK HOMES.

Homes are our specialty. It is easy to put up a building of this, that, or the other sort, but to build a real home requires careful planning. It is just this that we have done in every building we have erected, with the result that ours is indeed a subdivision of real homes. Come and see.

Bungalows of thoroughly distinctive design and attractive planning, with five large rooms charmingly finished and decorated with fireplaces in living rooms and many other finishing touches. Only $3,900; easy terms.

Residences, 2 stories high, of 6 rooms; just as cozy as can be, $4,200, with small cash payment down.

Our office is open every day and Sunday. Call, write, or phone PISCHEL & SON, 4017 Milwaukee-av. Irving 872.

VACANT—SOUTH SIDE.

FOR SALE—HOME SEEKERS, INVESTORS, Builders—If you are contemplating buying good vacant, LISTEN.

No section of the South Side has grown faster than in the vicinity of Stony Island from 79th to 83d-st., known as AVALON PARK
AND STONY ISLAND PARK.

A new residence section of over 100 new homes built there in last two years; good modern homes; refined people. A district that is ideal. Protected by sensible building restrictions. A district that has natural shade trees such as you love to live among.

GOOD TRANSPORTATION.

I. C. R. R. suburban trains to city in 25 minutes. Stony Island-av. cars direct to city. New $200,000 school to be built this year. Doesn't this story sound good? It's true; come here and see for yourself—seeing is believing.

Now, what may interest you mostly is PRICE and TERMS. We are still selling choice residence lots at from $15 to $20 per foot, with all improvements in and paid for. Some have paved streets.

You can purchase a 30 foot lot with $50 cash payment and monthly payments as low as $10; discount for all cash.

CHOICE BUSINESS CORNERS
AT LOW PRICES.

This is the time to make up your mind to buy; in the spring these lots will sell at $100 increase.

Also have a fine lot of new brick bungalows. Low prices, easy terms.

Our office at 82d and Stony Island-av. is open every day—come out Sunday. If weather is too cold, write us and we will send you full particulars of location, prices, terms, etc.

WANT MONEY?

Let me tell you how to get it. Idaho land is full of it, and the land isn't very high priced, either. Climatic and living conditions are excellent—electricity used for cooking, lighting, and heating on many farms—educational advantages unexcelled.

There are many tracts of land—irrigated and non-irrigated—suitable for all kinds of farming, for sale cheap and on reasonable terms. Seed raising highly profitable. I will give complete information to you for the asking.

REAL ESTATE—FARM LANDS.

Michigan.

Ten for Five.

I HAVE SET ASIDE a number of choice ten-acre tracts for growing fruit or truck or raising poultry and for country homes. There is no better location nor better conditions anywhere for these purposes. One mile from railroad station and near a good market town.

$5 A MONTH on ten acres with only $10 down payment makes the terms as easy as any one wants. Quality and location considered, ten acres at the low price I am asking is not equaled by any offer on the market today. My tens are in the very center of Michigan's famous fruit belt, near pretty lakes and streams, and the start has already been made of converting them into farm homes.

TEN FOR FIVE is what the investor may reasonably expect in a short time—$10 value later for every $5 invested now—as improvements are made around his land. The demand for my tens is such that during the past week I have had to add some additional lands to this subdivision. Send for plat and full information today. Call for the literature if you can. There is a decided advantage for you to act on this proposition now.

George Swigart,

1249-50 First National Bank Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

FOR SALE—OWNER OF SUCCESSFUL
HIGHLY PRODUCTIVE
1,000 ACRE ORCHARD AND FARM,
WILL SELL

20-Acre Farm for Only $300

ON TERMS OF
$5.00 CASH AND $5.00 MONTHLY,
WITHOUT INTEREST OR TAXES.

I am having splendid success with my 1,000 acre orchard and farm in Southeast Missouri. Have 100 acres in peaches, 136 in apples, 6 in grapes, 8 in strawberries, 4 in blackberries and raspberries, and 150 in vegetables, grains, and grasses. The balance will be planted to grapes and fruit trees next spring. The peaches have been running over $100 per acre, berries and grapes, $300; tomatoes, $100 [$10 per ton at the canning factory], etc. Apples just coming into bearing.

I have a large amount of land surrounding my 1,000 acre orchard and farm, much more than I will ever be able to get under cultivation myself, and will sell 10 and 20 acre tracts at $300, on terms of $5.00 cash and $5.00 monthly, without interest or taxes.

FARMS FREE TO LIMITED NUMBER.

For a limited number of persons I have an arrangement whereby they can obtain a farm tract free.

My location is in Southeast Missouri, midway between the Ozarks and the lowlands, elevation above sea level about 550 feet.

Before offering any of my land for sale, I went to the authorities of the seven nearby states having the so-called "Blue Sky" laws and asked them to pass on the printed matter I had prepared and to send their expert land men to inspect my orchard, farm, and land offered. After doing this, and also investigating my financial responsibility and past business record, they quickly granted permission to sell my land in their states.

A few acres here, properly looked after, will bring you a splendid income, besides providing the best of everything for your own use. $100 to $800 clear profit per acre can be made. Fruits, berries, vegetables, grains, and grasses will produce these results. A single cow can be made to pay $12 clear profit every month. $100 will build you a cozy, comfortable home in our mild climate that will seem like a little palace compared with the ordinary, crowded, brick bound city flat.

With a few chickens, pigs, and a cow, fruits, berries, vegetables, and a little meadow to start with, your health, wealth, and happiness come into your own hands. You are boss of all, with room to grow, and no one is big enough to come in and give you orders. We have good schools, churches, rural free delivery, and mutual rural telephone lines and good towns.

FREE RAILWAY FARE

to purchasers; 90 days' time to visit land and make your selection; money back after one year if dissatisfied; payments stop in case of death; money loaned for improvements; perfect title; immediate possession.

I have made about 60 kodak views in and around the big orchard and farm and on the land I am offering, and have had them reproduced in a 16-page pamphlet, in which also I have placed all the information to be obtained regarding the topography, soil, climate, water, rainfall, healthfulness, productivity, products, and about everything you want to know; also 50 letters from men in Chicago and nearby towns who have gone down to look and who have bought. I'll gladly send you a copy if you will write.

BUSINESS CHANCES.

CAPITAL IS SECURED WHEN A PROPOSITION is properly presented. The investing public must know exactly what you have to offer. Present your proposition in a well written prospectus. Give all the facts in a plain, readable story. It must be easily understood by an outsider. Tell the truth emphatically. Leave some things unsaid. It is difficult to write a GOOD prospectus. Not many people can do it. It is a waste of money to give out a poor one. Many undertakings fail for that reason. I have had 14 years' experience in writing prospectuses. I know how. It will pay you to have me write yours. Address K A 494, Tribune.

BUSINESS CHANCES.

INVESTMENT—THIS AD APPEARED FOR the first time Sunday, February 20th, with the result that every person, except one, who consented to grant us a personal interview is now numbered among the 200. We have increased our number [30], and many of these have interested friends; many others have promised to do the same. We find a personal interview is very necessary in order to do justice to yourself and our enterprise. In your reply kindly mention where and at what time we can talk this over.

Our organization being complete, we have no room for any more stock salesmen.

Copy of ad which appeared February 20th:

"INVESTMENT—TO THE MANY PEOPLE living in Chicago who have never had an opportunity to get in on the ground floor of a really good proposition.

We want to get in touch with 200 people living in Chicago to each invest $120, for which they receive $320 worth of our capital stock, fully paid and nonassessable, together with a percentage of the profits, which should be tremendous.

We agree to deposit $100 of each $120, and if we cannot interest sufficient number of people to go ahead by the last of this year you are at liberty to withdraw this $100 with interest. We can show you where your remaining $20 and more can be received back, thus eliminating all speculation.

The field for our enterprise is enormous, and the profits of the 200 should be greater than that of any of the small investors who invested early in now successful enterprises.

At the completion of this campaign we will have 200 people times $100 each, or $20,000, with interest. A committee of five people will be elected by the 200 to superintend the distribution of the $20,000 then on hand, paid by you people. A chairman elected by these five people will countersign all checks against this $20,000, thus assuring you of ample protection afterwards.

We have a few already signed and more coming most every day, so don't wait another minute or you may be too late.

Positively only 200 people living in Chicago will get in under present terms, and no one for more or less than $120.

You can pay $20 down and the balance $10 a month for a period of ten months.

If you have the money and want to get in something really good, kindly write for particulars, and do this immediately." Address K D 297, Tribune.

THE POTASH FAMINE IN THE UNITED STATES.

A REAL WAR BRIDE OPPORTUNITY. POTASH NECESSARY FOR FERTILIZER, MEDICINE AND WAR MUNITIONS IS ENTIRELY CUT OFF FROM THE UNITED STATES BY THE EUROPEAN WAR.

Lack of Potash Fertilizer is estimated to have reduced last year's Cotton Crop 25%. Other crops suffered and a shortage of cereal crops feared. Prices have advanced 600%. We have perfected processes for supplying this demand. U. S. Government Reports show $150,000,000 annual supplies for raw material made available by our processes. Normal profits 100%—war profits 600%. Normal demand many times our ability to supply. Product superior in every way to imported article. Full information without obligation.

NORTH PACIFIC KELP POTASH CO.,
Phone Harrison 6448. 1400 Consumers Bldg.

IF YOU ARE 45 OR UNDER AND HAVE A clean, successful business record, this is an exceptional opportunity for you to buy the controlling interest in an Illinois corporation [capital stock $50,000] which has just perfected and patented a wonderful mechanical specialty superior to anything of its kind now on the market. This company has worked long and hard at great expense creating and perfecting this article. All experimental work is completed and fully paid for. The company is free from debt. Working capital is now required and some cash is necessary to take advantage of an unusually attractive, short time opportunity to absorb inventor's liens and buy one stockholder's interest, which is sufficient to give investor control. Product is now ready for manufacturing. Can be made for $2, retailed at $6.75. Factory can be properly equipped for $2,500. If you can immediately raise $20,000 IN CASH, investigate this proposition without delay. We are not brokers and prefer dealing direct with principals. If you can't qualify, please don't waste your and our time answering. Address H S 182, Tribune.

JEWELRY, WATCHES, ETC.

A FRIEND OF MINE LEFT A LARGE DIAmond with me to sell, way over 3 carat, perfect, full of fire; as fine a gem as I ever saw; wants $550 for it. Now I'd buy it myself, but a $550 rock is too steep for most people. My friend is getting married and needs furniture; says he's through "flashing" now and wants to settle down; says, "Let some other 'flasher' have it now." I'm selling it for him. I'll take $565 for it, just enough profit to pay for this ad. PAUL, Square Deal Jeweler, 6 E. Randolph-st. I buy smaller diamonds, paying spot cash, immediately—PAUL.

WATCHES ON CREDIT—HERE'S YOUR chance to own a fine Howard or Hamilton on the easiest terms ever offered. And we'll send you a $30 factory new 17 jewel Illinois, Elgin, or Waltham in a superfine 20 yr. gold filled case for only $2.50 down and $2.50 a mo. for 7 mos. Write SUTTON WATCH CO., 215 Keller Bldg., Louisville, Ky.

DON'T SELL YOUR DIAMONDS, OLD GOLD, platinum, old teeth, or pawn tickets before you see me. I pay more than any broker or jeweler; cash immediately; dealings confidential. W. H. KLEIN, Private, R. 910 Hartford Bldg., 8 S. Dearborn-st. Take elevator to 9th floor.

A REBUILT CADILLAC

It's a Safe Used Car to Buy

SPECIAL VALUES NOW.

A rebuilt Cadillac is superior to any new car at the same price. They are the truest values on the street. By rebuilt we mean that the cars have been taken entirely apart, each part examined, and, if necessary, replaced by a new part made at the Cadillac factory, the entire car repainted and refinished like new, all equipment put in first class condition—the whole car, in fact, carefully reconstructed until it is good as new in every detail.

We offer Cadillacs exclusively, as we do not accept other makes in trade. Consequently we are as interested in the performance of these rebuilt cars as we are in new Cadillacs. In actual service value these cars are worth a great deal more than we ask for them, and we usually have a variety of body styles to select from. See them before you buy.

NARROW MARKET IN CEREAL PITS; PRICES STEADY

Freight Congestion Limits Exports—Trade Crippled—Cables Are Firm.

The demand for wheat was less insistent than the previous day, and exporters did not show much disposition to follow the advance, although wheat could have been sold in large volume if prompt shipment could have been assured. At the seaboard there were good sales, over 1,000,000 bu hard winter wheat being taken. Local sales were 110,000 bu, including 100,000 bu for export. Futures closed ⅛@⅝c to ⅝c lower. Cash prices were steady.

The country offerings were fair and primary receipts continue heavy, and from present indications there will be no let up in the movement for some time. The clearances were fair at 1,266,000 bu. The main trouble in doing export business is the difficulty in getting wheat and other grains out of the country. Shipping conditions are becoming worse in the east, if anything, and embargo conditions make it almost impossible to do business.

Cold Weather in Northwest.

The weather conditions continue cold in the northwest and Canada, but generally seasonable temperatures prevailed over the winter wheat belt. Crop news was mixed. Complaint continues to come from many sections. The Liverpool market was not much excited, prices for spot wheat being unchanged to 1½d up. Liberal supplies of wheat are expected soon, although Australian shipments have failed to come up to expectations, being 1,248,000 bu for the week. Tonnage late in arriving at Australian ports.

The shipping situation is expected to be even more acute during the next few weeks, unless more boats are provided.

Foreign news was mixed. Russian reserves are said to be large, although not as great as expected. Elevator accommodations in Russia are inadequate and there has been a good deal of damage to improperly stored grain. Spring shipments from the northern ports are expected to be light. English country markets were reported weak. In Argentina the weather is more unsettled. Buenos Aires closed 2⅛@2⅝c higher.

Primary receipts for the week were 9,026,000 bu, compared to 3,790,000 bu a year ago. Northwest receipts for the day were 414 cars, against 242 cars a year ago. Winnipeg receipts were 604 cars, against 190 cars a year ago. Local receipts were 188 cars. Duluth stocks increased 1,220,000 bu for the week. It is possible the visible supply will show a gain for the week.

Corn Prices Irregular.

Corn was irregular, with a narrow range of prices and not much feature to the pit trade. Prices at the finish were a shade higher for the July and ⅛c off for the May. The cash demand was moderate, due to the deplorable shipping conditions, and sales were only 60,000 bu. Elevators generally are blocked. Country offerings were lighter as a rule. Argentine reports were a little more favorable, rains being reported in many sections. The acreage of corn is estimated at nearly the same as a year ago, 10,375,000 acres.

Weather conditions were normal for the season. Receipts here were 111 cars. Primary receipts for the week were 6,209,000 bu, against 3,597,000 bu a year ago. Clearances were 108,000 bu for the day. Cables were steady to ½c up, with the demand dull, owing to smaller consumption. Commission houses were sellers of wheat on the advances, but there was a good demand on the dips.

Heavy Tone in Oats.

The tone in oats was heavy, and there was an absence of heavy buying support. Last prices for the day were ⅛@¼c to ⅛c off. The cash market was steady to ¼c up and there was a fair demand. Sales were 105,000 bu. A fair export inquiry was reported at the seaboard. Receipts were 98 cars and primary receipts were 502,000 bu, with primary arrivals for the week 4,906,000 bu, against 4,442,000 bu a year ago. Clearances were 372,000 bu.

Provisions were a little higher, and there was a good demand stimulated by the higher hogs and predictions of a better export trade. The new British rulings in regard to shipments are expected to help the export trade. Schwarz and Hately bought products. Tietgens was a good seller. Receipts were 14,000, with 54,000 for Monday estimated, with 185,000 the coming week. Western receipts for the week were 501,500, compared to 642,000 a year ago. Liverpool backs and Cumberland cuts were 1s up and lard was 1s 3d up.

Dull Market for Rye.

Rye was dull, with No. 2 quoted at 91c nominal. Receipts were 2 cars.

Barley ruled 1c higher, with sales of malting at 64@80c, feed 64c, and screenings 48@53c. Receipts, 48 cars.

Timothy seed was steady. March was quoted $8.50 and cash lots $4.50@7.50 nominally. Clover seed was unchanged, with cash lots $10.00@19.00 nominal.

Duluth flax closed 1½c higher. Cash on track, May and July, $2.31¼; receipts were 3 cars. Minneapolis was 1½c higher, with cash on track $2.31¼@2.34¼. Receipts, 19 cars. Winnipeg closed 1@1¼c higher, with May $2.08½ and July $2.09. Receipts, 3 cars.

NEWS AND GOSSIP OF BOARD OF TRADE.

Exporters here said yesterday there was a fair inquiry for export wheat, but not so active as the previous day. The market is firm and there were understood to be big orders in the market for wheat, both hard winter and No. 1 northern, at good prices, if the wheat could be secured with promise of prompt shipment. Baltimore reported working 1,000,000 bu hard winter wheat yesterday for export, and in the last two days sales have been heavy, probably close to 3,000,000 bu domestic wheat being sold for export. In addition to this there has been a good business in Manitobas. Exporters are of the opinion that it is mainly a question of whether the wheat can be moved out or not as to the size of the business. When boats are available for wheat, shipments are facilitated by the railroads. Otherwise the western shippers are not disposed to make contracts.

Sentiment in wheat is a good deal mixed. Some of the most prominent local professionals are still bearish, while several of the leaders are off the short side, and are disposed to buy wheat on the strength of the export situation, the recent developments indicating that the surplus wheat is wanted. Bears take the view that no matter how great the foreign demand is, it will be impossible to dispose of our surplus unless there is a radical change in conditions, while receipts are likely to run heavy throughout the remainder of the crop year. The possibility of visible increases at a time when stocks should be shrinking keeps many traders from becoming aggressively bullish, and it is expected the government report will show heavy farm reserves. With the difficulty already experienced in moving wheat likely to be enhanced when the lake navigation opens, many shippers take a pessimistic view of the situation.

John Prindiville & Co. had a Buffalo message saying there is still 9,000,000 bu grain afloat there, with the present unloading averaging about 200,000 bu a day. The elevator capacity is about 18,000,000 bu and there is now in store about 6,000,000 bu. It is believed by vessel men that within ten days after the opening of navigation there will be 15,000,000 bu grain going to Buffalo. The question of disposing of the wheat now afloat at Buffalo before the opening of navigation promises to be a serious matter. High rates for boats prevail from Duluth and Canadian ports to Buffalo. It is believed grain from Chicago will remain on an all rail basis, even after the opening of navigation, on account of the high lake rates.

Cash corn was steady to ½c off and oats were steady to ¼c up yesterday. As is the case in wheat, the demand appears to be contingent on the supply of the cars and the chances for getting grain to the seaboard. Export sales of both corn and oats would be possible if cars and boats were available. Many receivers think the run of corn is about over for some weeks to come. Oat offerings from the country were moderate. Shipping sales were 60,000 bu corn and 105,000 bu oats.

According to New York advices much less Canadian grain was shipped all rail the last winter than was expected. Wheat at the seaboard for immediate delivery is scarce and high premiums are being paid. Gulf wheat, No. 2 hard, was quoted 3c over May (Chicago), or about 9c higher relatively than a few weeks ago. In regard to the Canadian grain it is said that some of the grain commandeered by the Canadian government has not yet been moved out.

Receipts of wheat at Chicago for the week were 2,427,000 bu and shipments were 1,584,000 bu. Corn receipts were 2,178,000 bu, compared to shipments of 1,303,000 bu, and oats receipts 2,396,000 bu, against shipments of 1,437,000 bu.

Receipts inspected yesterday: Wheat, 188 cars; corn, 111 cars; oats, 98 cars; rye, 3 cars; and barley, 48 cars. Hogs estimated for Monday, 54,000 head, and for all next week, 185,000 head.

Howard M. Schmeltz, Claude Lee Carter, and Leverett Earl Duncan have made application for membership on the board of trade. Albert H. Smith has posted his membership for transfer.

The sale of 100,000 bu corn to go to store was reported.

COFFEE AND SUGAR.

NEW YORK, March 4.—There appeared to be very few buyers in the market for coffee futures here today, and prices broke rather sharply under scattering liquidation or a little selling from local trade interests. The world's visible supply statement showed a big decrease, but attracted little attention, as the figures were considered largely a matter of estimates, and the selling here may have been promoted by the decline in the rate of Rio exchange on London. July contracts sold off to 7.96c, and September to 8.02c, with the general list closing at a net loss of 14 to 15 points. Sales, 9,750 bags; March, 7.70c; April, 7.77c; May, 7.85c; June, 7.90c; July, 7.94c; August, 7.98c; September, 8.02c; October, 8.06c; November, 8.08c; December, 8.12c; January, 8.15c. Spot coffee, quiet; Rio 7s, 9⅝c; Santos 4s, 10½c. The few cost and freight offers received here from Brazil were reported to be at about unchanged prices. The official cables reported an advance of 75 reis at Rio, with Santos unchanged, and Rio exchange 5-32d lower. Brazilian port receipts, 28,000 bags; Sao Paulo, 24,000 bags; Jundiahy, 19,000 bags. The world's visible decreased 619,549 bags for the month of February, against a decrease of 120,554 last year, making the visible supply on March 1 9,842,559, against 10,606,278 last year. SUGAR—Raw, unchanged at 5.27c for centrifugal, 4.50c for molasses, and 4⅝c for Cubas, cost and freight. Refined was unchanged at 6.85c for fine granulated. Futures: May, 4.41@4.38c, closing 4.38c; July, 4.50c, closing 4.49c.

CHICAGO, March 4.—SUGAR—The following prices are quoted by wholesale dealers for 100 lbs: Cut loaf, H. & E., $7.96; powdered, standard, $6.60; standard cane granulated, $6.65; beet granulated, $6.45; extra C, $6.30; canary, $5.90.

Hog market at Chicago yesterday opened 5@10c higher than on Friday, but closed decidedly weak, with most of the early advance eliminated. Receipts were posted at 13,000 head, the best of which sold at $9.20. The bulk made $8.95@9.10 and the average $9.04. All prices were the highest made since September, 1914. Shippers were credited with purchases of 4,000 head and packers took 10,300, leaving about 1,500 head unsold at the close.

Hog purchases for the day: Armour & Co., 2,500; Swift & Co., 900; Sulzberger & Sons, 500; Morris & Co., 200; Anglo-American, 200; Hammond, 600; Roberts & Oake, 50; Western Packing company, 1,100; Miller & Hart, 500; Independent Packing company, 1,000; Brennan Packing company, 800; butchers, 1,500; shippers, 4,000; total, 14,300; left over, 1,500.

CATTLE.

Cattle prices at Chicago this week closed 15@25c higher than a week ago, and highest of the season for most of the steers, cows, and heifers. Receipts for the week showed a decrease, while the demand was augmented by increased business in the stock and feeder trade. Steers topped the week at $9.90, while the bulk made $7.50@8.75. The market closed in a healthy condition for all grades. In the market for cows and heifers the trade was best for heavyweight lots of good quality, but firmness also pervaded the market for the lightweight offerings.

SHEEP.

Sheep and lambs finished the week on a firm basis, with prices of all classes largely 10@15c higher than a week ago. Receipts for the week showed a decrease, which was not fully reflected in the shipments from this point. Lambs of prime quality and light weight were scarce throughout the week and brought a liberal premium. Lightweight sheep were scarce. Lambs topped the week at $11.50 and sheep at $9.25, but the bulk of the supply sold at much lower figures. The market closed strong at the prices. Feeders were moderate buyers, paying up to $10.50@10.90 for desirable thin lambs.

6% TAX EXEMPT BONDS

TANK-SHIP BUILDING CORPORATION

(Incorporated under the laws of the State of New York.)

$400,000 1st Mortgage 6%
Fifteen-Year Sinking Fund Gold Bonds.

Dated January 1st, 1916. Due January 1st, 1931.

Denominations, $100, $500, $1,000.
Tax Exempt in New York State.
TRUSTEE—Guaranty Trust Company, New York.

Interest payable January 1st, July 1st.

The bonds will be a first mortgage upon the Company's shipbuilding plant, located in the City of Newburgh, on the Hudson River, New York State.

The shipbuilding yards have a capacity to lay down and construct four (4) sea-going steamers of 10,000 tons dead weight capacity, and eight (8) barges, as well as extensive facilities for repairing and rebuilding ships.

The Tank-Ship Building Company have executed contracts sufficient to tax the capacity of the yards for many years to come, on a very profitable basis.

The Net earnings of the Tank-Ship Building Company, for the current year, based upon contracts already executed, and after providing for interest charges on these bonds, and all other expenses, will exceed $168,000 or seven (7) times the requirements to pay the interest on these securities.

Payment of principal and interest of these bonds unconditionally guaranteed by endorsement on each bond by a large Corporation which has no bonded indebtedness and free assets in excess of three times the amount of these bonds and a ten (10) year annual record of earnings more than sufficient to take care of interest and sinking fund requirements of this issue.

Having sold a large portion of these bonds, we offer the unsold balance at Par with accrued interest carrying stock bonus of 25%.

$100,000,000 IN COPPER DIVIDENDS

¶ These are the aggregate dividends that a conservative authority estimates will be paid to copper shareholders during 1916.

¶ As a hundred million dollars in dividends is out of line with present prices of copper stocks, a big readjustment must take place in the market valuation of copper securities.

¶ And it is universally figured we are on the threshold of this readjustment—that this is the psychological moment to invest in copper shares—that within the next sixty days we are to witness a period of extreme market activity in these stocks.

¶ A statistical book on the coppers will be sent upon request without charge. Ask for 12-CT, including booklet explaining "The Twenty Payment Plan"

LOCAL CLEARINGS REACH NEW HIGH FOR WEEK PERIOD

Record Figures Raised Twice in 1916 Already by Business Activity.

Chicago bank clearings last week were $[illegible],000,000 more than the previous high record. This is the second time in 1916 that the figures have reached a new level. The first was for the week ended Jan. 8, when the total was $402,020,768. The current figures compare with $400,990,526 made in the week ended March 7, 1914. Last week's clearings totaled $451,157,424, which compared with the figures for the same week in 1915 show an increase of $81,363,842, or 22 per cent.

The first two weeks of March usually show the largest volume of exchanges in the year, dividend disbursements, the buying seasons, and other factors contributing. The activity of the last few months shows a return to normal growth. The year 1915 made the largest total for any year, with December exceeding any previous December, while January continued the upward trend.

The largest week in 1915 was March 8, with a total of $369,139,895; in 1914, March 7, with $400,990,526; in 1912, Oct. 19, with $[illegible],305,185, and in 1911, March 4, with $[illegible],331,971. The figures for the last week:

	Clearings.	Balances.

Local Curb Active.

The local unlisted securities market continues active, with trading on a fairly broad scale.

American Fork and Hoe common was firm at 105 bid, with light offerings at 107. Some demand for Bucyrus common has been in evidence at 15, with offerings at 16. A steady demand for Butler Bros. has kept the bid price at 305, with small lot offerings at 307. Chalmers Motor common, after advancing to sales at 152½, reacted to offerings at 145, with buyers at [illegible]. The preferred remains firm at 98 bid, offered at 101.

Consumers Company common has been quiet, with some demand at 25½, while the preferred has been wanted at 74, with stock offered at 76. Continental Motor common has been active at prices ranging from 30 to 33. Deere & Co. preferred remains firm at 95 bid, offered at 96. German-American Sugar was fairly active at 16@17, closing at 16½ bid, offered at 18. Michigan Sugar was quoted 99½ bid, ex-dividend, offered at 100½. Considerable trading took place in Holland-St. Louis Sugar between 9 and 10. Hart Schaffner & Marx was in good demand at 61½ ex-dividend of 1 per cent.

Fair Call for Moline Plow.

Moline Plow preferred changed hands between 97 and 98, with a good demand at the former figure. Reo Motor Car was somewhat easier, being offered at 33½. Reo Motor Truck also showed a slight decline to sales around 25½. Sulzberger & Sons preferred closed at 88½ bid, offered at 89½. United States Gypsum common advanced in the bid price to 43½, while the preferred was wanted at 102. Offerings of both issues were light. Aurora, Elgin and Chicago preferred was a trifle weaker, with small lots offered at 42.

By Products Coke Corporation, after selling at 170, declined to sales at 159, but closed a trifle better at 164 bid, 168 asked. National Grocer common changed hands at 8¾ and the preferred at 96½. Great Lakes Dredge and Dock sold at 97½ and closed at that price bid, with offerings at [illegible]. Inland Steel has been neglected, but advanced at the close to 370 bid, offered at [illegible]. Oxweld Acetylene is in demand at [illegible]. Linde Air Products, ex-stock dividend [illegible] per cent, was quoted 185@190, with the rights 15 bid, offered at 20. Chicago Securities.

Swift & Co. shares were strong on the local exchange. The price advanced from 131¼ to 134. While no specific announcement was made, it is assumed that earnings continue on the same scale as in 1915, when profits made a record. It is possible such earnings may result in extra dividend action.

Montgomery Ward preferred was firm, advancing ½ to 115. Booth Fisheries preferred was fractionally lower. The remainder of the market was without special features.

DRY GOODS.

NEW YORK, March 4.—Cotton goods markets were steady, but more quiet today. Yarns were steady. Wool goods markets were firm, with a full demand. Linens were firm and higher. Burlaps were higher; knit goods active.

NEWS OF THE FINANCIAL WORLD

Arrangements have been completed by the Mid-West Refining company, by which it will market a large volume of refined oil in eastern territory, beginning about the middle of this month. Heretofore the company's products have been sold mainly in the west. The Mid-West is increasing the capacity of its two plants from 20,000 barrels to 30,000 barrels a day.

The market closed irregular and lower after a moderate opening advance. Sentiment is uncertain and price changes dependent upon daily developments at Washington. It might be well to expect the sinking of some ships having Americans aboard. Such a happening would cause at least temporary disturbance in the market.

The Chicago stock exchange has been notified that $59,000 of the $200,000 6 per cent bonds of the American Strawboard company, which issue matured Feb. 1, 1916, after having been extended two years, will be extended for another two year period. It is expected the remainder of the bonds will be retired.

Oil interests profess to be undisturbed by the huge output of 261,000 barrels daily by one well owned by the Mexican Petroleum company. It is asserted that the oil is of such low grade that the quantity of gasoline to be manufactured from it is negligible.

Zimmerman & Forshay announce they have been authorized to receive subscriptions to the new German loan, the fourth war issue, at the official subscription price of 98½ for the 5 per cent bonds and 95 for the 4½ treasury notes, less interest to July 1, 1916.

Officials of the American Locomotive company deny the report that the concern has secured or is negotiating for additional war orders. The directors will meet within the next few days, though it is declared there is no probability of divided action on the common shares.

The Quaker Oil and Gas company declared a dividend of $1,400 per share. The company, the stock of which is held largely by Pittsburgh and Philadelphia operators, is a subsidiary of the Pure Oil company. Its oil fields are in Cushing, Okla.

Announcement comes from London that the Metal exchange there will reopen for business tomorrow in all metals. Satisfactory arrangements have been made with the minister of munitions regarding the conduct of business.

Currency shipments from Chicago for February totaled $10,288,278, against receipts of $7,460,155. For the corresponding month last year shipments were $7,992,048 and receipts $7,722,796.

It is announced that Corn Products Refining surplus earnings for the year ended Dec. 31, 1915, were $3,168,368, being equal to 10.62 per cent on the preferred stock, against 7.72 the preceding year.

The Prairie Oil and Gas company advanced the price of crude oil 10 cents a barrel, to $1.40.

The New York subtreasury gained $1,743,000 from the banks on Friday.

APATHY MARKS TRADING.

New York, March 4.—Although there were no developments during today's short session of the market, stocks again were under the uncertain influences resulting from the situation at Washington. Trading was light to the point of utter apathy and altogether of professional origin.

Even that element hesitated to assume a definite stand, and the net result, which included variable losses and a few gains, was due not so much to fresh buying or selling as to the usual week end settlement of outstanding contracts.

In the first half of the session a few specialties, chiefly petroleums, tobaccos, and coppers, were manipulated to higher levels, but the balance of the list failed to respond to this movement. Later the market began to droop in all quarters, with special heaviness in seasoned railway shares, and some of the prominent industrials. Little remained of early gains, and the tone at the close was irregular to heavy.

Raw Materials Short.

General news of the day included the weekly reviews of the mercantile agencies, which reported a steady forward movement in many lines of commercial enterprise, scarcity of raw materials to such an extent that it has been found necessary to withdraw salesmen from the road because of oversold conditions and the widespread car shortage.

The international list was moderately higher in London, but some selling for that market was reported here, mainly of minor rails and metals. Exchange markets denoted no material change from recent steady conditions.

Bonds were steady. United States coupon 3s advanced ⅛, registered 3s and 4s, ¼, and Panama coupon 3s, ½ per cent on call during the week.

Security Holders Increase.

The number of security holders in the country is increasing every year, certainly by tens of thousands, probably by hundreds of thousands. Exact figures, of course, are unobtainable, but facts come to light almost daily showing this trend of investment.

The annual report of Deere & Co. issued recently stated that the number of its preferred stockholders had increased from 3,599 to 3,842, a growth of about 7 per cent in one year. The Commonwealth Power, Railway and Light company reports that the number of owners of its shares has increased to 5,377, or an average holding of about $4,000 market value to each stockholder. Swift & Co. shareholders increased from 6,000 in 1905 to more than 21,000 in 1915.

The foregoing are a few corporations chosen at random. A long list could be compiled of those that report the number of their shareholders, and this would not half tell the story because most corporations do not make public the figures.

With increasing millions of people owning securities it might be thought that they need no protection, that merely because of their numbers they would be treated with deference and their rights respected. Such is not the fact, however. Rights are respected only when they are defended. Security holders thus far have been 100 per cent pacifists. So meek have they been in the face of all attacks that even corporation officials, who are really employés of the stockholders, sometimes join the ranks of their enemies. And these officials cannot be blamed severely for such apparent disloyalty. Their aim is to keep their positions and they know that organizations of shippers, labor unions, politicians, or almost any large group of persons is more to be feared than their employers.

The logical way for security holders to defend their rights is to organize so that their strength can be used effectively when and where it is needed.

Double Service Tire.

C. A. F.—The Double Service Tire and Rubber company has been in business only a year and has not issued a detailed financial statement. Its prospectus says net earnings are at the rate of $50,000 a year and that less than $83,333 of its authorized capital of $250,000 is outstanding. It is selling stock with a bonus of 50 per cent in tires and tubes, the plan being to make customers of its stockholders. Evidently a purchase of stock would be participation in a new business venture rather than a conservative investment.

Muskogee Refining.

C. F. H., Erie, Pa.—The Muskogee Refining company, formed in 1910, has a refinery and formerly bought practically all its crude oil from producers. Recently it has been entering the production field more extensively. Its balance sheet of Dec. 31 last showed $350,000 of stock outstanding and $77,918 surplus. Net working assets were about $140,000. Gross sales in 1915 were $604,564 and net profit $90,872. The first dividend, at the rate of 4 per cent, was paid last December. Net earnings in January were $16,600 and the directors decided to pay dividends of 1 per cent a month.

Brief Answers.

H. F. H., Hawkeye, Ia.—The Provident Life Insurance company of Des Moines began business in 1913 with $100,000 capital and $100,000 surplus. Its annual report of Dec. 31, 1914, showed $1,701,884 of insurance in force, $185,536 of assets, and $62,466 surplus. Its management was reported to be economical and the death rate had been low.

H. J. S.—The stock you ask about is evidently a speculation rather than an investment.

IN FOREIGN STOCK MARKETS.

LONDON, March 4.—The stock market concluded a dull week today in steady fashion, the continued Russian successes and President Wilson's victory in congress assisting the cheerfulness. The latter factor made American securities a shade better, although the business was principally confined to sales to the treasury. United States Steel shares were in good request, due to the advancing prices of steel products. Japanese bonds, Russian securities, and the French loan were steady. Consols declined in anticipation of a new loan. Money was in fair demand. Bar silver, 27d per oz. Money, 4@4½ per cent. Discount rates, short bills, 5¼ per cent; three months, 5⅛ per cent.

PARIS, March 4.—Trading on the bourse today was firm. Rentes were quoted at 62.40 and exchange on London at 28.07½.

THE week's real estate market as a whole has not been of a particularly satisfactory character. An excellent beginning was made with another big State street building lease, with a particularly interesting purchase by the Santa Fé road at State and Fifteenth streets and with a number of good sized transactions in flats and outside business property.

This was followed by two particularly bad days, however, in which there was a distressing absence of anything deserving of notice, both as regards reports by brokers as well as recorded transactions. Then came a fairly good day, featured by a noteworthy deal in west side business property and some fairly good sized flat transactions, Evanston property holding first place as regards the amount of consideration involved. A fairly good showing was made for the remainder of the week, but the market as a whole was rather narrow and dull. But for the State street building lease it would have been the most uneventful one for several weeks.

Big Deals Under Way.

This dullness, however, is not to be taken as an accurate reflex of actual market conditions, and is simply another illustration of the uncertain workings of the market as regards the closing of transactions in course of negotiation. As a matter of fact there is a good deal doing both in the downtown district as well as in the outlying sections, and, while there are some soft spots, due to unfavorable local conditions and in some instances to overbuilding, there is as a whole a good healthy undertone to the market, with a growing feeling that the coming year is likely to be a surprisingly good one unless serious complications growing out of the war arise.

Subdividers Confident.

Subdividers, for instance, seem, as a rule, to be exceedingly confident regarding the outlook, as do those operating along the north shore, where there has been a steadily increasing activity during the last three or four months. The outlook is also thought to be decidedly bright as regards the new south shore district, south of Jackson park, while the same may be said, although possibly to a somewhat less extent, regarding certain of the northwest, west, and southwest parts of the city.

An abundance of cheap money, peaceful conditions in the building trades, and land values on as healthy a basis as they are at present make for good market conditions, and in troublous times like the present should appeal to prudent investors. For this reason it is believed the real estate market has much promise.

State Street Lease.

The State street lease is of special interest for the reason it involves the removal to that street of A. G. Spalding & Bros. from their present location at 28-30 South Wabash avenue, between Madison and Monroe streets, which have been occupied for twenty years. They have leased from the Lytton Realty Trust the four story and basement building at 211-215 South State street, with lot 42.5x144.9 feet, west front, 100 feet south of Adams street, for a term of twenty-five years from May 1, 1917, at an annual rent of $35,000 for the first ten years, $30,000 for the following ten years, and $37,000 for the remaining five years.

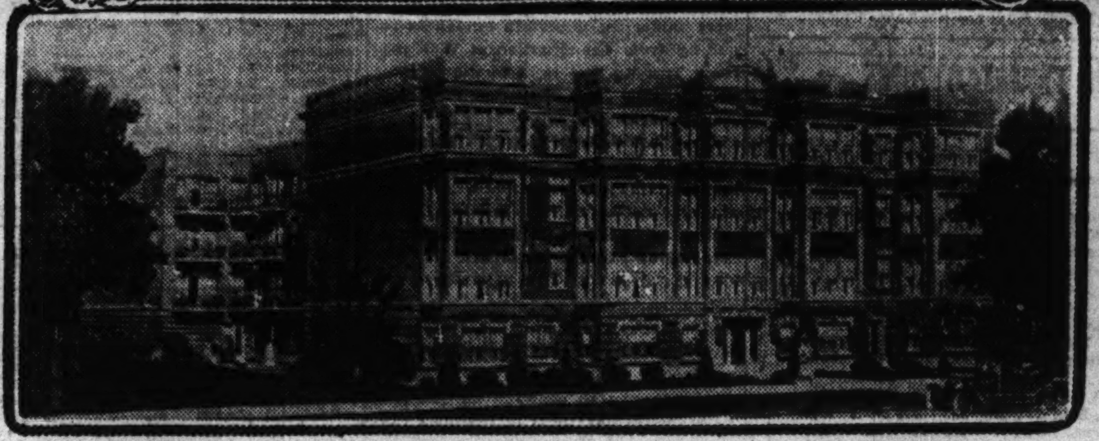
In addition the lessees are to pay $25,000 in cash and the taxes and insurance for the entire period. The total rent for the full term, basing the taxes on the latest appraisal, is approximately $1,255,000, or an average annual rent of $50,200. Another provision of the lease is that the lessees shall remodel the building. The Lytton Realty Trust was represented by Albert H. Wetten & Co. and Spalding & Bros. by John B. Ackerman. Henry M. Wolf of Judah, Willard, Wolf & Reichman and Edward H. Bayley of Bayley & Webster attended to the legal details.

SCHOYER TELLS OF STATION COST AND WEST SIDE NEEDS

Alfred M. Scheyer, vice president of the Pennsylvania road and a member of the executive committee of the Union Station company, told the members of the Chicago real estate board at its weekly luncheon that of the $50,000,000 which the new west side terminal will cost the purchase of real estate in that connection cost approximately $32,000,000. The new station, which will be completed in the spring of 1920, will, he said, be the most complete and up to date in the country. He expressed the opinion it would have a rejuvenating effect on the west side but declared there is a pressing need of some other things to secure the maximum benefit. One, he said, was the much talked of new postoffice, which he asserted should be located in close proximity to the Union and Northwestern stations. The other, he said, was a high grade hotel to cost from $2,000,000 to $3,000,000. It was not essential it should be located on the west side of the river, he said, but in that immediate vicinity.

SOME NEW CHICAGO BEAUTY SPOTS

Store Building for Northwest Side, Bachelor Hotel for North Side, and Model Flats for the South Side.



The building at the upper left is the new Utesch building at the southwest corner of Sixty-third and Campbell avenue, in Marquette Manor. It is a well constructed building, of an attractive type, and with the land represents, it is stated, an investment of approximately $70,000. It contains three stores and thirteen flats, equipped with Murphy In-a-Dor beds.

The building on the upper right is a high grade bachelor hotel to be erected at the southwest corner of Diversey parkway and Lehmann court, which was designed by Architect Robert C. Berlin. The contracts for its construction have been let. It will front 40 feet on Diversey by 137 on Lehmann court, and is expected to cost about $150,000. It will contain 105 rooms with baths, dressing rooms, and Murphy In-a-Dor beds. The hotel lobby on the first floor will face Diversey and will be finished in marble and mahogany. It is being erected for Leon A. Bentley.

The lower building is the St. Regis apartments, now being erected at 4041-49 Ellis avenue. The building, which will be four stories high and of fireproof construction, will be one of the most attractive apartment buildings on the south side. It will contain seventy-eight apartments, each of which will contain a living room, with kitchenette, disappearing bed, bathroom, and dressing room. Fifteen will have sun parlors, the rest balconies. There will be a café on the first floor. It will be on a lot 100x180 feet, and will cost $225,000. S. W. Straus & Co. have underwritten a bond issue of $125,000 in the form of a 6 per cent serial issue. Roy France is the architect.

BUILDERS BUSY WITH NEW PLANS

Apartment Projects Lead in Announcements—Hat Factory to Go Up.

There was considerable doing in the way of building announcements during the week, the number being above the average for the last few weeks. Apartment buildings predominated, although business and factory buildings and residences were represented.

In the way of factory buildings Elger Bros., the hat manufacturers, are said to be contemplating the erection of a ten story building at the southeast corner of Jackson boulevard and Racine avenue on a lot 143x125 feet to cost about $200,000. The plans are to be prepared by Alfred S. Alschuler.

Sherman T. Cooper plans to improve the remainder of his Forty-seventh street frontage at the southeast corner of Drexel boulevard with a business building much of the same character as the one erected by him on Forty-seventh street between Ellis and Ingleside avenues. It will front 228 feet on Forty-seventh street with a depth of 79 feet, will be three stories high, and will contain fourteen stores and sixty-eight apartments and is expected to cost about $200,000.

Northwest Side Building.

Buildings to cost $100,000 are planned for the northeast corner of Milwaukee and Crawford avenues following the transfer of the property by Richard W. Owen, who took title some time ago, to the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee. The stamps indicated a consideration of $100,000. It was acquired last January from Albert Haentze and wife. It fronts southwest on Milwaukee avenue 116 feet and 75 on Crawford avenue. Jackson Bros. represented both parties, and it is said the purchaser has plans for a building to cover the entire frontage to cost $100,000.

A building to contain forty-eight apartments of three, four, and five rooms and four stores to cost $125,000 is to be erected on 96x200 feet on the east side of Clark street, between St. James and Deming places, by Jacob Grosby as the result of the purchase of the land from Dudley B. Deming of Waterbury, Conn., and Elizabeth Deming of Litchfield, Conn. It is the last of the Deming holdings in that vicinity, which originally comprised eighty acres purchased in 1836. W. D. Kerfoot & Co. were the brokers.

Building Planned.

Benjamin Z. Silverman has purchased the vacant properties at 4124-26 West Twelfth street, 50x125 feet, and 4224-26 West Twelfth street, 50x125 feet, for a reported consideration of $22,500 cash. It is stated the purchaser plans to improve immediately the property at 4124-26 Twelfth street with a building to contain stores, a theater, and offices in the upper floor to cost about $45,000. The other properties, it is stated, will be improved with store and flat buildings. Seymour Marks was the broker and will have charge of the properties.

CHICAGO REALTY BOARD TAKES STEPS FOR NEW HOME

It has been known for some time that the Chicago real estate board was figuring on a new home, but publicity was given to the fact for the first time at the meeting last week, when the board of directors was instructed to negotiate for a lease of the Manierre property at 116-122 North Dearborn street, on the west side of the street, between Washington and Randolph streets. It is proposed on the part of the owners of the property to tear down the present improvements on the lot and erect a three story building, the two upper floors of which are to be occupied by the board.

The property adjoins the Cort theater on the south and is 60x80 feet in extent. According to the terms of the lease under consideration the rent for the first five years will be $8,000 and $9,000 for the second five. The lessor is to supply heat and an electric elevator is to be installed and maintained and operated by the board.

The board has had two propositions under consideration, the other covering the Otis property on Jackson boulevard, north front, between Plymouth place and Dearborn street, which the Otis heirs propose to improve with a new building. The space offered the board was the two upper floors of the building. Considerable opposition developed against the location for the reason it was thought to be too far south.

Much interest is manifested in connection with the proposed trip of the board to New Orleans to attend the annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Exchanges, which will be held in that city March 28 to 31. A special will leave here on the 24th instant and will stop en route at Chattanooga, Atlanta, and Birmingham, and at Vicksburg and Memphis returning. Executive Secretary Herbert A. Cole reports that over fifty reservations already have been made.

HIGINBOTHAM HOMESTEAD LEASED FOR A "TEAROOM."

Of much interest is the announcement that the old Higinbotham homestead at the northwest corner of Michigan avenue and Twenty-ninth street, one of the stately residential landmarks of the avenue, has been leased for catering purposes. The house has been leased by Bryan Lathrop under the Harrison Trust Agreement to Mrs. A. Miner for a term of years at a reported term rent of $30,000. It is stated that Mrs. Miner will remodel the house and occupy it as the "Mansion Tea Room," catering to the automobilist and making a specialty of serving 5 o'clock tea, on the plan of the English roadhouses. Brede & Goodman represented all the parties to the transaction. The house was built nearly twenty-five years ago, being one of the fine examples of the architectural methods of Richardson, the Brookline architect, in this part of the country.

Leases and Loans.

Outside of the big State street building lease to A. G. Spalding & Bros. there was little doing in a leasing way downtown.

An interesting feature in the way of loans was the recording late in the week of a trust deed given by the Central Manufacturing district, the Chicago Junction railway, and the Union Stockyards company to the First Trust and Savings bank to secure a bond issue loan of $10,000,000. Of this amount $3,000,000 is embraced in series A and bears 5 per cent interest, while $7,000,000, comprising series B, bears 6 per cent interest. Of the first named issue $120,000 of the principal is payable March 1, 1917, and each succeeding March 1 to 1941, while the principal in series B is made payable at any time not later than 1941.

The loan is stated to be for the purpose of refunding outstanding incumbrances, for the payment of land comprised in the tract between Ashland and Western avenues on the south side of Thirty-ninth street, as well as for the purpose of developing that territory along the lines followed by the district.

It is stated the loan is in no way connected with the Produce Terminal corporation, which was planned to occupy the territory on Thirty-ninth street between Ashland and Western avenues.

A loan of $250,000, ten years, 5 per cent, was secured by the Kennicott company, manufacturers of water softener appliances, from the Illinois Trust and Savings bank, trustee. The loan is secured by the company's plant at Chicago Heights, comprising property on State street, 337 feet south of Tenth street, east front, 693x507 feet, of which about 150x450 feet is improved with buildings.

S. Yondorf & Co. have made a serial 6 per cent bond issue loan of $80,000 to Fred Becklenberg on the new court apartment building now being erected at 5644-54 Ridge avenue, with thirty-six apartments of 4 and 5 rooms.

In the only downtown leases outside of the one to Spalding & Bros., E. F. Keebler & Co. leased for Ernest Beifeld, representing the Hotel Sherman company, to the Bedford Shirt company the double store at 119-21 West Van Buren street, in the Fort Dearborn Hotel building, for ten years and two months from March 1 at a term rent of $61,000. The lessee company, which has six other stores in the loop, will occupy it with a men's furnishing store.

The same brokers also have leased for Charles Frankenthal to Clarence Martin the store and basement at 222 West South Water sthreet for ten years and three months at a term rent of $23,500. Mr. Martin will occupy the premises for commission business. The same brokers have leased for Wilhelmine Keebler to the Unity Drug company the corner store, northwest corner of Wentworth avenue and Thirty-first street, for ten years from May 1 at a term rent of $24,000.

SEVERAL IMPORTANT DEALS IN VACANT SITES REPORTED.

Several noteworthy transactions in vacant were reported during the week.

Edward F. Swift sold the north 71 feet of his vacant at the northeast corner of Fiftieth street and Greenwood avenue for $21,300, at the rate of $300 a front foot. The property was acquired by Joseph S. Newman of Newman, Poppenhusen & Stern for a client and will be improved with a handsome residence. J. Grafton Parker & Co. were the brokers.

David D. Chidester of Philadelphia has sold through William A. Bond & Co. to James B. Kaine a total frontage of 964 feet on Seventy-fourth street, between Vincennes road and South State street, including the southeast corner of Wentworth avenue and the southeast and southwest corners of Perry avenue. A nominal consideration was given, but the revenue stamps indicate a consideration of $18,000.

The property at the southeast corner of Kedzie and Bryn Mawr avenues, 560x167 feet, west front, has been conveyed by W. E. Clegg to Nathaniel Liverone for an indicated consideration of $16,500, subject to an incumbrance of $10,000 and a part purchase money mortgage of $5,000.

Record was made of the transfer by the Hibernian Banking association, trustee, to Hans P. and Meta Jensen and Niels M. and Marie Steenhill of the property in Spaulding avenue, 126 feet south of Schubert avenue, 338x143 feet, for an indicated consideration of $27,000, according to the revenue stamps on the document.

We will make loans upon well located store or apartment buildings at interest where the margin of security is exceptionally large.

OUTER BUSINESS PROPERTY SLOW

Sale of Harrison and Halsted Streets Leasehold Features Trading.

Reflecting the generally quiet tone of the market there was little doing in outside business property during the week. In fact, with the exception of the sale of the leasehold interest and building at Halsted and Harrison streets there was little outside of the commonplace in the week's business, unless the purchase by the Santa Fe Railroad company of the property at the southwest corner of State and Fifteenth streets is figured in as business property.

The Halsted street deal, which was of a particularly interesting character, covered the property at the northeast corner of Harrison street, 112x152 feet, the leasehold interest in which and the improvements were purchased by Louis Bomash from Alexander W. Hannah and John G. Campbell for a reported consideration of $108,500, subject to an incumbrance of $42,500. The ground is under a lease for ninety-nine years from May 1, 1912, from William L. Newman et al. to the sellers at an average annual rent of $7,450.

More Improvements Planned.

When the sellers leased this property they purchased the improvements, consisting of a three story and basement building, containing ten stores on the ground floor, with offices and lofts in the upper stories, for $55,000. They have since added a 600 seat theater and made other improvements at a reported cost of about $35,000. It is stated that Mr. Bomash expects to make further improvements in the property.

In part payment Mr. Bomash conveyed to John D. Peterson the three story twelve apartment building of eight and nine rooms each at 4925-31 Grand boulevard at a reported consideration of $100,000, subject to an incumbrance of $50,000. The building occupies a lot 100x150 feet and is said to have a gross annual rental of $11,200. Regelin, Jenson & Co. were the brokers representing both parties, and will have charge of the properties.

Other Deals of Week.

The property in Vincennes road, 198 feet north of Seventy-fourth street, lot 105 feet, east front, to Yale avenue, with store and flat improvements, has been sold by J. W. Dowd to Walter L. Gaines for an indicated consideration of $49,000, subject to an incumbrance of $34,000.

There was filed for record the transfer by the Lake Street Manufacturing block to Emil Rosenthal of the property at the northwest corner of Lake and Peoria streets, 200x150 feet, with eight story brick manufacturing block, a consideration of $500 being given, subject to an incumbrance of $146,242.

GATES HOMESTEAD BOUGHT BY KINDERGARTEN COLLEGE.

Record was made of the sale by Mrs. Julia Spades Fleming and husband to the National Kindergarten college of the property at 2938-54 Michigan avenue, comprising the old John W. Gates homestead and the residence property adjoining on the south. The Gates house is a large three story structure containing twenty-six rooms, while the dwelling on the south contains twelve rooms. The two occupy a lot 174x179 feet, and a reported consideration of $105,000 was paid for the properties. The properties have been occupied by the college for a considerable time and were acquired by the late Michael Spades, the father of Mrs. Fleming, several years ago.

SMYTH PROPERTY FOR SALE AT AUCTION NEXT FRIDAY.

In pursuance of a decree in partition thirteen parcels of property belonging to five of the heirs of the late John M. Smyth, the west side merchant, will be offered at partition sale at the auction room of the Chicago real estate board March 10 next at 11 o'clock in the forenoon. A short time ago the five heirs acquired the interests of the three remaining Smyth heirs, the various transfers in that connection being made matters of record. The properties to be offered do not include the Madison street property occupied by the John M. Smyth company, but they are said to have a total value of approximately $750,000.

SANTA FE ROAD PURCHASES PULLMAN COUCH PROPERTY.

Much interest attached to the purchase by the Santa Fé road of the property at the southwest corner of State and Fifteenth streets. The property, which fronts 100 feet, with a depth of 159 feet, with old frame improvements of no value, was purchased from Julius Kramer, president of the Pullman Couch company, and others, for an indicated consideration of $80,000, subject to an incumbrance of $50,000. Title was taken by the Chicago Title and Trust company, but it was admitted at the offices of the railroad company that the purchase was made in its interest.

$125,000 Sale on South Side and $100,000 Deal on North Side Lead.

Considering the general dullness of the market, apartment house [illegible] made a surprisingly good showing [illegible] number and character of the [illegible] ties comparing favorably with the preceding weeks of the year.

The most important of a number of good sized transactions was the sale by Le Roy F. Harris of Harris, Kusel & Co. [illegible] Benjamin J. Huttner of the [illegible] grade three six apartment [illegible] 4330-44 Grand boulevard, 135 feet [illegible] Forty-sixth street, lot 162x150 [illegible] front, for a reported consideration of $125,000, subject to an incumbrance of $79,000. The buildings are said to have a gross annual rent of about $19,000. [illegible] Trossler was the broker. Two of the buildings were completed last [illegible] and the other will be completed [illegible] April 15. It was practically a cash transaction.

Cambridge Avenue Sale.

A big north side sale covered the property at the southwest corner of Cambridge avenue and Surf street. The lot has a frontage of 88½ feet on Cambridge avenue and 150 feet on Surf street, improved with a building containing eighteen apartments of four, five, six, and seven rooms. It was sold by Thomas and Emma J. Tagney to Samuel [illegible] for a reported consideration of [illegible]. The sale was negotiated by the [illegible] John P. De Voney.

The eighteen flat building, [illegible] corner Judson avenue and [illegible] street, Evanston, lot 100x130 [illegible] sold by William C. Slatts to Richard [illegible] Donnelly for an indicated [illegible] subject to $35,000. Mr. Slatts took from Albert A. Wilbur the six flat [illegible] 421-23 East Forty-fifth street, valued at $30,000, subject to $20,000, and from Elizabeth C. Chase the six flat at [illegible] Oakenwald avenue, valued at [illegible] subject to $13,000. Ballard, [illegible] Whitman were the brokers.

Florida Man Sells Corner.

A notable north side apartment deal reported was the sale by [illegible] Fuller of Clearwater, Fla., to [illegible] Lederer of Lederer Bros., of the [illegible] grade eighteen apartment building [illegible] lot 94x133 feet at the southeast corner [illegible] Sheridan road and Leland avenue [illegible] reported consideration of [illegible]. The purchaser recently [illegible] property at 4720-22 Sheridan road and 4942 Sheridan road. It is stated [illegible] remodeling the building for [illegible] purposes. Krause, Beak & Co. were the brokers.

George J. Kappes sold to Frank B. [illegible] the six flat building on [illegible] ground at 905-07 Winona street [illegible] ported $48,000, subject to incumbrances amounting to $28,000, taking in part payment the store and flat building at [illegible] 12 Wentworth avenue, valued at [illegible] subject to $7,000, which was sold to [illegible] ander Zurackov. O. P. Curran Jr. and Greenebaum & Weinshenker were the brokers.

The property at the southwest corner of Kenmore and Leland avenues, [illegible] 125 feet, east front, with flat improvements, has been sold by John [illegible] to Sarah B. Peterson for an indicated consideration of $40,000, subject to an incumbrance of $25,000.

PLAN TEMPERANCE HOTEL.

It is announced that an option has been secured on the property of J. L. Mc-Keever on Grand boulevard with the purpose of erecting on the property, which has a frontage of about 200 feet, a temperance hotel having 1,000 rooms. The names of the parties behind the project and other details concerning it are withheld, but it is declared the project is being vigorously pushed.

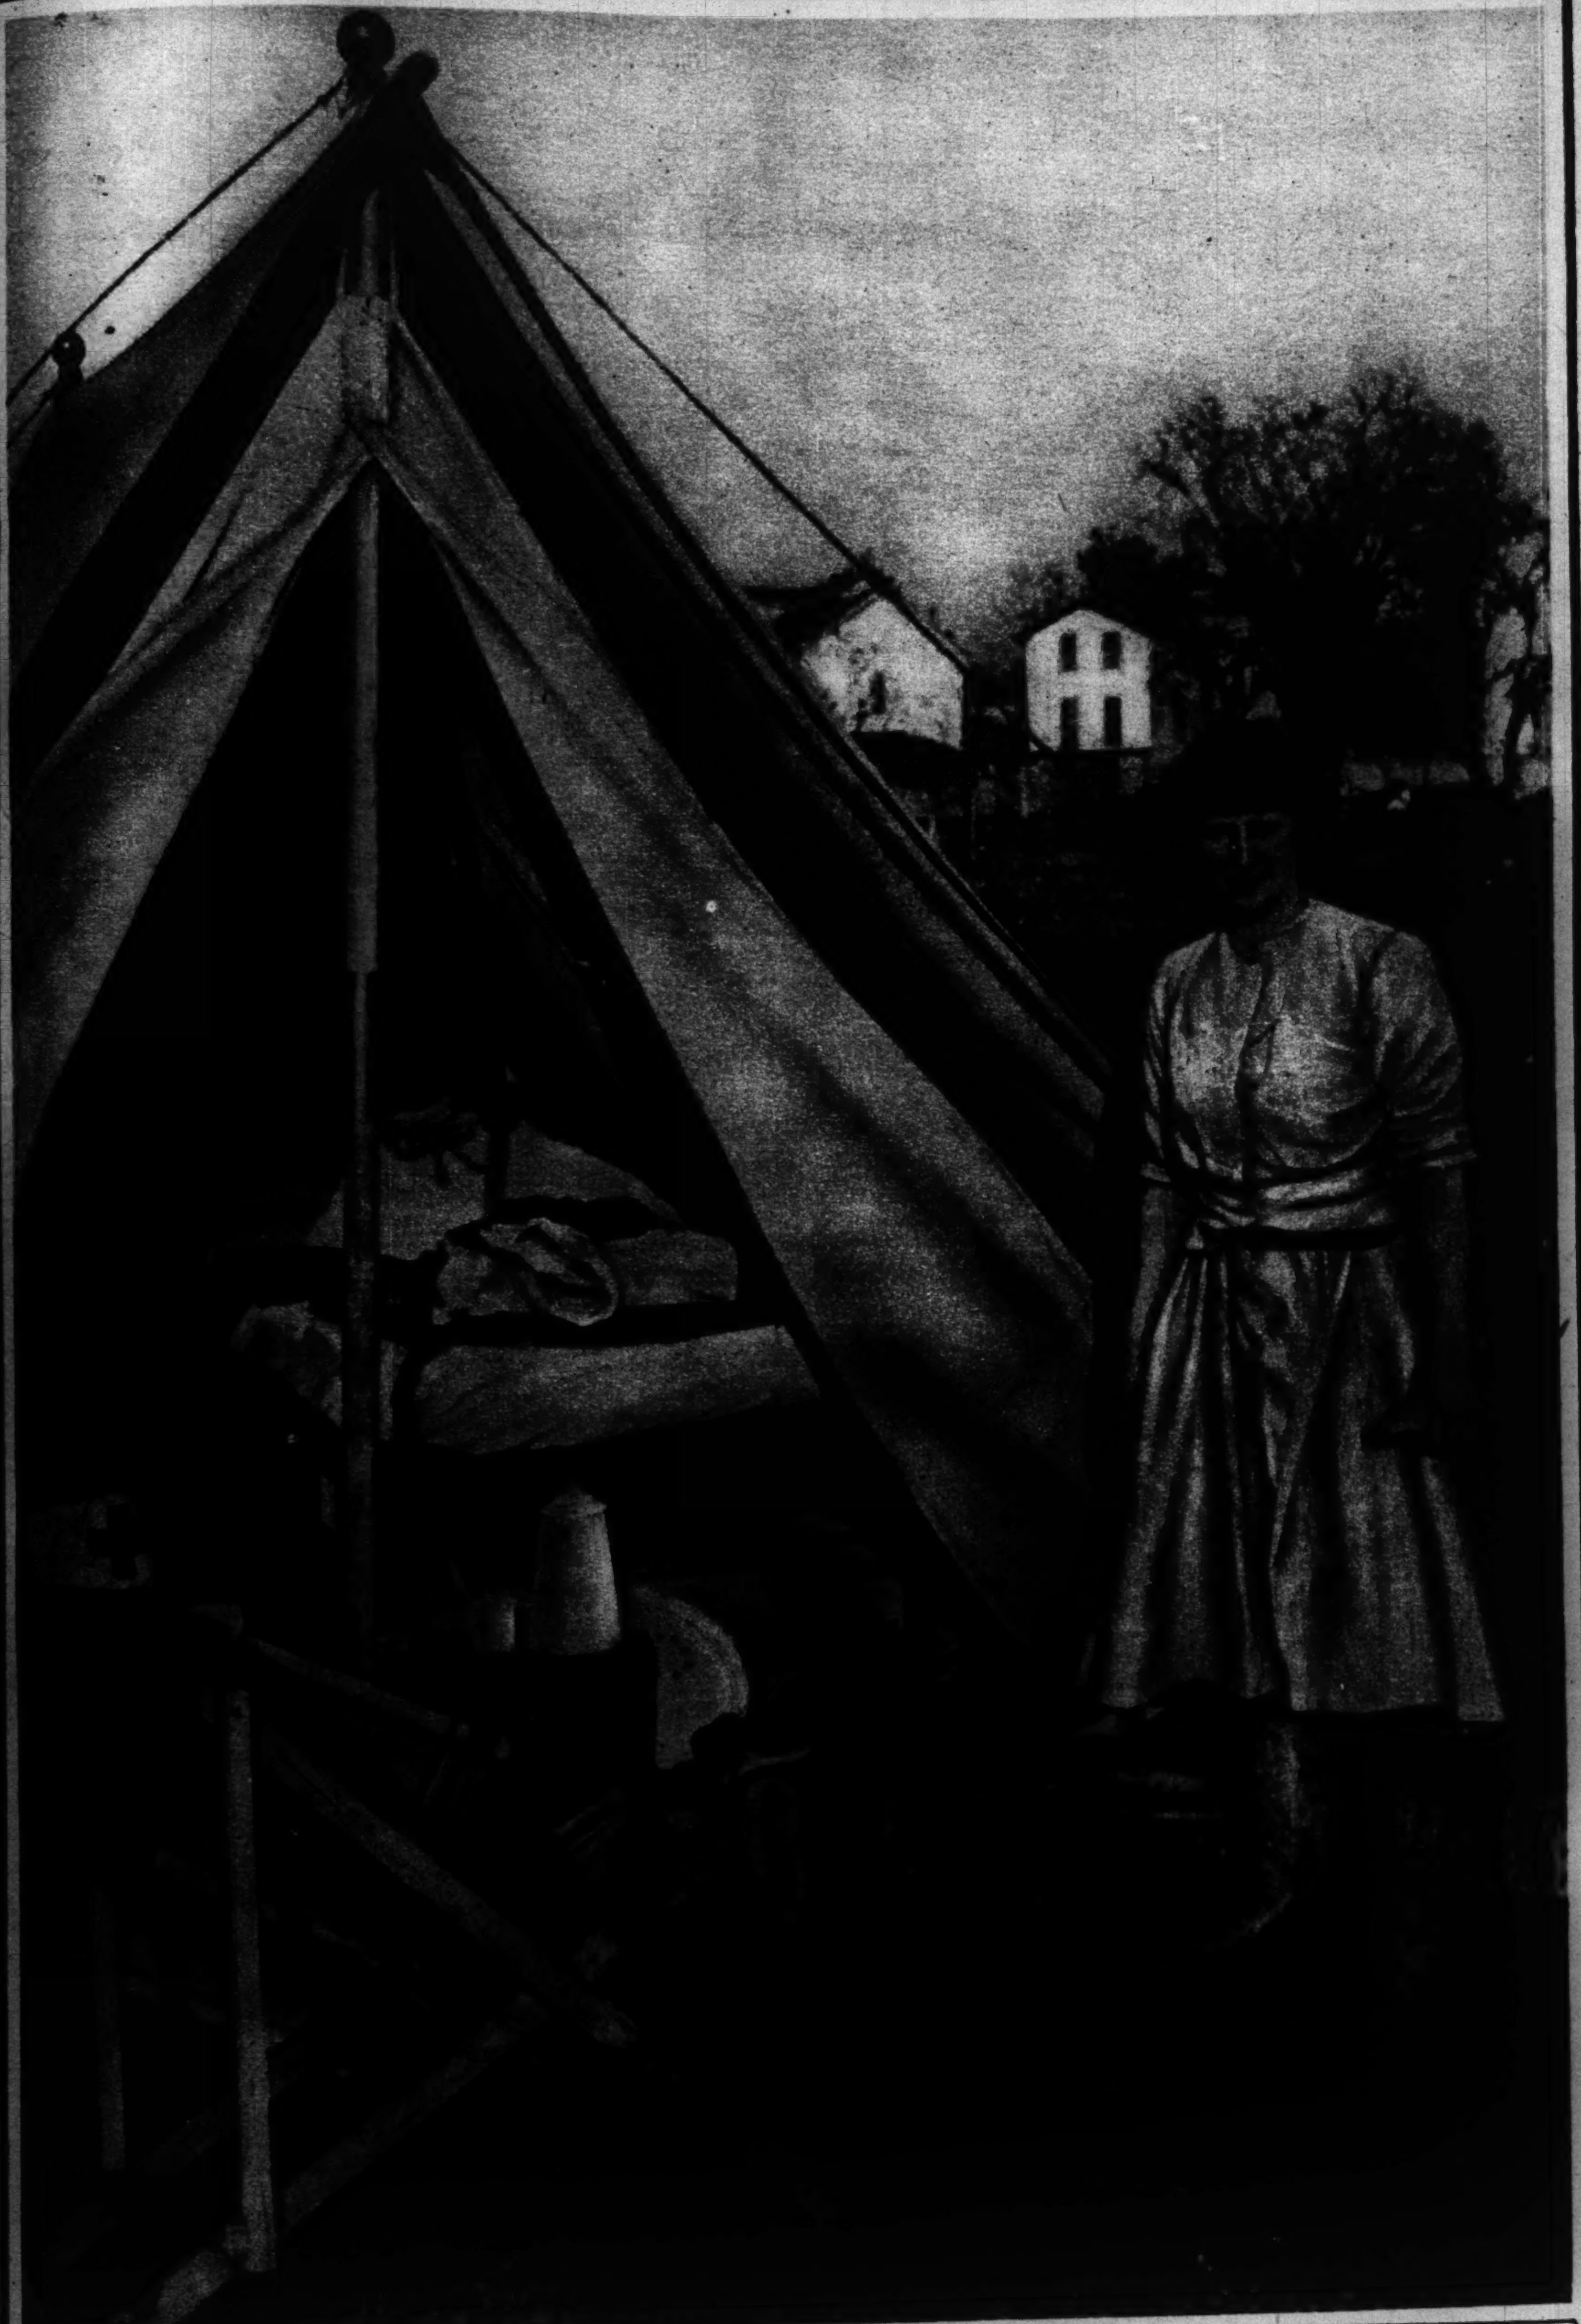
THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

MARCH 5, 1916



IN THE BOOTS OF SERVICE—A British Red Cross nurse, with bobbed hair and high boots, standing before her tent at Saloniki. The nurses prepare their own food, for the cooking of which they carry full equipment. The rainy season in Greece, with its accompanying floods and mud, has made it necessary for all the nurses to wear high boots. That this nurse is not lacking in footgear may be seen by the four pair of slippers and shoes at the foot of her bed.

SEARCHING FOR GERMAN WARSHIPS—A British destroyer beating through a choppy sea. In the center of the destroyer's deck may be seen the deck torpedo tube with its firing apparatus. An officer sits astride the tube when the torpedo is discharged. Toward the bow is seen two of the new British circular, air inflated lifeboats piled one on top of the other. AFTER A SNOWSTORM ON THE HIGH SEAS—British sailors clearing snow from the deck of a British warship after a heavy storm. The British fleet, which is blockading German ports in the North sea, has recently encountered many heavy snowstorms. (Photograph from the London Sphere.)

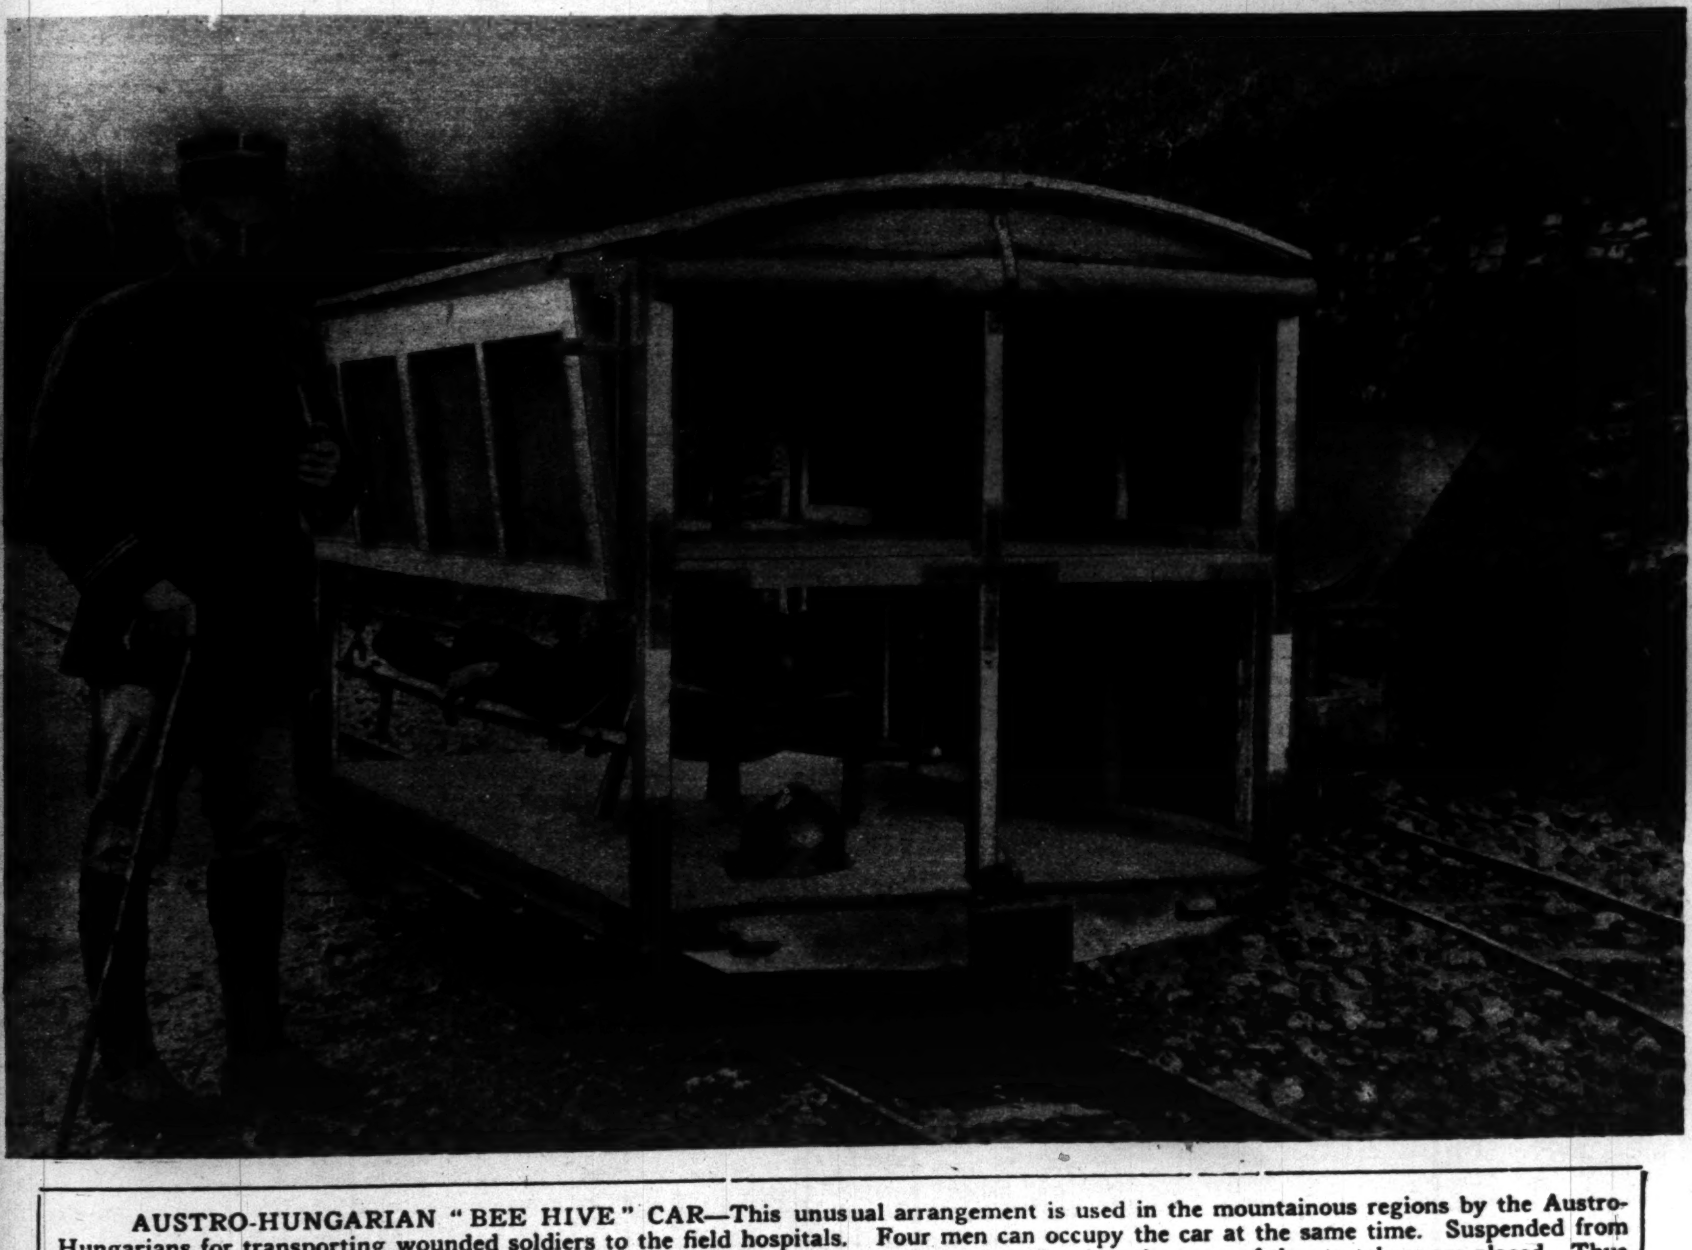
CARDINAL MERCIER ARRIVING IN ROME FOR AN AUDIENCE WITH POPE BENEDICT—Cardinal Desideratus Mercier, primate of Belgium, whose Christmas pastoral letter over a year ago, castigating the Germans, caused great excitement and resulted in his being refused safe conduct through Belgium by the German military authorities, is in Rome to confer with the pope. In the letter to his flock the cardinal advised them to refuse allegiance to the German military government. (Photograph from Le Miroir, Paris.)



AUSTRO-HUNGARIAN "BEE HIVE" CAR—This unusual arrangement is used in the mountainous regions by the Austro-Hungarians for transporting wounded soldiers to the field hospitals. Four men can occupy the car at the same time. Suspended from the roof and over each berth are four springlike carriers. Into the openings of these carriers the arms of the stretchers are placed. Thus the wounded are transported quickly down the passes in such a manner that the jars are almost imperceptible. (Photograph from Underwood & Underwood.)

TABLOID STORY OF THE RISE OF BIG PLANT—In Bridgeport, Conn., the greatest small arms and ammunition [illegible] in the world—the the Remington company, giving work to more than 18,000 men and women, was not in existence last March. There are thirty-eight [illegible] in the plant, spread with each other by five story buildings called “service” buildings, so that the whole mass forms practically one gigantic building. The plants [illegible] give work, when the man, Marcellus Hartley Dodge, whose grandfather, the late Marcellus Hartley, owned both the Remington Arms and U. M. C. Mr. Dodge, [illegible] is only 32 years old, dream to enlarge the enterprise until it outstripped any of its kind in this country. The plants once were devoted almost exclusively to the [illegible]ufacture of rifles and United States has not been able to compete with the European nations in the manufacture of army rifles and ammunition because of the pri[illegible]abor; but the new pl the departments are headed by former officers in the United States army and navy. The full output of the plant will realize $100,000,[illegible]rly.

A FAIR EXCHANGE IS NO ROBBERY—Princess Salm-Salm of Austria, who was interned in England, has been exchanged for a Col. Gordon of the British army, who was made a prisoner of war by the Germans early in the war. Princess Salm-Salm is a first cousin of the king of Spain and is the eldest daughter of Archduke Frederick of Austria. Her husband is Prince Emmanuel Salm-Salm, who holds a commission in the crack Prussian Regiment of Guards. They have two daughters. The princess was for a long time a distinguished figure in English court circles.

The first coffee advertisement ever printed

"In Bartholomew's Lane, on the back side of the old Exchange, there is a drink called 'Coffee', which is a very wholesome, physical drink, having many excellent virtues, fortifies the heart within, helpeth digestion, quickeneth the spirit, maketh the heart lighter, is good against many ills, and is sold both in the morning and at three o'clock in the afternoon."

This novel announcement was printed in the "Publick Advertiser" of London, in the year 1657.

If this writer could enthuse so rapturously over the rank coffee of the days of Cromwell, what would he have said of the superb flavor and aroma of Yuban, and the sense of contentment and well-being which its use imparts? Get a package of Yuban from your grocer today.
